Hull Appeals To 'Outraged Mankind' to Outlaw War

Hails U. S.-British Stand for Peace in Address to Canadians.

Civilization Must Triumph, He Says

By the Associated Press.

Toronto, Canada, Oct. 22.—Cordell Hull, United States Secretary of State, summoned the "outraged conscience of mankind" today to set in motion forces designed to restore world peace.

In an address prepared for delivery at Toronto University, Hull inveighed against "international lawlessness" generally but did not refer specifically to the conflicts in China and Spain to which his remarks obviously were intended to apply.

"There is a grim paradox," he asserted, "in the trends which are so clearly discernible today. As civilization moves to higher and higher levels, as the march of progress opens wider and wider horizons of material and cultural advancement, war becomes more relentlessly cruel, more thorough and effective in its unrestrained savagery."

Visions "Seeds of Hope."

"Yet in this very paradox, in this soul-shattering conflict, there are seeds of hope. No more than a community or nation can the world of today base its existence in part on order and in part on chaos, in part on law and in part on lawlessness.

"And, just as, sooner or later, the outraged conscience of a community or nation sets into motion forces which re-establish order under law, so I firmly believe the outraged conscience of mankind will set in motion forces which will create, in the sphere of international relations, unshakeable order based on law."

Hull pointed an admonitory finger at aggressor nations.

"Modern civilization has survived and has gone ever forward because the violators of order, the breakers of the peace, have always been the exception rather than the rule," he declared.

"Whatever tragedies they have caused during their brief appearances on the stage of history, in the end they have always bowed to the will of that overwhelming majority of mankind which desires a continuing, rather than an inglorious decline, of man's civilized existence."

Receives Degree.

Receiving from the university the honorary degree of doctor of laws, the American official spoke significantly of the peace aims which he said the United States and the British Empire share.

Hull reiterated previous pleas for complete and general respect for international agreements as an indispensable condition to achievement of international order.

Secretary and Mrs. Hull were guests of Ontario's lieutenant governor, Dr. Herbert A. Bruce, and Mrs. Bruce.

On an overnight train trip from Ottawa, where he spent two days, the Secretary of State was accompanied by the governor general, Lord Tweedsmuir.

Television Tested Abroad to Reveal Enemy Strength

London, Oct. 22 (U.P.).—British and French military experts are cooperating in tests of a revolutionary development in aerial warfare—television broadcasts of the enemy's lines from the air, it was revealed tonight. The tests are being conducted at the Royal Air Force airdrome at Hendon, outside London, and a heavy guard has been thrown about the field.

By the United Press.

New Brunswick, N. J., Oct. 22. Margaret Drennan, "the woman in red," was acquitted today by a jury of 11 men and a woman of the murder of Paul Reeves, handsome married mill hand she accused of being the father of her unborn child.

The jurors deliberated three hours and 20 minutes on the fate of the 20-year-old defendant, who charged that Reeves raped her once and attempted to rape her again on the night of September 7, when she went with a gun to his home ostensibly to seek his help after she discovered that she was to become a mother.

In instructing the jury, Judge Adrian Lyon said that "she is guiltless if she killed during an attempted rape."

The girl admitted shooting Reeves,

Chinese Extend Chapei Line to Surround Foe

Americans Confirm Japan's Gains in Drive to Cut Communications.

By the Associated Press.

Shanghai (Saturday) Oct. 23.—A Chinese spokesman declared today Chinese troops, attacking in concert on many fronts in the great battle for the mastery of Shanghai, had taken the initiative from the Japanese and were threatening to surround the Japanese forces.

Determined to save Tazang and their supply lines to Chapei, on the northern border of the International Settlement, large forces of Chinese moved throughout last night into that sector 12 miles to the northwest, where the fiercest battle of the Shanghai war is in progress.

By five different routes the Chinese were converging on Japanese troop bases to the rear of Wentsaopang Creek, and claimed capture of five villages, including a Japanese supply base at the Temple of the Big Black Prince.

Japanese claims of further progress toward Tazang were partly substantiated by American military observers, who said they spotted machine-gun and rifle fire from Chinese defenses on the outskirts of the town.

The bitter fighting with its confusion of attack and counterattack made it impossible for foreign observers to determine the precise situation. The bloody character of the fighting was indicated by the departure for Japan of a hospital ship loaded with wounded, while another arrived to take on additional disabled.

Hitler Sends Spain Peace Plan to Duce

Ribbentrop to Present 'Compromise;' Europe Is Startled.

Mussolini Held Ready for Armistice as Franco Victory Nears.

The European Situation.

Reichsfuehrer Hitler of Germany was reported to have sent Joachim von Ribbentrop, top-ranking Nazi diplomat, to Italy with a plan calling for an armistice in Spain and a compromise settlement of the civil war.

Great Britain and France appealed to Generalissimo Franco to refrain from mass execution among the more than 60,000 Asturian loyalists taken prisoner in the insurgent conquest of northwest Spain.— Page 6.

Ribbentrop in Rome.

By the United Press.

London, Oct. 22.—Diplomatic circles were informed tonight—at a moment when Soviet Russia's stand threatened to prevent a Spanish "volunteers" agreement—that Reichsfuehrer Hitler of Germany has sent his ace diplomat to Italy with a plan for ending the civil war in Spain.

Joachim von Ribbentrop, German Ambassador to London, arrived in Rome at noon after a surprise airplane trip from Berlin, and was said to be carrying a "compromise" proposal whereby all foreign mercenaries will be recalled from Spain and an armistice offered.

The plan, it was reported here, was actually conceived by Premier Mussolini after what he regarded as an Italian "diplomatic victory" within the London nonintervention committee and completion of the Spanish nationalist conquest in northwest Spain.

Diplomatic circles buzzed with the Von Ribbentrop report immediately after the chairman's subcommittee of the nonintervention group ran into a dangerous deadlock over Russia's refusal to agree to an Italo-Franco-British compromise for removing the thousands of foreign mercenaries fighting in Spain.

Russia insisted withdrawals be "proportionate" between the insurgent and loyalist forces, while Italy—with French and British consent—refused to budge from her demand for a "token" man-for-man withdrawal.

The Russian defiance was hardened by rumors Britain has become reconciled to an ultimate insurgent victory in Spain as a result of the crushing defeat suffered by the loyalists in Asturias Province in the last 48 hours.

Ireland Bans Lass Who Kissed Lover As Citizens Gazed

Dundalk, Irish Free State, Oct. 22 (U.P.).—Julia Clarke, a Scottish lass, blue-eyed and brunette, was barred for life from the Irish Free State today for kissing her boy friend in public.

Three members of a local vigilance committee witnessed the tender interlude in a churchyard at the seaside village of Blackrock in County Louth and summoned a policeman.

Julia's boy friend was fined $10.

The case was the first in which section 18 of the 1935 criminal law amendment act known as "De Valera's vice law" was invoked. The law forbids "any act offending modesty or causing scandal or injuring the morals of the community."

Algic Strike Up to Justice Department

Inquiry 'Too Grave' for Its Consideration, U. S. Board Says.

15 of Crew May Face Federal Law Charging Revolt.

The Mutiny Question.

Completion of the permanent organization of the Maritime Commission was announced with Joseph R. Sheehan appointed executive director.—Page 2.

By Edward T. Folliard

A Staff Correspondent.

Baltimore, Md., Oct. 22.—The case of the S. S. Algic, Government-owned freighter, was referred today to the Department of Justice, which will determine whether 15 members of the crew should be prosecuted under a Federal statute covering "revolt and mutiny."

A three-man board of inquiry representing the Bureau of Marine Navigation and Inspection decided that the allegations against the crew were "too grave" to be considered by it.

The bureau, which comes under the Department of Commerce, started a hearing yesterday, but its purpose was merely to determine whether misconduct on the part of members of the crew called for revocation of their certificates.

Yesterday Capt. Joseph Gainard, Yankee skipper of the Algic, and Weston Healy, his first officer, told the board of inquiry how members of the crew went on a sit-down strike at Montevideo, Uruguay, because of a longshoreman's strike ashore, and how they agreed to go to work only after Chairman Joseph P. Kennedy, of the Maritime Commission, had instructed that they be "placed in irons" unless they obeyed orders.

Mate Tells of Murder.

First Mate Healy also testified about the murder of one member of the crew in a waterfront brawl in Jacksonville, Fla., and the drowning of another seaman in an attempt to desert at Victoria, Brazil.

When today's session was convened, it was expected that 15 members of the crew would testify. At the outset, however, Chairman Eugene Carlson reminded the sailors of their constitutional rights and warned that anything they said might be held against them.

William Standard, C. I. O. lawyer from New York, and I. Duke Avnet, attorney for the National Maritime Union, intervened to say that the men would not testify of their own volition, but would give testimony if the board asked for it.

At this juncture, Allan D. Jones, assistant commissioner of the Maritime Commission and legal adviser to the board of inquiry, spoke of the gravity of the accusations against the men.

Case Out of Scope.

The board then went into an executive session to ponder its course of action. The 15 sailors, dressed in their liberty clothes, remained in the hearing room while a seven-alarm fire raged in a building nearby.

Twenty minutes later, the board ended its session and Chairman Carlson made the following statement:

"The board, having heard the statements of witnesses of the oc-

2 Garr Brothers Freed in Slaying Of Gen. Denhardt

Shelbyville, Ky., Oct. 22 (AP).—Roy Garr was acquitted tonight by a jury of 12 farmers of a charge of murdering Brig. Gen. Henry H. Denhardt.

Garr's acquittal followed several hours after his younger brother, Jack, was freed when Judge Charles C. Marshall dismissed the murder charge against him. The third brother, Dr. E. S. Garr, was not tried, his case having been continued to the February term.

Spectators burst into wild applause when the verdict was announced. The news spread rapidly over Shelbyville and hundreds of persons ran to the courthouse, joining throngs there in an impromptu celebration.

Seizure of Deadly 'Elixir' Saves Marylander As U. S. Hastens to Check Toll Already at 29

By Gerald G. Gross

Death in Salisbury, Md., from use of the drug "elixir of sulfanilamide" was narrowly averted yesterday while airplanes and chemists hastily drafted into service failed to save nine lives in other parts of the Nation.

Twenty-nine deaths in the Nation were recorded here last night, although the American Medical Association in Chicago reported a total of 30, with 7 other mortalities yet to be verified. Dr. Morris Fishbein, editor of the A. M. A. Journal, said there is no known antidote for the poison, and symptomatic treatment is all that can be given.

Scores are seriously ill. Seizures of the deadly potion, whose manufacture has been stopped, have been made from San Francisco to New York, from Detroit to San Juan.

After two 1-pint bottles were confiscated at a Salisbury drug store yesterday, investigators checking prescription lists discovered that a 2-ounce vial had been sold to a resident there. Rushing to his home, they found it in a medicine cabinet. Fortunately, only half a teaspoonful had been consumed.

Had the seizure been made a day later, with the patient following the prescribed dosage in the meantime, another life might have been taken, officials declared.

Health Officer George C. Ruhland yesterday warned citizens of Washington against indiscriminate use of the new drug.

"As was pointed out by the Health Department in the spring of the year," he said, "the drug is new and must, therefore, be carefully studied.

"The Department of Health, therefore, renews its warning in the most urgent manner that this drug should not be used except under the immediate supervision of a physician."

From coast to coast, in large cities like New York and backwoods communities of the South, West and Midwest, field agents are desperately fighting against time to save lives of potential victims who have the "elixir" in their medicine cabinets.

With only four of these drug detectives available to cover Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana and two-thirds of Texas, airplanes were chartered yesterday for the sake of speed.

"We have never had an outbreak quite like this," said Campbell, whose office in the south building of the Department of Agriculture, is the nerve center of the life-and-death roundup.

ICC Raises Rail Rates 47 Millions, Roads Ask More; Business Elated

George Horace Lorimer Dead; Edited Saturday Evening Post

Guided Its Rise From Position of Little Known Magazine.

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, Oct. 22.—George Horace Lorimer, editor who guided the Saturday Evening Post in its rise from a little known magazine, died tonight. He was 69.

Lorimer, who retired from the editorship January 1, 1937, had been critically ill with pneumonia since last Thursday at his home in suburban Wyncote.

Lorimer, who had passed the crisis several days ago, suffered a relapse early tonight.

Lorimer's sons, Burford and Graeme, and his wife were at his bedside when he died.

George Horace Lorimer was born in Louisville, Ky., October 6, 1868. His father was the Rev. George Claude Lorimer, a Scot from near Edinburgh, who went to sea when he was 13, came to this country when he was 19, learned the carpenter's trade for livelihood, studied Times Justify Revenue Above Normal, Says Commission.

Carriers to Fight For Further Gains

Hold Boost Inadequate to Meet New Outlays and Rising Prices.

By William V. Nessly.

The Nation's class one railroads yesterday were granted an estimated $47,500,000 increase in their yearly revenue through permission from the Interstate Commerce Commission to increase freight rates on a selected list of commodities.

The long-awaited ruling, a cheering note to business in general, though the roads received it as entirely inadequate, granted most of the rate increases asked by the carriers, but made several exceptions.

A striking paragraph in the commission's decision held that:

"The record amply justifies the conclusion that in the aggregate the railroads are earning very materially less than a reasonable return on the fair value of their carrier property."

Rails Seek Further Rise.

At another point the decision commented that "recognition of this fact that the railroads cannot hope in times of economic depression to earn a normal return carries with it recognition of the complementary principle that they should be given an opportunity to earn more than a normal return in times of prosperity."

Declaring the ruling "a step in the right direction," J. J. Pelley, president of the Association of American railroads, gave voice to the disappointment of railroad circles that all of the increases sought had not been granted, and announced member roads of the association will meet in Chicago on October 28 to discuss means of further increasing the revenues. He said the means considered would include the filing with the ICC of a petition for an additional increase in rates.

Blanket Rise Sought.

"We must have a general increase," William M. Jeffers, president of the Union Pacific System, told the Associated Press at Omaha, Nebr., "a blanket increase in rates, and the railroads can't afford any delay or Government operation may be only a few months away."

Meanwhile, in business and official circles, where there has been deep concern over the railroad situation, reaction to the ruling, as expressed to The Post, could be summarized as follows:

That the prediction by Commissioner Charles D. Mahaffie, ICC member, that suspension of the surcharges last December would

Roosevelt Hints At New Taxes To Aid Farmer

Congress to Get Report on Corporate Profits and Capital Levies.

By the Associated Press.

A statement yesterday by President Roosevelt left the way open for new taxes.

Mr. Roosevelt said at his press conference that it had not been determined whether new levies would be necessary.

Earlier, he had forecast that the Federal budget, out of kilter since 1930, would be balanced in the next fiscal year, which starts July 1, 1938. He said he thought this could be accomplished without additional taxation.

This statement, however, was made prior to discussions in Washington about methods of financing the projected new farm program.

As to the general tax structure, the President was asked yesterday whether any modification is likely in the undistributed corporate profits and the capital gains taxes—levies on which private financial spokesmen have laid part of the blame for recent stock-market declines.

Mr. Roosevelt replied that this was a subject involved in the Treasury's present survey looking toward a general overhaul of the revenue structure.

The results of the study, he said, will be given to Congressional committees next month.

Earlier, Chairman Vinson (Democrat), of Kentucky, of the House Ways and Means Taxation Subcommittee, asserted that "we are going to give the fullest and most careful consideration to the question of retaining, repealing or revising the capital gains tax."

He said also he favored revamping the undistributed profits tax to ease its load on weak corporations which have been running up debts, or deficits.

Progress Made On Corn Loan, Wallace Says

Discusses Aid to '37 Crop With Roosevelt and Bell; Legislation Uncertain.

By the Associated Press.

Prospects for a Government loan on this year's corn crop apparently improved yesterday, but the outlook for new surplus control legislation which President Roosevelt wants to accompany such loans remained uncertain.

Mr. Roosevelt discussed the corn loan proposal at a conference with Secretaries Wallace and Morgenthau and Daniel W. Bell, acting director of the budget.

Wallace told reporters afterward that they were making progress and that the progress was "upward and onward."

Hopes to Build Up Store.

The Secretary of Agriculture previously had urged a corn loan on the grounds that it would bolster prices in the face of this year's large crop and build up a reserve of corn stored under loans as a safeguard against future lean yields.

The American Farm Bureau Federation has requested a loan of 60 cents a bushel. Wallace has said that a loan of about 46 cents a bushel would be comparable to the 9-cent-a-pound advance now being made on cotton.

A press conference statement by President Roosevelt that it had not been decided whether new taxes would be necessary, revived speculation that crop loans may be financed by re-enactment of levies on the processing or manufacture of farm products.

Such taxes, when tied with crop control in the original agriculture adjustment act, were invalidated by the Supreme Court.

9 Die, 21 Hurt as Rocket Train Smashes Into High School Bus

By the Associated Press.

Mason City, Iowa, Oct. 22.—A new streamlined Rock Island Rocket train crashed into a bus loaded with high school students at the southwest city limits here today, killing nine persons and injuring at least 21 others.

The streamliner, northbound from Kansas City to Minneapolis, struck the bus at a crossing near a brick and tile plant here. The students, all from Renwick (Iowa) High School, had been touring Mason City industrial plants all day and were preparing to visit the brick plant.

The dead: Rex Simpson, Renwick, bus driver; Miss Dorothy Ross, Renwick High School English teacher; Don Amossen, Goldfield, Iowa, student; Patsy Turner, student; Lauren Morten, Renwick High School commercial teacher; Norman Eggerth, student; Lowell Kelling, student, and two unidentified.

Three persons riding in the bus were unaccounted for. They are Pauline Durrett, Jimmy Bell and Albert Siemans, students.

Several of the injured were in a critical condition, hospital attendants said.

Vern Mott, Mason City coal dealer, gave the first eyewitness account of the tragedy.

"I heard a whistle and then I saw the streamlined rocket train coming from the south.

"The rocket hit the bus squarely in the center and the big vehicle, of wooden construction, popped open as if it were a watermelon being dropped on the ground.

"Bodies hurled out of the bus, children screamed—it was the most horrible sight I've ever seen.

"It was terrible—I can't understand why that driver did not stop."

Butcher Murders Laughing Lawyer, Turns Gun on Self

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Oct. 22.—Richard Lunk, 58, a butcher, shot and killed a lawyer in a loop office today, beat off an associate who tried to disarm him, and then killed himself.

The slain attorney was Arnold M. Ehrlich, 54. Otto C. Kube, 55, a translator who shared a suite of offices with Ehrlich and Alfred G. Brile, another attorney, was beaten by Lunk, but not seriously hurt.

Kube said Lunk came into the office and showed him a letter about some defaulted bonds. As he was reading the letter, Kube said, Ehrlich stepped into the room and joked with Lunk, who shot the lawyer, grappled with Kube and then killed himself.

Algic Inquiry Is 'Too Grave' For U. S. Board

'Mutiny' Case Is Referred to Justice Department to Investigate.

currences in the harbor of Montevideo and the circumstance surrounding the incidents, and being of the opinion that probable cause has been shown that a violation of the statutes of the United States has taken place which should be brought to the attention of the Department of Justice for such action as that department may desire to take, has concluded to close this investigation and make a report.

"This board is a 'C' board, constituted to inquire into minor happenings relating to discipline on the ship and misconduct or incompetency of men involved. Being of the opinion that the gravity of the charges is beyond the jurisdiction of this board, we have taken the action indicated and close the investigation and will make a report to the Department of Justice."

Asked what Federal statute the board referred to, Carlson had an assistant point to one covering "revolt and mutiny."

File Turned Over.

The file in the case and the affidavits taken from men and officers when the Algic stopped at Jacksonville on the way home were turned over to Assitant District Attorney T. Barton Harrington, of Baltimore. It was stated he would take them to the Department of Justice in Washington, where a decision would be made on future action.

Attorney Avnet denounced the action of the Maritime Commission in taking affidavits from crew members without giving them a chance to consult a lawyer. He also assailed the "scoop" in the Washington Post on the Algic's cruise, saying it was "inspired" and that it was calculated to prejudice the case. The crew sat down at Montevideo, he said, because their lives were endangered by the longshoreman's strike.

Attorney Standard charged that the hearing had been improperly conducted and that the case rightfully belonged to the National Labor Relations Board.

Patrick B. Whalen, leader of the National Maritime Union in this city, said the whole investigation was an attempt to break up his union.

Secretary Roper Accused.

In a statement issued here last night, the National Maritime Union, a C. I. O. affiliate, said Whalen had placed the blame for the Algic inquiry on Secretary of Commerce Roper.

"Mr. Whalen also pointed out," the statement said, "that at no time had the Secretary of Commerce taken an impartial attitude where the seamen were involved, but, on the contrary, had always favored the large shipping interests by his actions.

"It could also be clearly seen throughout the investigation that the investigating board itself did not relish the idea of carrying on this persecution of seamen who were simply trying to protect the democratic and constitutional rights which have been guaranteed them under our present form of government.

"The general attitude of the board seemed to be that they had been ordered to do a job by their superiors and were carrying out those orders. It could also readily be seen that the members of the board were greatly relieved when the investigation terminated. Of course, the maritime workers are fully aware of what forces are behind the scenes and pulling the strings which make these puppets act."

Ring Again Criticized.

Ralph Emerson, legislative representative of the National Maritime Union, added to the criticism previously leveled at Dan S. Ring, labor representative of the Maritime Commission, who, on orders of the commission, congratulated Capt. Gainard on his handling of the Algic during its troublous journey.

Emerson said he could not understand "how any member or employe of any Government agency could take such a partisan attitude and especially in a case of this kind where the captain of the Algic had assumed the role of a strike-breaker during a legitimate labor dispute." It was added in the statement Ring's action, if sanctioned by he Maritime Commission, would place that Government agency "in a very unsavory position from the viewpoint of all organized labor who realize that this is not the policy of the present Administration."

"In issuing the order to the captain of the Algic to have members of the crew put in irons," Emerson continued, "Joseph P. Kennedy, chairman of the Maritime Commission, assumed the role of a dictator in his own right, but it must be clearly pointed out here that there is no statute on our law books and there is no clause in the merchant marine act of 1936, under which the Maritime Commission was created, that would give Mr. Kennedy or any other member of the Maritime Commission the power or right to issue any such order as was issued in the case of the crew of the Algic. This usurping of power with which he has not been vested calls for an investigation of Mr. Kennedy's conduct and will need a lot of explaining."

48 Governors Bid To Labor Parley

By the Associated Press.

Secretary Perkins has invited the Governors or their representatives from all States to participate in a conference on State Labor legislation here.

The meeting, from October 25 to 27, will be the fourth annual conference of that character.

The agenda will include such topics as co-operation between organized labor and State labor departments, age discrimination by employers, safety and health, unemployment and workmen's compensation, occupational diseases, minimum wages and maximum hours and child labor.

U. S. Names Sheehan to Head Permanent Maritime Board

Program Will Be Pushed to Strengthen American Merchant Marine.

Completion of the permanent organization of the Untied States Maritime Commission was announced yesterday by Chairman Joseph P. Kennedy as another step in the program to build up the American merchant marine.

Highlights of the announcement was selection of Joseph R. Sheehan, former administrative coordinator of the SEC, to fill the newly created position of executive director. He will be charged with co-ordination of all divisional, departmental and field activities of the commission, and final preparation of all matters for consideration of the members.

The set-up has been designed to relieve the five commissioners—Kennedy, Admiral Emory S. Land, Edward C. Moran, jr., Admiral Henry A. Wiley and Thomas M. Woodward, leaving them free for exercise of their "administrative, quasi-judicial, regulatory and technical functions."

Classification and certification to the Civil Service Commission, for civil service status, of the employes of the former Emergency Fleet Corporation and the Shipping Board bureau of the Department of Commerce, soon will be completed, it was announced. More than 900 employes of the commission thus will obtain civil service status.

Kennedy made public the following list of divisions and independent sections to function under the commission, with their respective directors or chiefs:

Technical Division, D. S. Brierlay; Finance, D. F. Houlihan; Insurance, B. K. Ogden; Operations and Traffic, M. L. Wilcox; Research, Alfred H. Haag; Legal, Max O'Rell Truitt, general counsel; Administration, J. M. Chambers; Regulation, Lorin C. Nelson; Maritime Personnel, Daniel S. Ring; Information, Harry R. Stringer; Special Studies, Harvey Klemmer.

Meanwhile, the commission made possible an immediate start on construction of the largest merchant ship ever built in American yards, by signing a $15,700,000 contract for building of a liner to replace the giant Leviathan in the North Atlantic trade. The price provides for adjustments on account of changes in costs of labor and materials during construction.

The signing ceremony was participated in by Kennedy, John M. Franklin, president of the United States Lines, which will operate the vessel, and J. B. Woodward, jr., general manager of the Newport News Shipbuilding & Drydock Corporation, which will build it.

In maritime labor circles, at the same time, competition between the C. I. O. and the A. F. of L. for the support of Harry Lundeberg, head of the sailors' union of the Pacific, was revealed. President Green, of the labor federation, has written Lundeberg, offering him practically complete autonomy for his union within the federation, and in addition has raised the possibility of Lundeberg heading a national maritime federation within the A. F. of L. Previously, John L. Lewis' Committee for Industrial Organization had invited Lundeberg to its national unity conference of maritime workers next January.

In the Day's News

CLARENCE JACKSON, Indiana administrator of unemployment compensation under the social security act, revealed last night that a determined attempt is under way to shift the United States Employment Service from Secretary Perkins' Labor Department to the Social Security Board.

Jackson said that he expected most of the State administrators to join in asking Congress to enact a law effecting the change. "There seems to be unanimity of opinion," he said, "that the employment service, closely tied to the success of unemployment compensation, should be controlled by the board."

THE BATTLE of telegrams between Frank E. Gannett, Rochester, N. Y., publisher, and Robert H. Jackson, Assistant Attorney General, struck a new note yesterday when Gannett charged that Jackson was afraid to meet former Federal Judge Albert Levitt in debate.

Gannett, founder of a group he has named the National Committee to Uphold Constitutional Government, asked Jackson in a telegram yesterday whether the latter's refusal to debate Levitt was "based upon the fact that Judge Levitt has a special background of experience and knowledge which makes him too formidable an opponent."

Gannett's original challenge to Jackson had asked the handsome New Yorker to debate Levitt on the question: "Resolved, that President Roosevelt intends and plans to abolish the Supreme Court and to destroy the present constitutional powers and duties of its judges."

In a sarcastic answer, Jackson declined, but offered to debate Levitt himself on the proposition: "Was President Roosevelt justified in sending his court proposal to Congress?"

A live tiger, representing Tammany Hall, was wheeled into the New York political campaign last night, according to an Associated Press dispatch.

The striped beast, legendary symbol of Tammany, paced in a cage mounted on a truck driven from the headquarters of the Progressive Party to a Carnegie Hall political rally for Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia. Maurice Davidson, party chairman, proclaimed:

"At last the Tammany Tiger has been caged. If the people want LaGuardia they can have him. If they want to free the tiger to swallow more tin boxes—well, it's up to them."

ANTI-MONOPOLY legislation, the objective nearest his heart, was pledged yesterday to the voters of Meridian, Idaho, by Senator William E. Borah, Republican, of that State, according to dispatches last night.

"Reasonable assurance" can be given voters now, said Borah, since the President, Vice President, Secretary of the Interior Ickes and Attorney General Cummings have promised Administration-sponsorship to antimonopoly legislation.

"That is the best news I have heard in many, many a political day," said the veteran Idahoan.

Slum Clearance Good Business, Ickes Declares

Low-Cost Housing Boosts Realty Values, Hurts Profiteers, He Says.

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, Oct. 22.—Harold L. Ickes, Secretary of the Interior, told the leaders of the Nation's real estate business tonight that Government subsidy of low-cost housing "is the best investment the country can make, both socially and economically."

In a prepared speech before the thirtieth annual convention of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, Ickes said:

"Let us not forget that profiteers build slums; the people who are condemned to them do not make them."

"Gentlemen, today the devil is pressing for his due," he added after asserting the Nation's slums were a "direct consequence of the days of rip-roaring 'come and get it' when none-too-scrupulous manipulators introduced reprehensible practices into a respectable business."

Hails New USHA.

He predicted low-cost housing plans would "go forward much more smoothly" now under the United States Housing Authority created by the Wagner-Steagall act, as a result of the pioneering work of the PWA.

He contended that wherever the Government has built one of its 27 projects, the effect has been to regenerate real estate values generally.

Holding out the hope that some day private capital will be willing "to go ahead with what the Government is now undertaking," Ickes said he would "lead the happy retreat" of Government from the slum-clearance field.

Defending his stand that low-cost housing must be exempt from some ad valorem taxes in order to provide homes for low-income groups, the speaker asserted:

"America has actually been subsidizing her slums. We have been paying cash premiums on ill-living and bad health. We have been furnishing cash scholarships to educate students in schools of vice and crime."

Realty Business Unhurt.

Ickes set forth that the 27 housing projects in 20 cities have been undertaken without taking away profitable customers from the real estate business.

A Bureau of Labor statistics survey of the building costs of five of them, he said, reported an average cost of a three and one-half room family dwelling at $3,344. The lowest was in Montgomery, Ala., at $2,401, and the highest in Cleveland at $3,630.

Figuring in a 45 per cent capital subsidy, he reported that the average rent per room in 20 projects now operating was $5.32.

"If my premises are correct," he summed up, "then the inescapable conclusion is that the permanent slum clearance program that has just been undertaken by the Government, if properly carried out, will prove to be the greatest possible boon to real estate interests wherever that program is put into effect."

Gov. Earle's Party In Forced Landing

Pittsburgh, Oct. 22 (U.P.).—Three planes, carrying Gov. and Mrs. George H. Earle, of Pennsylvania, and a party of friends to Ohio, were forced down by rain and fog in three different sections of the State today. No one was injured. The party was en route to Sandusky, Ohio, for a week-end visit, from Harrisburg.

The Governor and his wife, following a long-established custom, were flying in separate planes. They have explained that in case of a fatal accident they did not wish their children to be left parentless. They planned to continue to Sandusky by train.

Hopkins Plans Own Survey of Needy Jobless

Order for Count by WPA Surprises Organizers of Postcard Census.

By the Associated Press.

Harry L. Hopkins, WPA administrator, sprang a surprise yesterday by ordering a check-up on the number of needy unemployed—a survey which will rival the forthcoming unemployment census ordered by Congress.

Hopkins did not explain why he chose to have the study made just when John D. Biggers, Toledo manufacturer drafted by the Government, is preparing for a Nation-wide nose-count of the jobless next month.

However, it was noted that if the Biggers census gave rise to any criticism of relief policies, Hopkins would be in a position to check its results against figures of his own. An aide of Hopkins said he believed the WPA survey would be "just a check to see that nobody's left out in the cold."

The Hopkins announcement came as a surprise to Biggers, although the two men have been conferring on the Congressional census. "It is new to me," Biggers said, "and I don't see that we can have any valid objection to anybody getting such figures as they choose in their own way."

The WPA survey will closely parallel the Biggers postcard census, though the latter is designed to cover all unemployed, and the Hopkins study only the needy.

Biggers plans to send out cards to all citizens November 16 and to compile the results November 20. Hopkins asked his 48 State directors to submit their conclusions to him between November 10 and November 20.

"I want the total number of people in America who are out of work and in need," Hopkins told his assistants at a closed meeting, "and I want it by counties."

sale houses, drug stores, homes and wherever else it may be. There is time to decide later what is causing the deaths, whether it is the diethylene glycol or the sulfanilamide or a combination of both."

Since Monday, when the first deaths were reported, seizures have been made in Tulsa, New York, San Francisco, Jackson, Miss., San Juan, Detroit, Fort Worth and Alton, Ill., among other cities. Eleven bottles were taken in Richmond, Va.

Dr. J. J. Durrett, chief of the bureau's drug division and Campbell's chief assistant in spreading the dragnet, estimated that the chemical preparation has gone into more than 1,000 different places since it was placed on the market about six weeks ago.

Need for New Drug Laws Cited.

Some of the victims bought the compound on their druggists' recommendation and others by prescription of their physicians, who were ignorant of the "medicine's" lethal properties.

Calling attention to the need for drastic tightening up of Federal food and drug laws, toward which numerous bills have been introduced, but none enacted, Bureau Chief Campbell and Dr. Durrett cited the following handicaps in the present emergency:

Intervention of the Food and Drug Administration is justified only because of alleged misbranding, the "elixir" on the label being challenged, and not because the liquid contains poison.

Even though the preparation is known to have death-dealing properties, the Federal Government cannot legally make a seizure unless it has been shipped across a State line.

Confiscation of a bottle whose seal has been broken cannot be made.

Court-Martial Is Ordered for Gen. Reisinger

Paymaster for Marines to Face Trial Over Travel Accounts.

Brig. Gen. Harold C. Reisinger, Marine Corps paymaster, will appear before a general court-martial board Monday at the Marine Barracks, Quantico, Va., to face a charge of "conduct to the prejudice of good order and discipline." It was announced yesterday.

In stating the accusation against Gen. Reisinger, that of "making erroneous reports in connection with his individual official travel accounts," officials of the Navy Department said that the general accounting officers at Marine Corps headquarters were not implicated.

Sources would not reveal the exact amount involved, but indications were that it was small.

Secretary Swanson and Rear Admiral Gilbert J. Rowcliff, judge advocate general, announced the court-martial would take place at Quantico on the twenty-fifth or shortly thereafter.

It is alleged that Gen. Reisinger requested larger sums of money for his official inspection trips than he really required.

Well Known Here.

Maj. Gen. James C. Breckinridge, commanding officer at Quantico, is president of the General Court-Martial Board. Other members are Brig. Gen. Randolph C. Berkley, of the Naval Examining Board at Marine Corps Headquarters; Brig. Gen. Douglas C. McDougal, commanding the Marine Barracks at Paris Island, S. C.; Brig. Gen. Frederick L. Bradman, president of the Marine Corps Equipment Board at Quantico; Brig. Gen. Richard P. Williams, commanding the First Brigade of the Fleet Marine Corps at Quantico; Brig. Gen. James T. Buttrick, commandant of the Marine Corps School at Quantico, and Capt. John P. Hatch, Supply Corps, U. S. N., general inspector of the Supply Corps for the East Coast and attached to the Bureau of Supplies and Accounts, Navy Department.

Judge advocate of the court-martial will be Maj. Joseph W. Knighton, U. S. M. C.

Began Service 1898.

He was appointed to his present office March 1, 1936, by President Roosevelt and Secretary Swanson, for four years.

Gen. Reisinger began his service as paymaster clerk in the Navy in September, 1898, but resigned in December of that year. In February, 1900, he was appointed a second lieutenant in the Marine Corps. He has been in service continuously since that time, and in 1926 he joined the paymaster's department of the Marine Corps.

Gen. Reisinger has served at the Philippines, Guam, Cuba and Panama. He became a lieutenant colonel and assistant paymaster in 1920.

This court-martial will mark the first time the Marine Corps has charged a high-ranking officer with a breach of military discipline since Maj. Gen. Smedley D. Butler, now retired, was accused of making derogatory remarks about Premier Mussolini. Butler never faced trial, however.

Blonde Admits Filing Dummy Radio Request

Girl Acted for Her Uncle, FCC Disbarment Hearing Reveals.

A pretty blonde Home Owners' Loan Corporation clerk took the witness stand before the Federal Communications Commission yesterday, and told how she had filed an application for a radio station at Pawtucket, R. I., although she never had any intention of going into the radio field.

The witness was Geraldine Alberghane, of Boston. She nervously told the commissioners, who are hearing disbarment proceedings against Paul Segal and George Smith, radio attorneys, charged with setting up dummy corporations, that she signed the application at the request of her uncle.

Before she began her testimony, Miss Alberghane was granted immunity by the commission.

Called Pawtucket Residence.

In the application, she admitted, she had said her residence was Pawtucket, while actually it was Boston.

She also stated, at the time of the application's filing, that she had $35,000, whereas, she testified she had only a small savings account. The application was made as a favor for W. Paul Oury, the uncle, she said, and she received nothing for it.

Next witness was S. George Webb, who was granted a permit to build a radio station at Newport, R. I.

After getting the application, Webb testified, under questioning by Special Commission Counsel Samuel Kaufman, he found that he would be unable to build the station.

At this point, he said, Oury became interested in the project, and the firm of Segal & Smith was engaged to apply for an extension to build the station under the license granted.

Planned to Move Station.

It was intended, the witness asserted, to move the station from Newport to Pawtucket, but while the application was pending an application was filed by the Bay State Co., of Pawtucket. Realizing that if the Bay State firm were formed, it would be impossible to move the station to Pawtucket, the Alberghane application was filed, the witness said.

Zenda Casto, a ladies' shop operator in Charleston, W. Va., testified she gave her brother, Richard Casto, $10,000 with which to apply for a radio station. After he consulted with Segal & Smith, she said, he found $15,000 more would be necessary, so she gave him $15,000.

The money was to back the station which he sought to build.

Last witness yesterday was Mary Belle Anthony, former FCC docket clerk, who said she had allowed Smith to put copies of depositions in the files.

Suicide Is Ruling On 2 Drownings In Potomac River

Certificates of suicide were issued yesterday by Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald in the deaths of two men who were drowned in the Potomac River Thursday night and yesterday morning.

Delphis Cox, 41, of 141 Capon street, Alexandria, was found by three Alexandria firemen on the Washington side of the Potomac three hours after he walked to the Cameron street dock in Alexandria, requested drivers of automobiles parked there to turn on their lights, and leaped into the water. They reported he swam far out into the river before he disappeared.

At first not identified, he was taken to the Morgue, where Edgar Collins, Alexandria barber, identified him yesterday afternoon. The firemen who pulled his body from the river were Steve Davis, 120 South Royal street; Rodger Welker, 423 King street, and Paul Jacobs, 428 South Royal street.

His wife, who is visiting in Asheville, N. C., has been notified.

Dr. William H. Maguire, 46, of Walpole, Mass., dentist reported missing from his home a week, was pulled from the Tidal Basin at 6:45 a. m. yesterday by Luck Goldberg, of 920 Farragut street northwest, who found the floating body while he was fishing. Police said he had been dead about two hours.

Chinese Kidnapers Ask $14,500 for U. S. Priest

Peiping, Oct. 22 (AP).—A Chinese altar boy, kidnaped October 5, with the Rev. Gerard A. Donovan, has returned to Mukden with a note from the bandit abductors demanding 50,000 Chinese dollars (about $14,500) for the Catholic missionary's release, dispatches from Mukden said today. (Father Donovan earlier had been reported released.)

The altar boy was released near Tsingyuan, 100 miles east of Mukden, Manchukuo. He reported the missionary was well treated but improper food aggravated a chronic stomach ailment. Father Donovan, formerly of Pittsburgh, Pa., was kidnaped from the Maryknoll Catholic Mission at Fushun by five bandits. Fushun is 30 miles east of Mukden.

Snite Better, Plans Shift To Smaller 'Iron Lung'

Miami Beach, Fla., Oct. 22 (AP).—Fred B. Snite, jr., who traveled from China in an "iron lung" and was brought here Wednesday from Chicago, has improved to such an extent that he may be shifted to a smaller respirator this week-end. His father said today. The new apparatus will cover only his chest. At present the 27-year-old infantile paralysis victim is encased up to his neck.

Washingtonians who drew tickets on Irish Hospital Sweepstakes entries yesterday. Top, most of the family of Fritz Hoffman, 616 North Carolina avenue southeast, a movie operator, whose horse is Third Hazard. Back row, left to right, are Carl Hoffman, Mrs. Agnes Hoffman, June Hoffman and Vincent Hoffman. Front, Mary Hoffman, Mr. Hoffman holding John (Sonny) Hoffman, Mrs. Hoffman and Mrs. Sweeney, mother of Mrs. Hoffman. Bottom, left to right, are Charles F. Russell, Quartermaster's Department, U. S. Army, who drew Irish Dream; C. P. Bryant, of the National Park Service, near relation; Mr. and Mrs. J. Leslie Saunders, 627 King street, Alexandria, Archduke, and Jeanette Lemmer and her mother, Mrs. Sadie Lemmer, Kettering.

The big pot of gold at the end of the Irish Hospital Sweepstakes tipped in this direction again yesterday, spilling riches and promises of greater riches into the laps of seven Washingtonians and ten of their Virginia and Maryland neighbors.

According to the Associated Press, 764 Americans yesterday drew tickets worth $1,920 each—a total of $1,465,880. Thirty-four Americans drew tickets on the five favorites—Epigram, Near Relation, Solar Bear, Harewood, and Maranta.

Ten residual prizes, totaling approximately $41,378, and 1,600 consolation awards of $500 each will be drawn from the drum today.

To Mrs. Oscar Connor, night employe of the Government Printing Office, and Charles P. Bryant, 43-year-old bachelor, who lives at 473 H street southwest, the most hope was given. Mrs. Connor holds the ticket on Epigram, first favorite. Bryant holds Near Relation, second choice. Both are sure to get $1,920 and have excellent chances for the purses, for holders of tickets on horses finishing first, second or third in the Cesarewitch next Wednesday these prizes are approximately $150,000, $75,000 and $50,000, respectively.

Mrs. Connor went to work last night as usual, refusing to count on $150,000 until she sees it. Bryant, a labor foreman with National Capital Parks, declared that if Near Relation comes in a winner he will build himself a "swell house."

Other "holders of horses," in the District—each of whom will receive $1,920, regardless of how the race comes out are:

Fritz Hoffman, 616 North Carolina avenue southeast, whose horse is Third Hazard. Hoffman, an operator for a movie company, has ten children. There was a scramble at his home yesterday to determine whether he or Mrs. Hoffman held the winning ticket. Hoffman had only one ticket, while his wife had one and a tenth interest in another. A sick grandchild kept them from being as elated as they had imagined they would be when they bought their numbers.

Jeannette Lemmer, 1539 Fifth street northwest, who holds Kettering in partnership with her mother, Mrs. H. A. Lemmer. Unemployed at the time, Miss Lemmer will be tickled to get the amount "whatever it is." It was the third sweeps ticket she had ever purchased.

Col. Robert J. Foster, U. S. A., who purchased his ticket for "Miss Mufflit Imp."—the cat which walked in on the Fosters down in Panama in 1928 and which they have taken with them to subsequent posts in New York, Omaha, Fort Bliss, and Washington. Col. Foster, who is an official at the Inter-American Horse Show this week, said the "imp" is for "imported." "We imported her from Panama. She's just a stray cat, but you know she has something or we wouldn't have carted her around with us all this time," he said last night. Miss Mufflit's horse is Fair Lead.

Miss Mufflit, Imp., who holds a sweepstakes ticket on Fair Lead. She is owned by Col. Robert J. Foster, U. S. A., who brought her from Panama and says the Imp. means "imported."

Oscar V. Keele, 2111 Fourth street northeast, who owns a ticket on Dytcheley, in partnership with a friend he calls "Fisher," but whose first name he had forgotten. Keele's part of any winnings will go mostly to his four daughters. He is employed at the National Capital Press and is a consistent tickets buyer. He had several other tickets this time, and only one of them was in partnership.

Charles F. Russell, 2443 Eighteenth street northwest, for whom Irish Dream was drawn. Russell is employed in the Army Quartermaster's Department and was working yesterday at Fort Myer. He believes that since he is Irish, his luck will continue.

Virginia and Maryland winners and their horses are: "Maryland and Virginia," 515 Fillmore street, Arlington, Little Wyvis; L. C. Opdyke, 107 West Washington avenue, Washington, also Little Wyvis; Toots Brill and Leslie Saunders, 629 Laing street, Alexandria, Archduke; Joseph R. Lynch, North East, Md., Fedor; Cricket Wells, Lonaconing, Md., Fox Chase; J. S. Easterly, Lebanon, Va., Paladin; E. E. Doswell, Richmond, Atout Royal; "Go Boy," 304 South Addison street, Richmond, Lagopede; T. F. Downs, Richmond, Port Sunlight; R. J. Muffin, Norfolk, Earth Stopper.

As for the matter of taxes the winners will have to pay—the Treasury Department did some unofficial figuring yesterday and said around $64,000 would have to come out of any $150,000 prizes won, but that the $2,000 prizes would net the Government only around $50.

"If the Government is going to take out taxes, I can't do anything about it and I wouldn't worry a bit about it," Prospective Winner Bryant declared.

Ross Case Turns To Underworld

Chicago, Oct. 22 (AP).—Investigation of the kidnaping of Charles S. Ross veered into the underworld today as officials became convinced abduction of the retired manufacturer and collection of a $50,000 ransom were engineered by Chicago hoodlums.

Discovery of a ransom bill here supported the premise Chicago racketeers were responsible for the crime. Federal agents concentrated on the tedious task of tracing the $10 note.

Mrs. Roosevelt Appears Before Harlem Audience

New York, Oct. 22 (AP).—Making a public address in Harlem for the first time, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt appeared tonight before an audience of 3,500 colored persons who jammed the Mother African Methodist Zion Church. The meeting, at which Mayor Fiorello La Guardia also appeared, was sponsored by a group of colored business and professional women to aid a magazine. The First Lady was accompanied by Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, jr., wife of the Secretary of the Treasury.

The votes were cast by members of the Committee for Industrial Organization Union. Workers on the day shift were scheduled to ballot tonight.

Husky Women Police Considered in Tokyo

Tokyo, Oct. 22 (AP).—The metropolitan police board is considering recruiting women to replace policemen called for military duty. The board believes the "strongest of the weaker sex" would be more useful than "the weakest of the stronger sex." Women already are driving taxis, operating gasoline stations and acting as conductors on buses.

Truman Condemns Bondholder Group

By the Associated Press.

Senator Truman (Democrat), of Missouri, declared yesterday that the Stedman Bondholders Committee, an organization representing creditors of the Missouri Pacific Railroad, had failed to co-operate with the Senate Railroad Finance Committee.

Acting Chairman Truman said:

"For more than 30 days the investigators for the Wheeler subcommittee have endeavored to obtain access to certain files of the Stedman Bondholders Committee in the Missouri Pacific reorganization.

The Senate committee has been investigating two proposals for reorganization of the Missouri Pacific system.

Citizens' Pleas Cause Most of D. C. Tax Rise

Welfare, School, Fire and Police Costs Mount as Others Decline.

Following is the concluding article in a series on the District fiscal problem. Auditor Daniel J. Donovan agreed to write it but his arduous duties prevented him. All citizens who may be affected by the new tax program are urged to send in their ballots at once to The Washington Post so they may be submitted to the Commissioners.

By James D. Secrest.

Expanded public welfare activities, new schools, and increases in the number of police and firemen, all of which have been urged by civic or trade organizations, constitute the answer to the question: "Why are new taxes necessary?"

The District tax committee today will present to the commissioners a mass of tabulated budget figures which tell an interesting story of departmental growth and projected extensions.

In 1920 the District government had a budget of $17,378,359. Its estimates for next year amount to $50,000,000. The projected budget for 1945, seven years hence, is more than $56,000,000.

The tables disclose that many municipal departments, probably a majority, are operating with a smaller budget this year than they did in 1932.

New Activities Raise Costs.

Yet the total appropriations have gone up several millions of dollars because of the inauguration of the public assistance division and social security programs since 1932, the building of new schools, and the broadening of the health department's fight against disease.

All of these are admittedly laudable in purpose. Most of them have been demanded before the Commissioners and before Congressional committees, not by the District heads, but by spokesmen for various civic organizations.

Several years ago citizens were clamoring for limitation of portable schools. As a consequence, a program of school construction was started. With each new school the operating cost of the school system became permanently larger.

Thus the appropriation for schools has jumped from a little more than $3,500,000 in 1920 to approximately $12,000,000 in the current year.

Welfare Expenses Treble.

Public welfare costs, largely because of the adoption of direct relief policies, have more than trebled.

Police and fire department expenses, while relatively stagnant during the last two years, have risen by approximately $2,000,000 and $1,750,000, respectively, since 1920.

And demands are now being made by local organizations that the Metropolitan Police Department be given another 100 men or so and that the firemen be placed on a five-day week.

These four departments account for by far the greater share of increases in the District budget during the last 18 years. Other departmental step-ups have been relatively small.

A District tax committee that preceded the present group, after an exhaustive analysis of District expenses, found that:

"If all other municipal items, except schools, welfare, police, and fire, were to continue to increase at the rate they did from 1920 to 1936, their increase would be $200,000 per year total; if they were all decreased at the same rate, the annual saving would be only $200, out of a budget of $47,000,000. . . .

"It seems, therefore, that any attempt to decrease the maintenance and operating costs of the District in any considerable figure must of necessity come from a reduction of such costs in respect to the schools, public welfare, police and fire."

Local Woman Reported Missing

Mrs. Margaret M. Reeves, 32, of 1301 Fifteenth street northwest, who failed to meet her husband, P. W. Reeves after phoning him from Union Station October 8. Reeves narrowly missed death when the liner President Hoover was bombed off the Chinese coast on September 3. A bomb passed through his cabin a few seconds after he had fled below decks. He is the secretary to former Representative Ralph Eltse, of California. He asked police to send a lookout for her last night.

Elgen Believes Utilities Tax Boost Would 'Bleed the Public'

Consumers Would Be Ones to Suffer, Says P. U. C. Head, Citing Court Ruling; Warns of 'Camouflage' in Proposal for $700,000 Increase.

Riley E. Elgen, chairman of the Public Utilities Commission, yesterday declared his opposition to the suggested increase in taxes on local public utilities on the ground the levy would come out of the pockets of the consumers rather than the corporations.

The District tax committee is considering an increase in the utility taxes of about $700,000, it is understood. The utilities now pay about $2,300,000 a year.

"I wouldn't object at all to an increase in public utility taxes if the money came out of the profits of the utilities," Elgen said, "but it's a camouflage to pretend to tax the utilities when you are only using them as a collecting agency to bleed the public."

Cites Court Ruling.

Elgen, who opposed any increase in utility taxes before the House sub-committee on District revenue, explained that, by court ruling, taxes are handled as operating expenses by public utilities.

As the rates of return are fixed by the commission for the three money-making local utilities, any raise in taxes would merely add to the operating costs of the corporation without reducing the company's profits.

The only utility that might suffer from an increase in taxes, Elgen said, would be the Capital Transit Co., which for some years has failed to earn a resonable rate of return.

Even there, however, the public might have to pay the bill in higher fares.

Despite protests against the business privilege tax of two-fifths of 1 per cent, it was pointed out, the utilities now pay much higher levies on their receipts.

The Capital Transit Co. pays 4 per cent on gross receipts from all sources except bus operations and two taxes on buses, one of 8 mills per mile of operation and the other $12 per bus under the new motor vehicle weight tax.

The Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. pays 4 per cent on gross operating revenue.

The Potomac Electric Power Co. pays 4 per cent on gross operating revenue, less the cost of raw material used in generation.

The Washington Gas Light Co. pays 5 per cent on gross operating revenue, less cost of raw material used in manufacture.

Elgen said about 13 cents of every dollar paid by consumers to the electric company now goes to taxes and about 10 per cent of all payments to the gas company.

Shell in Boot Fits Ross Gun, Expert Holds

Test Bullet Fired to Link Davidson Slaying Suspect to Cartridge.

A mass of circumstantial evidence against Walter L. Ross, 18-year-old Quantico Marine accused in the murder of Elmer J. Davidson, United States Chamber of Commerce attorney, was strengthened last night by ballistics tests reportedly revealing his gun as the weapon which fired the shell found in his boot.

Lieut. John Fowler, Metropolitan Police ballistics expert, after careful examination, reported to Detective Chief B. W. Thompson that a shell found in Ross' boot was fired by a revolver found in the suspect's home in Aberdeen, Md. Markings on the shell compared identically to markings on a test bullet fired from the gun, Lieut. Fowler reported.

The revolver tested yesterday by Lieut. Fowler was recovered by McDermott after Ross allegedly told him where it could be found. Later, an exploded shell was discovered in a boot among Ross' belongings at the Marine post.

Meanwhile, a warrant charging Ross with the murder was issued yesterday by Virginia authorities. Sergt. E. J. McDermott, who arrested the marine, said the warrant would not be served until military authorities have acted.

A Marine court is expected to meet today or tomorrow to decide whether Ross will be turned over to police or held as a military prisoner. No charges have been placed against him.

Claiming self-defense—that Davidson attacked him with a knife—Ross yesterday told Sergt. McDermott the elderly attorney was stabbed during a scuffle.

State Closes Case Against Montague

By the Associated Press.

Elizabethtown, N. Y., Oct. 22.—A State trooper's testimony that he saw John Montague, Hollywood golfer, with a confessed participant in a $700 roadhouse holdup soon after the crime climaxed today the State's evidence in the 7-year-old robbery.

District Attorney Thomas W. McDonald rested his case after two days' testimony and the defense called three witnesses before court recessed until Monday.

Trooper Harry Durand put the final touch on the State's case by identifying Montague, alias Laverne Moore, as the occupant of a car with Roger Norton when he stopped the machine to question them. Norton confessed to the crime and served a prison sentence. Yesterday he identified Montague as his companion in the holdup.

G. H. Lorimer, Famed Editor, Expires at 69

Pastor's Son Built Little Magazine Into National Weekly.

he entered before he was 30 through Georgetown College in Kentucky.

After serving two churches in Kentucky and one in Albany he was called to the First Baptist Church in Chicago; from Chicago he was called to Boston. There, in the pulpit of Tremont Temple, he became one of the famous preachers of his time. He was editor of The Watchman and wrote several religious books. In 1901 he accepted a call to the Madison Avenue Baptist Church in New York. Just then his health began to break and he went abroad for treatment. Death found him at Aix-les-Bains, France, in 1904.

Early Life No Luxury.

George Horace, therefore, had the childhood of a preacher's son, which in those days was not a luxurious life, even when the preacher was famous.

From Chicago High School he went to Yale. One day in the street he was accosted by P. D. Armour, the meat packer, one of his father's rich parishoners, who said, "If you will stop wasting your time at college as my boys are doing and come with me I'll make you a millionaire." His father said he would have to decide for himself.

When he presented himself to Armour, saying he had decided to take his advice, the great meat packer seemed to have forgotten it. "Oh, yes, yes," he said. "You are the preacher's boy." Then he called a clerk and said, "Give this young man a desk and find him something to do," and for a year never looked at him again.

The pay was $10 a week for 14 hours a day and 25 cents for supper money when the day was longer.

Wrote Advice to Youth.

In the next eight years with Armour & Co. he acquired much of the grim and salty wisdom that went into the writing, later, of "Letters From a Self-Made Merchant to His Son," which appeared first anonymously in the Saturday Evening Post and then in book form under his own name, and became a world classic of its kind.

Whether or not he was on his way to become a millionaire, business was a false start. When he was 25 he had married Alma V. Ennis, daughter of Judge Alfred Ennis, of Chicago; when he was 28 he had arrived at what then was a very comfortable income for two. And still it was not too late to begin again.

With a beautiful young wife on his hands and no alternative prospect, he quit Armour & Co. and got a job as reporter on the Boston Post. At the same time he enrolled as a special student in English and history at Colby College.

Used Full Name.

He did some writing, including verse, which he signed George Lorimer, and as this was at a time when people were coming long journeys to hear George C. Lorimer preach in Tremont Temple, his father said, "George, I don't mind your writing these things, but would you mind using the name I gave you instead of one that may be mistaken for mine?" After that he was George Horace Lorimer in full.

Then the thing happened that is said to happen once to everyone. Afterward it may be referred to as luck. For George Horace Lorimer it was a small news paragraph saying that Cyrus H. K. Curtis, who had made an astonishing success of the Ladies' Home Journal, was buying for $1,000 the cobwebs and name of The Saturday Evening Post, a shears-and-paste-pot weekly with no longer any circulation, and the new owner would be wanting an editor who could make a great national magazine of it.

Lorimer communicated at once. Mr. Curtis replied that he happened to be coming to Boston. They met. At the end of two hours Lorimer was literary editor at $40 a week, with the understanding that he should be in nominal change and hold the thing together until Mr. Curtis could get to Europe to see John Brisben Walker and persuade him to become editor. Walker was the man who had made a success of the Cosmopolitan as the first 10-cent monthly magazine.

Ran Post 38 Years.

They were to meet in Paris, but the appointment went wrong, and Mr. Curtis was returning in disappointment when he received four copies of The Saturday Evening Post produced by the young Boston reporter. He studied them for a while and then cabled: "You are the editor. Put your name at the masthead." That was in 1899, and the name of George Horace Lorimer was at the masthead for 38 years.

Recent memories of Lorimer's editorship will be inseparable from the feelings and passions evoked by his position on the New Deal. It was a soingle-handed fight. He himself wrote the full page editorials that appeared week after week. His quarrel with the New Deal, as he said, was not over the reforms it proposed to bring about, but he believed its methods would lead to disaster.

Travelled Much in U. S.

America was his passion. He was continually going to and fro in it. For years he regularly spent his vacations motoring across the continent. Once when the California redwoods were in danger he defended them as though they were a constitutional principle. Appropriately, therefore, the only public office he ever accepted was as a member of the Commission on Conservation and Administration of the Public Domain.

His charities were largely private and systematic. Public honors he avoided; likewise public appearances. He cared little for social life.

Latterly his writing was confined to editorials. His book titles were "Letters from a Self-Made Merchant to His Son," 1902; "Old Gorgon Graham," 1904; "The False Gods," 1906; "Jack Spurlock, Prodigal," 1908.

When Cyrus H. K. Curtis died in 1933 Mr. Lorimer became president of the Curtis Publishing Co., and later chairman, in charge of the Saturday Evening Post, The Ladies' Home Journal and the Country Gentleman.

And so he continued until January 1, 1937, when he retired, saying: "I should like to live a more leisurely life and put into effect some long cherished plans were.

Burial Tomorrow For Mrs. Duvall

Funeral services for Mrs. Sarah L. Duvall, 67, wife of C. Scott Duvall, will be held at 2:30 p. m. tomorrow at her home in Gaithersburg, Md. The Rev. Jacob E. James is to officiate, assisted by the Rev. Herman M. Wilson. Interment will be private.

A well-known horticulturist, Mrs. Duvall, who died Thursday at Emergency Hospital, was prominent in club activities in Montgomery County, where she spent the greater part of her life. She was a member of the Pentalpha Chapter, O. E. S., the Homemakers Demonstration Club and the Neighborhood Garden Club.

Born at Laurel, Md., she taught public school several years in southern Maryland. In 1903, she was married to Mr. Duvall, who is copublisher of the Montgomery Independent, Rockville.

Funeral on Howard Campus Planned for Dean of Women

Funeral services for Miss Lucy D. Slowe, dean of women at Howard University since 1922, will be held in Andrew Rankin Memorial Chapel, on the university campus, at 1 p. m., Monday.

Miss Slowe died Thursday evening at her residence, 1256 Kearney street, after an illness of two months.

Educated in the public schools of Baltimore and at Howard University, Miss Slowe took graduate work at Columbia and received her Ph. D. in education.

After acting as principal of the Shaw Junior High School for three years, she was appointed dean of women at Howard in 1922 and professor of English in 1923.

At Howard she inaugurated the Women's Dinners given every November and the candlelight service held annually on the Sunday before the Christmas holidays.

Dean Slowe was one of the organizers of the National Association of College Women and served as its first president. She was frequently in demand as a speaker at Bryn Mawr, Vassar, Smith, Columbia Teachers College and Oberlin.

Her civic activities included membership on the executive committee of the Community Chest, the Family Service Association, the Northwest Settlement House and the Interracial Committee of the District.

Miss Slowe is survived by a sister, Mrs. Nellie Hawkes of Philadelphia.

Funeral Set Today For Mrs. Winston

Funeral services for Mrs. Daisy Pierpont Winston, of 1207 Gallatin street, wife of William Roy Winston, will be held this afternoon at 2 o'clock at the Hines undertaking establishment, followed by burial in Alexandria, Va.

Mrs. Winston died Thursday in Emergency Hospital after a brief illness. A native of Alexandria, she lived in the District for the past decade.

John A. Kraft, 78, Dies at Home Here

John A. Kraft, 78, for many years employed by the Washington Gas Light Co., died yesterday at his home, 1031 Seventh street northeast.

Funeral services will be held at 8:30 a. m. at his home, Monday, and requiem mass will be offered at Holy Name Catholic Church at 9. Burial will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Kraft is survived by two sons, George C. and Robert A. Kraft, and a daughter, Mrs. Anna M. Corrado.

Lieut. Robert A. Pierce Burial Set for Today

Funeral services for Lieut. Robert Archer Pierce, 32, who died September 20, in Canacao, P. I., will be held in Arlington Cemetery at 10 a. m. today.

Born in Brownsville, Tex., Lieut. Pierce served in the U. S. S. Colorado and also in submarines. He came to Washington in May, 1934, to receive instruction at the Deep Sea Diving School.

Simon Harry Dies; Indian Fighter and White House Usher

A varied career that ranged from fighting Indians in Colorado to acting as chief usher to the wife of President Cleveland was brought to a close with the death Thursday of Simon J. Harry, 75, at his home, 215 Eighth street northeast.

Mr. Harry, who left the Army with the rank of sergeant about 50 years ago, engaged in skirmishes with the redskins in the 1880's while he was stationed with Troop B, Sixth Cavalry, at Fort Lewis, Colo., hardly more than a decade after Colorado became a State.

Shortly after the tremination of his Army career he entered Washington police force and was detailed to the White House in the closing days of the Harrison Administration. He served as chief usher to Mrs. Cleveland during her husband's second term.

But that was not the only contact of Mr. Harry with the White House. As mounted sergeant of the Metropolitan Police Force, he was one of the leaders of the parades on Pennsylvania avenue that marked the inauguration of Presidents McKinley, Theodore Roosevelt, Taft and Wilson. He retired from the police force about ten years ago. He will be buried Monday in Arlington Cemetery, following funeral services at 10 a. m. at the S. H. Hines Co. funeral home, 2901 Fourteenth street northwest.

Mr. Harry was a member of Covenant Lodge, Fred D. Stuart Encampment, I. O. O. F.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Sallie B. Harry, and a sister, Mrs. Lila Vivian, of Walkersville, Mont. He was born at Ishpeming, Mich.

Frank Damrosch Dies in New York

New York, Oct. 22 (AP).—Dr. Frank Heino Damrosch, 78, son of the famous composer, conductor and violinist, Leopold Damrosch, and brother of Walter Damrosch, the conductor, died today.

A noted musical educator, author and founder of the institute of music which later became the Institute of Musical Art of the Juilliard School of Music, Dr. Damrosch was a native of Breslau, Germany.

News of Plymouth's Great New 1938 Car

IT'S AN EXCITING CAR TO SEE...TO DRIVE...NEW RICHNESS OUTSIDE AND INSIDE...NEW COMFORTS AND DRIVING EASE...MORE VISION...AMAZING VALUE!

PLYMOUTH'S STORY

It's on display right now...the brilliant, new 1938 Plymouth. It celebrates the most outstanding record in automotive history.

10 years ago Plymouth entered the low-price field. And when people found Plymouth had more beauty, safety, economy and reliability, they bought Plymouths—by the thousands.

No car has ever made so many friends, so fast.

The 10th-year Plymouth is here. It's by far the greatest car we've built. Be sure to see it!

[COSTS AMAZINGLY LITTLE TO OWN]

When you look at the price tag on the new Plymouth—you'll be surprised! It's priced with the lowest! And the Commercial Credit Company offers very easy terms through Dodge, DeSoto and Chrysler dealers. Tune in Major Bowes' Amateur Hour... Columbia Network, Thursdays, 9 to 10 p. m., E. S. T.

1 Step Up Close and Look at this beautiful, new 1938 Plymouth! Isn't it distinctive? The radiator is new in contour. See that long hood! The headlights are larger and more efficient. The whole car looks bigger! And the beautiful body is welded into a single, rigid, all-steel unit!

2 Now Step In and See How Easy it is to adjust the front seat. It rises as it moves forward—so, no matter what your size, your eyes are always at the right height for easy vision.

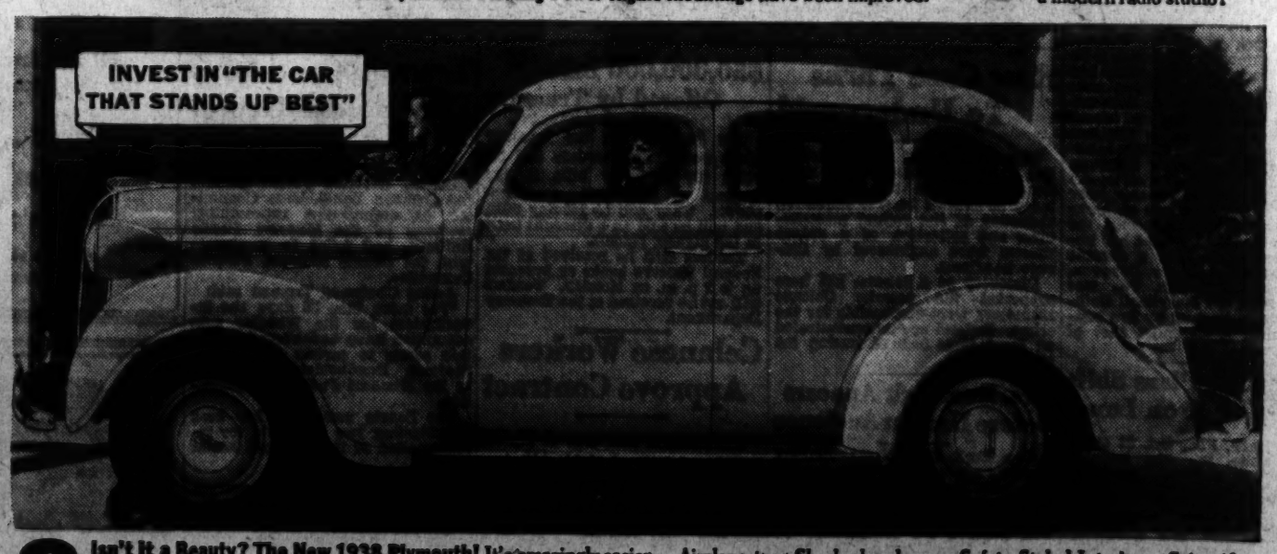
3 This is New, too! The speedometer and other instruments are in the middle—easy to read. The new handbrake is clear of the floor—out of knees' way.

4 Try the Back Seat—it's "chair-height"..richly upholstered. You sit naturally and comfortably—relaxed!

5 Stretch Out! Enjoy the greater elbow room, head room and leg room in the new 1938 Plymouth. The whole car "floats" on Amola steel springs, with huge, airplane-type shock-absorbers. Live rubber "pillows" between the all-steel body and frame effectively block out road vibration. Even Plymouth's Floating Power engine mountings have been improved.

6 Listen to Your Watch! The new 1938 Plymouth is actually sound-proofed like a modern radio studio!

7 Say—These Engineers Have Thought of Everything! There's a lot of extra room in this big baggage compartment. It's even electric-lighted and the floor is covered to protect your luggage. The spare wheel and tire are out of the way...yet easy to reach.



8 Isn't It a Beauty? The New 1938 Plymouth! It's amazingly easier to drive and handle...so much quieter, more comfortable, safer. It's the only low-priced car that gives you Floating Power Engine Mountings...Double-action Hydraulic Brakes...All-Steel Safety Body...Airplane-type Shock-absorbers...Safety-Styled Interior...Scientific Sound-proofing...record savings on gas, oil and upkeep. Go see and drive "the car that stands up best"—the handsome, new 1938 Plymouth!

The Federal Diary

Reg. U. S. Pat. Office.

Law and Order.

Thinking in the clinches: As soon as the A. F. G. E. people heard of the "Mutiny on the Algic," they dashed right over and organized the U. S. Maritime Commission employes. "Following the example of the commission in declaring for law and order aboard ship, the employes of the U. S. Maritime Commission have gone on record for law and order in unionism by organizing an A. F. G. E. lodge," says the announcement.

It has a very democratic membership, embracing employes in high and low positions, "and sane procedure in union methods is anticipated from this conservative and outstanding group of old line employes," it was predicted. The officers are as follows: Roy H. Morrill, president; Walter C. Hipkins, vice president; Henry H. Clement, secretary, and Alva E. Hennage, treasurer. Godfrey V. Wickware, President Stengle's executive assistant, was the organizer.

Shenandoah National Park, in Virginia, an area including the Skyline Drive, attracted more visitors during the travel year ended September 30 than any of the Government's 26 National Parks. The number of visitors was 1,041,204, a very impressive record. Second was the Great Smoky Mountains National Park in North Carolina and Tennessee, with 727,243 visitors. Yellowstone was fourth with 499,242.

There is a very obvious reason for the lead taken by Shenandoah park, Nelson A. Loomis, associate recreational planner, said yesterday. It is the park's close proximity to the great population centers of the East. Also, it received much publicity after the President's visit.

Banquet.

Just to hand are two tickets to the banquet which Adjutant-General's Office Lodge No. 2, A. F. G. E., will tender in honor of G. Carroll Dimond, an A. F. G. E. national vice president, at the Gingham Club the evening of November 3. The event is in token of Mr. Dimond's "distinguished services" to the lodge and the national organization. This matches the honor the District Department pays to its past president, James G. Yaden, on next Wednesday night at the Hamilton Hotel.

Concerning Mr. Dimond: He was appointed to the Federal service in 1905 and assigned to the Department of Education in Puerto Rico. Three years later, he was transferred to the Adjutant General's office here, and had served there ever since. He has been active in civic movements. In civic affairs, he has been associated with the Washington Board of Trade, Columbia Heights and Sixteenth street Heights Associations.

He became active in labor organizations in 1916 as a charter member of the A. G. O. Local, N. F. F. E., remaining with this group until secession from the A. F. of L. Then he, with persons who opposed the secession movement, organized the new union, the A. F. G. E., an affiliate of the A. F. of L. As a charter member of the A. G. O. lodge of the A. F. G. E., M. Dimond took a leading part in its membership drives.

"Much credit must be given to our national vice president in guiding this newly-organized lodge into one of the most respected and influential units of the American Federation of Government Employees," his associates have said of him.

The testimonial committee consists of Janet H. Donnelly, chairman; Mary B. Shehan, Edward J. McGinnis, Minnie R. Brewer and Hazel Lindberg.

Discovery.

Three workers in the Department of Agriculture have discovered a process that sterilizes wool fabrics without damaging the fibers, which is believed to have practical possibilities in commercial use. The method as yet has been tried only under laboratory conditions on undyed blanket fabrics, but soon will be tested out in dry-cleaning and other industrial plants.

The research was conducted by Ruth Elmquist and James Kettering, of the Bureau of Home Economics, in collaboration with Harry Humfeld, of the Bureau of Plant Industry. They have made application for a public service patent.

A. D. Lewis, John L.'s younger brother, who has been quiet but active behind the U. F. W. A. wings, will address a conference of 150 members of the local union executive committees at meetings here this afternoon and evening at the New Colonial Hotel. The conference will concern itself chiefly with legislative, adjustment and organization matters.

Lewis will speak on the recent C. I. O. conference in Atlantic City. National President Jacob Baker, will discuss the national office's legislative program for the coming Congress. Thery will be committee reports.

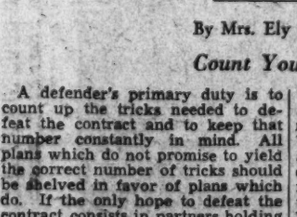
Contract Bridge

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson.

Count Your Tricks.

A defender's primary duty is to count up the tricks needed to defeat the contract and to keep that number constantly in mind. All plans which do not promise to yield the correct number of tricks should be shelved in favor of plans which do. If the only hope to defeat the contract consists in partners holding a particular card or combination of cards, the hand should be played as though that were actually the case. It matters little if partner turns out to have some other holding. In that case the contract could not have been defeated and, even if declarer makes an overtrick or two, the points thus lost are insignificant as against the number of contracts which will be defeated by such tactics. Even partner's signals must sometimes be disregarded in accordance with this principle.

South, dealer.
East-West vulnerable.
North-South, part-score of 30 points.



The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	2 ♣	2 ♡	Pass
3 ♠	Pass	3 ♠	Pass
Pass	Pass

West opened the King of clubs and East began a signal with the nine-spot. Fortunately for his side, West did not blindly obey the signal and give his partner the desired club ruff. Instead he counted up the number of tricks that were needed to defeat the three-spade contract. With five tricks needed, he could count only two high clubs and a ruff, together with the Ace of spades. Since he himself could not expect to win a trick in the red suits it was necessary for his partner to hold either the Ace of hearts or King of diamonds. The bidding made it almost certain that South had the Ace of hearts. West, therefore, decided that the contract could be defeated only if his partner had the King of diamonds. In that case a shift to diamonds at the second trick was imperative.

Following his analysis, West led the deuce of diamonds, and declarer was helpless. If he took the finesse East would win and return his club. His partner would then give him a club ruff, and the Ace of spades would furnish the setting trick. If South refused the finesse, West would take his Ace of trumps and give his partner the club ruff. Thereupon East would be in a position to cash the King of diamonds for the setting trick.

Had West continued with the club instead of shifting to diamonds, East would have ruffed the third round of clubs but would not then have been able to attack North's Ace of diamonds. South could easily knock out the Ace of trumps and discard his losing diamond on North's Jack of hearts.

ICC Gives Rails 47 Million Rise; More Is Sought

Rates' Increase Cheers Business but Roads Are Unsatisfied.

prove to be a mistake, has been borne out.

Increasing costs of rail operation, with decreased revenue, have been destructive of net earnings and confidence in railroad credit and values. The situation also has reduced railroad purchases and repair and maintenance work, adding to unemployment, both directly and indirectly, in industries producing materials and supplies.

ICC "Recognition" Stressed.

Granting of increases and permitting filing of increases in other rates, subject to suspension, may prove an important step to stem business decline, if further steps are taken to improve the earnings and thereby the credit and purchasing power of the roads.

While the increased revenue is small in proportion to the rise in costs, importance is attached to the apparent recognition by the ICC of th disastrous consequences of the present relation between operating costs and revenues of the roads.

Plea for the increases came from the roads when the commission refused to grant an extension, after last December 31, of the emergency surcharges which had been giving them an estimated $120,000,000 in added revenue. Since the petition was filed, rail officials pointed out, numerous heavy additions to costs have been placed on the roads.

Two recent wage increases are estimated to add $135,000,000 a year to the expenses. Since May, 1933, there has been an increase of $111,000,000 in costs under new laws, such as the railroad retirement tax and unemployment compensation law, the carriers maintain, and the boost in costs of materials and supplies in the same period they place at $274,000,000.

The railroad association declared last night that traffic has not been up to expectations in 1937. Early in the year it was expected the peak week would see 900,000 freight-car loadings. Later the estimate was reduced to 880,000. However, whereas the peak usually comes about the middle of October, this year it was reached two weeks earlier, when the loadings totaled 847,245 cars. They have declined each week since; the total for last week being 809,944 cars, a decrease of 2 per cent below the corresponding week in 1936 and 13 per cent below the same week in 1930.

Other Costs Mount.

"Since the beginning of 1933," Pelley said, "the cost of thousands of articles which we buy and use has gone up 40 per cent. Our tax burdens, due to new laws, have gone up about 23 per cent."

On the other hand, he said, "our average revenue for hauling a ton of freight 1 mile has gone down since the beginning of 1933 by 10 per cent, and our average passenger revenue per mile has decreased by a similar percentage.

"I can see no escape from the necessity for additional revenues, beyond the increase in rates just granted, if we are to carry the added costs already upon us."

"General business is not going to recover," Jeffers said in his statement, "until the railroads get back into the market for supplies."

Harry Guy Taylor, chairman of the Western Association of Railway Executives, said in Chicago, the Associated Press reported, that most of the added revenue "will go to Eastern railroad." He contrasted the $47,500,000 increased revenues with the $600,000,000 which he said had been the increase in expenses imposed upon the roads through higher wages, increased costs of fuel and materials and other items.

Coal, Iron Rates Increased.

The rate increases granted by the commission were:

Bituminous coal and coke, increases ranging from 3 to 15 cents a ton in the Western district and from 3 to 10 cents a ton in other districts, but terminating on December 31, 1938.

Lignite coal, an increase ranging from 2 to 8 cents per ton.

Iron and steel and related products, a 10 per cent increase, to a maximum of 1 cent per 100 pounds.

Scrap iron and steel, 20 per cent, with a maximum of 2 cents per 100 pounds, in the Western district, and from that district to others.

Iron ore, 5 cents per net ton or 8 cents per gross ton.

Cement, lime, plaster, mortar gypsum, 1 cent per 100 pounds.

Petroleum and its products, except in Southern territory, also lubricating oils and greases, asphalt, pitch and tar, 1 cent per 100 pounds.

Denied by the commission were pleas for an increase in rates on anthracite, on refined petroleum in Southern territory and on iron ore from Minnesota mines to Lake Superior docks. Only part of the increases asked on lignite coal, some of the rates on petroleum products and related articles and on gypsum were granted. The proposal to increase ratings of fifth-class and certain sixth-class articles also was disapproved.

Pooled Profits Suggested.

The increases were authorized for Mountain-Pacific territory and a higher transcontinental rate on liquefied petroleum gas also was permitted. No specific findings were made as to other rates that have been the subject of hearings but the roads were authorized to file tariffs publishing the rates they have proposed, subject to possible suspension.

Increased rates on bituminous coal were approved only until December 31, 1938, the commission holding that because so large a part of the increased revenue would go to the Chesapeake and Ohio, the Norfolk and Western, and the Virginian railroads, which it held are not in need of additional revenue, a permanent increase should not be granted without consideration of a possible pooling arrangement under which the added revenue would be so divided that benefits would go largely to lines in need.

Commissioner Frank McManamy favored granting the increases asked without exception, while Commissioner Clyde B. Aitchison dissented from the findings except those relating to anthracite, iron and steel, iron ore, petroleum and its products in Southern territory and the fifth and sixth class relations in classification.

Progress Made On Corn Loan, Wallace Says

Discusses Aid to '37 Crop With Roosevelt and Bell; Legislation Uncertain.

Texas, of the House Agriculture Committee, returned to the Capital yesterday to prepare for committee hearings, beginning next Wednesday, on new general farm legislation.

Reporters asked Jones whether he thought some measure would become law during the special session. He replied:

"I wouldn't say that. We are going to try to pass a bill as soon as it is reasonably possible, but there are many uncertainties."

Senate Might Delay.

He said the Senate might delay action until the regular Congressional term starting in January.

Jones expressed belief that the legislation should include these principles:

Simplification of the present soil conservation program, which provides benefit payments for farmers complying with specified soil-conserving and soil-building practices.

A fair share of the national income for agriculture.

Price-stabilizing commodity loans and the "ever-normal granary," under which crop surpluses would be stored under Federal loans for use in lean years.

Research laboratories to seek new uses for farm products.

Crop control provisions that would not interfere with the Nation's export markets, particularly for cotton.

Five Gunmen Flee Wilmington With Payroll of $21,000

Wilmington, Del., Oct. 22 (AP).—Five masked men stepped into the paymaster's office at the General Chemical Co. today, held up the office staff with pistols and a machine gun and escaped with a $21,000 pay roll which was being prepared for the company's 600 employes.

The men sped out of the company's parking lot in an automobile and a few minutes later streaked through Marcus Hook, Pa., as police prepared to block the highway after the holdup alarm had been given.

Several shots were exchanged between employes of the plant and the holdup men as they fled from the office. No one was hurt.

Hahn Trial Hears Of Second Death

Cincinnati, Oct. 22 (AP).—Trial of Mrs. Anna Marie Hahn on a charge that she poisoned 78-year-old Jacob Wagner for his money veered today to the story of how another old man died on a Western excursion with the former German housemaid.

Backed by a court ruling that evidence of other deaths would be competent for purposes of showing a "mass poisoning" intent, the prosecution marshaled witnesses to the final illness of George Obendoerfer, 67, Cincinnati cobbler.

Woman Gets $27,500 For Plane Fire Burns

Detroit, Oct. 22 (AP).—A New Orleans woman who asserted that she wan injured because an airplane her husband purchased from the Stinson Aircraft Corporation was defective was awarded a $27,500 judgment against the company today.

A circuit court jury returned the verdict in favor of Mrs. Christine Maynard, who testified that she suffered "permanent and ugly scars" from head and arm burns when the plane caught fire.

Oil Strike Settled.

Ardmore, Okla., Oct. 22 (AP).—Settlement of a strike of Jones Oil Co. workers in the Healdton Field announced tonight by a citizens committee appointed by Gov. E. W. Marland to help arbitrate differences. National Guardsmen, who have patroled the field since last Wednesday, will be withdrawn.

who was married and the father of two children.

The verdict was greeted with cheers by spectators who crowded the courtroom.

Miss Drennan, who became known as "the woman in red" because her red coat led to her identification on the night she fled Reeves' home, smiled, although her face was stained by tears.

She was surrounded immediately by court attendants and a matron and led from the courtroom.

Describes Struggle.

She awaited release in the county jail rest room, near the sheriff's office.

"I feel swell," she sang out to reporters who gathered around her.

"I'm so happy, I don't know what to do. I'm going home with mother and daddy for a few days. Then I'm going to take a trip."

Yesterday the young secretarial student told, with dramatic intensity, her own story to the jury, in which she averred that not until after he had ravished her was she aware that the tall, 24-year-old Reeves was not "Jack Lyons," as he had introduced himself one winter evening when he offered to carry home her bundles fro a store.

She brought her father's pistol to his home, she said, because he had raped her once "and I didn't want him to do it again."

Then she described a fierce strugle with the nude Reeves which ended when she shot him as he crouched in front of her.

Widow is in Court.

In summing up the defense today, Burton told the jury that "a woman has the right to kill a man who tries to rape her, and as for punishment, the prospect of bearing a child who may possess the living features of the man she killed is punishment enough." Miss Drennan wept at that.

But Prosecutor Morris insisted that the "woman in red" went to the Reeves home in Iselin, N. J., "with two things in her heart—love and murder." Not one crime was committed, he said, but two—"illicit relations and murder."

He asked for a verdict of first degree murder.

Mrs. Myra Reeves, wife of the man killed by the "woman in red," was in the courtroom with her mother, Mrs. John Houlroyd, when the verdict was returned. Mrs. Reeves, who yesterday pleaded from the witness stand for Miss Drennan to "tell the truth," sat stiffly as Foreman Louis D. Lashway, an electrician, announced the acquital.

Cuba Asks U.S. Aid To Halt Spain War

Cuban Ambassador Pedro Martinez Fraga said yesterday he had received instructions from his government to consult with the United States State Department toward seeking joint American action for an armistice in the Spanish civil war.

The attitude of the Cuban government, the ambassador said, is that definite action should be taken by the American nations.

In the event, he added, the common consent of the American governments is obtained, the Valencia government and Franco regime would be approached and asked to participate in a conference.

was aimed directly at European countries where Masonry is under fire.

"We extend to our brethren in Spain and other countries where the atrocities of murder and assassination of Masons are practiced, our sincerest sympathy and fraternal good-will," the Council statement continued.

"It is not without significance," the council asserted, "that wherever in the world today despots are seeking to destroy the liberties and take away the God-given rights of the people, there Masonry is being suppressed. . . . Tyrants and despots, both political and spiritual, have long since learned that the ideals of Masonry are incompatible with the nefarious business of despotic and oppressive rule. . . . Wherever in the world the ideals of democracy obtain and the principles of constitutional government by the people's representatives are in force, Masonry prospers and carries on its work unmolested, and is respected by those who love liberty and believe in government by law."

Indorses Report.

Approving a report of the committee on education, the Supreme Council indorsed the defeat of the Harrison-Black-Fletcher bill, which, while proposing "to appropriate vast sums of money for the aid of public education . . . failed to limit the use of the appropriation exclusively to the tax-supported, free public schools of the several States."

Although the organization has in the past recorded its desire for a Federal Department of Education, yesterday's resolution stated "it is our belief that paternalism on the part of the National Government in matters of State and local educational systems and institutions would be unwise and would ultimately result in harm to the cause of public education in the entire United States."

The following declaration was adopted:

"We favor the American public school, nonpartisan, nonsectarian, efficient, democratic, for all of the children of all the people, and equal educational opportunities for all.

"We favor the inculcation of patriotism, love of The Flag, respect for law and order, and undying loyalty to constitutional government.

"We favor the compulsory use of English as the language of instruction in the grammar grades of our public schools.

"We favor adequate provision for the education of the alien populations, not only in cultural and vocational subjects, but especially in the principles of American institutions and popular government.

"We believe in the entire separation of church and state, and in opposition to every attempt to appropriate public moneys, Federal, State or local, directly or indirectly, for the support of sectarian institutions."

Completion of payment of $1,000,000 appropriated by the Supreme Council to George Washington University for a school of government was noted in the committee's report.

Others Honored.

In addition to Senator Glass and Dr. Marvin, other Masons from the District, Maryland and Virginia who were honored with the thirty-third degree last night include: Ralph A. Van Orsdel, James W. Humphrey and Charles M. Jones, of Washington; Frank Stetson, of Chevy Chase, Md.; Alexander Armstrong, of Towson, Md.; former Mayor William F. Broening, sr., president of the school board; Forrest Bramble, James W. Chapman, jr., and Sylvan Hamburger, of Baltimore; Morris L. Masinter, of Roanoke; Robert D. M. Ogg, of Portsmouth, and Henry T. Taylor, of Richmond. A dinner at the House of the Temple preceded last night's ceremony.

Four Masons have been elected by the Supreme Council to active membership. Each of them becomes a sovereign grand inspector general of his home State. They are Walter C. Temple, of Dallas; Luther A. Smith, of Hattiesburg, Miss.; L. L. Callaway, of Helena, Mont., and William Koch, of Des Moines, Iowa.

4 Children Testify In Fire-Death Plot

Media, Pa., Oct. 22 (AP).—Albert R. Knight's three daughters and a son described in Delaware County court today the fire at their Lansdowne home last May which the Commonwealth charges Knight started in a plot to murder them and collect $120,000 insurance on the girls.

The children, Ruth, 23; Susan, 19; Mary, 17, and David 15, testified as State witnesses at the former oil company executive's trial on charges of arson and attempted murder.

The children previously had said they would testify for their father and their appearance for the State caused a stir in the courtroom.

British, French Beg Franco to Spare Prisoners

Massacre of 70,000 Feared; Fascists Mop Up, Turn Thoughts Eastward.

By the United Press.

Hendaye, Franco-Spanish Frontier, Oct. 22.—Great Britain and France appealed to Generalissimo Franco tonight to refrain from mass executions among the 60,000 or 70,000 Asturian Marxists taken prisoner in the nationalist conquest of northwest Spain.

The British Ambassador at Hendaye, Sir Henry Chilton, was instructed by London to join with the French government in a diplomatic appeal urging "human treatment" of the Asturians.

The decision was taken after reports reached the frontier that Franco, enraged by the reign of terror of the shattered Asturian army, threatened wholesale reprisals.

Frontier dispatches indicated tonight that thus far there have been no executions as the nationalist troops carried out a swift "mop-up" of all Asturias Province to claim complete control of western Spain and 27 of the country's 37 continental provinces.

Franco Turns Eastward.

Hendaye, Franco-Spanish Frontier, Oct. 22 (AP).—Generalissimo Franco, armed with more complete power than ever before as dictator of insurgent Spain, today turned his attention from the conquered northwest to the vital eastern fronts.

While the two-thirds of Spain under his control celebrated the fall of Gijon and collapse of government resistance in the northwest, Franco tightened his hold on the reins.

It was disclosed the decree setting up the Fascist national council, announced yesterday, gave Franco the right to name secretly his own successor as dictator of Spain. It provided all executive power shall be exercised by Franco and his ministers.

Insurgent officers said the greater part of nearly 100,000 insurgent troops who have been fighting in Asturias would be transferred soon to the Aragon and Madrid fronts.

Meanwhile an advance guard of Spanish government officials moved from Valencia to Barcelona to prepare the way for transfer of the government to a more strategic location.

U. S. Typist to Beg Brother's Life of Franco by Radio

New York, Oct. 22 (AP).—Grace Freed, 25-year-old stenographer, whose brother was reported a Spanish war prisoner, planned tonight to appeal to Insurgent Gen. Franco by short-wave radio for his release.

She cabled the general.

"I implore you to listen to me Sunday 3 p. m. New York time Station W2XAD, 19.56 meters. I want to beg you to free my brother, Edward, held prisoner by you since February 15. My mother's heart is broken and her health is quickly fading . . ."

Tokyo Diplomat Sees Quick Peace

Cleveland, Oct. 22 (AP).—Yakichiro Suma, Japan's second-ranking diplomat in the United States, predicted today "a satisfactory and a reasonably quick settlement with China if there is no outside encouragement or assistance given the Chinese forces and if no difficulties are made for us by other countries."

Suma, counselor of the Japanese embassy in Washington, made the statement in an address before the Foreign Policy Association here.

Patricide Gets Life.

Japan May Ask 9-Power Parley Be Postponed

Time Needed to Prepare, Tokyo Feels; Diplomats Sound Duce, Hitler.

By the Associated Press.

Tokyo, Oct. 22.—A government spokesman indicated today Japan may ask postponement of the Brussels conference of Nine-Power Treaty signatories, set for October 30, pleading insufficient time for preparation.

Meanwhile, authoritative sources said Japanese diplomats in Europe were ascertaining the attitudes of Italy and Germany, the two powers most friendly to Japan, toward the conference.

Italy, a signatory of the Nine-Power Pact—concluded at Washington in 1922—has accepted Belgium's invitation to the conference. It is expected Germany a nonsignatory, will be invited to join after the conference is in session.

(Belgium has convoked the conference, at the instance of the United States and Britain, to seek "amicable means" of ending the Sino-Japanese conflict. The United States, Britain and most of the British dominions, Mexico and other powers have accepted the invitation.)

The government spokesman said Japan's Ambassador to Moscow, Mamoru Shigemitsu, had visited Berlin, while the Ambassador to Berlin, Viscount Kimitomo Mishakoji, had made recent trips to Paris and Rome. The diplomats, the spokesman said, were "discussing the general political situation," but he admitted they might be talking also about the Brussels conference.

The spokesman asserted Japan received her invitation to Brussels only yesterday, giving only nine days for preparation. Foreign Minister Koki Hirota summoned the empire's most experienced diplomats to consider the Brussels invitation.

Japan Facing Revolt.

Copyright, 1937, by the United Press.

Shanghai (Saturday), Oct. 23.—Chinese and neutral sources reported today Japan was withdrawing troops in large numbers from Chinese fronts to meet a new threat of a dangerous uprising in Manchuria.

Thirteen Japanese troop trains reportedly left Tientsin for Mukden, and Kwantung army leaders were said to have informed the Japanese command in North China they could provide no further help for Japan's conquests below the Great Wall.

Dispatches from Peiping and Tientsin indicated Japanese troops were being pulled off North China fronts in large numbers, although no reason was assigned.

Manchukuo Trouble Spot.

In Nanking, both Chinese and foreign sources said the situation in Manchukuo, brewing with threats of trouble for several weeks, was becoming critical.

Any serious uprising in Manchukuo would leave Japan's important northern Asiatic frontier vulnerable to a Soviet attack.

None of the reports was confirmed by Japanese spokesmen, although the foreign office in Tokyo admitted a few weeks ago that additional forces were being dispatched to Manchukuo "just in case anythir happens."

War Is "Teaser" for Roosevelt.

By the Associated Press.

London, Oct. 22.—Sir Frederick Whyte, former political adviser to the national government in China, declared in a public address tonight the war in China has placed President Roosevelt in a "teasing predicament."

He said the President's action has been "severely confined" by the neutrality act.

"It is one of the ironies of his position," Sir Frederick said, "that hosts of Americans who demanded from Congress a law which would keep America out of war now seek to drive the Administration into drastic action against Japan—action, moreover, of a kind that implies readiness to use force if necessary to support economic pressure."

Hoare Stresses U. S. Ties.

By the Associated Press.

Newcastle, England, Oct. 22.—Sir Samuel Hoare, home secretary, asserted tonight that "as Europe and the Far East become more turbulent the common outlook between the United States and ourselves becomes more notable."

The Nazis Conquer Danzig.

The dissolution of the Catholic Center party in Danzig, following persistent pressure by the Nazis, writes finis to a long and gallant struggle to preserve even a modicum of democracy in the Free City. The Centrists constituted the last opposition party. Now the Nazis are the unchallenged masters and can with impunity complete their program of making Danzig in fact if not in name an integral portion of the Third Reich.

The tenacity with which a considerable minority of the people fought the spread of Hitlerism in this tiny state was displayed in the elections of April, 1935. Despite a torrent of Nazi propaganda, aided by imported celebrities from the Third Reich and forcible measures to bring the opposition into line, the Nazis suffered a setback in that contest. They had hoped to secure a two-thirds majority in the Volkstag so as to make possible the scrapping of the democratic constitution of 1922. But they fell short of that goal by five votes.

This development delayed but did not prevent the Danzig Nazis from carrying out their program. By hook or crook they managed to wipe out one opposition party after another. And in doing so they successfully defied the League of Nations which, under the Treaty of Versailles, was named protector of the 1922 constitution.

In Sean Lester, League high commissioner, the Danzig minorities found a strong and determined supporter. But the odds against him, always great, became overwhelming when the League, after the Ethiopian fiasco, decided a year ago to wipe its hands of the Danzig problem. The fate of the Free City was then entrusted to Poland whose own particular interests the Nazis were quite willing to guarantee in return for a free hand in Danzig's internal problems.

At a time when so many world tragedies are being enacted, the unhappy fate of Danzig democracy would seem to have but minor significance. Nonetheless, the development is not without its real importance. It constitutes another triumph of brute nationalism over Europe's collective system. And it may encourage the Hitler regime to employ again elsewhere in Europe the same technique of conquest by Nazi outposts that was so successful in the Free City.

Farm Subsidies Mean Taxes.

With Congress getting ready to assemble in special session, primarily to consider farm legislation, it is quite appropriate for Administration leaders to study ways and means of financing the new program. Heretofore study of proposed crop-control measures has centered on economic and administrative difficulties. But recent events tend to emphasize the acute fiscal problem involved.

The granting of corn loans appears to have been made contingent upon the status of the budget. If the Administration adjusts all of its farm aid plans so that they conform with its more important objective of balancing the budget, one formidable source of opposition will be removed. In our eighth year of Federal deficits certainly no one can take exception to the President's belief that the new farm program should be self-supporting.

A sum of $440,000,000 is already allotted to farm subsidies in the budget. It has been frequently estimated that crop control legislation would necessitate the addition of approximately $200,000,000 to this sum. That would depend entirely upon the type of legislation enacted. But in any event it is certain that the farm program contemplated by some groups would require substantial new taxes.

Enactment of processing taxes similar to those outlawed by the Supreme Court is being suggested. Presumably these would be camouflaged as general revenue levies to escape an attack upon their constitutionality. But they could not be camouflaged from the public. Housewives who are already complaining of the high cost of living would have to bear this additional burden. In short, the proposed processing levies would merely add to the already large share of the people's income which is absorbed in taxes.

That prospect is thoroughly out of keeping with the efforts of Congressional leaders to balance the budget without tapping new sources of revenue. As the need for emergency spending diminishes businessmen and consumers should be able to anticipate a gradual lowering of taxes. Certainly Congress ought to hesitate before further boosting consumer taxes to promote a second questionable venture in crop curtailment.

The sound argument that new farm legislation should be self-supporting really becomes, under present conditions, an argument against any costly system of farm subsidies.

Correcting A Costly Mistake.

Ten months after the Interstate Commerce Commission refused to extend freight rate surcharges, as requested by the railroads, it has granted substantial increases in railway tariffs. A period of costly delay has at last convinced the commission that additional revenue for the carriers is not only justifiable but also necessary.

Since the surcharges were discontinued, in the mistaken belief that the country was "back to normalcy," railway operating costs have advanced from several causes. Wage increases have been freely granted. Higher manufacturing and labor costs have raised the prices of materials and supplies. The effect of lower rates and increased costs can be clearly seen in the fact that no important group of securities declined so much in the recent stock market crash as railroad shares and junior bonds.

While removal of the rate surcharges was under consideration The Post clearly pointed out its probable consequences. It was our contention that the emergency rates should have been maintained until permanent adjustments, if they should prove necessary, could be made. After the ICC had denied the railroad's petition, the lead editorial in The Post of December 21, 1936, pronounced its decision unsatisfactory in the following words:

> The hiatus between this temporary shift and the permanent adjustment will be injurious to all the interests concerned. It will be bad for industry because shippers will be faced by the prospect of later rate changes. Apart from such interference with the orderly movement of freight, the loss of revenue by the roads resulting from even a temporary return to lower rates will be extremely serious . . .
> The majority decision reveals an astonishing indifference to the economic consequences of denying the roads funds to strengthen their credit and purchase equipment. This aspect of the question was emphasized by Commissioner Mahaffie in his dissenting opinion. "Prompt and efficient railroad service is essential," he said, "to the commercial welfare of the country. To insure it the carriers must have earnings sufficient not only adequately to maintain their properties, but to furnish a basis for credit." He approves, therefore, of an extension of the surcharges because he believes the country will suffer in the long run from the inefficient service furnished by carriers operating without reasonable profits.
> Commissioner McManamy likewise advocates retention of the emergency rates for the sake of the public welfare. He is particularly alarmed at the rapid increase in accidents largely attributable to lack of improved equipment and necessary maintenance outlays.
> In face of the strong arguments advanced by the roads and the two dissenting members of the commission, it is difficult to understand how the majority members can allege that the emergency which justified the surcharges has passed. So far as the roads are concerned, it certainly remains acute. A refusal to acknowledge its existence may cost the country a good deal more than the amount that would have to be paid in freight charges under a temporary extension arrangement.

These considerations had been ignored by the majority of the commissioners. Nor did they hasten to correct their judgment. With heedless disregard for the economic interests of the country, for the stability of values and for the continued employment of labor directly and indirectly dependent upon the purchasing power of the railroads, the commission denied the carriers relief until they were in desperate circumstances.

While there is ground for satisfaction over the changed attitude of the commission, it can fairly be charged with a large share of responsibility for the present business reaction and the demoralization of investment values.

4,000 Delinquent Boys.

The first barrage has been laid down in an attack on juvenile delinquency in the District of Columbia. The initial objective is to awaken public opinion to a realization of the number of youths drifting into crime and to the proven possibilities of reclaiming many of them. Leading the attack is the Junior Board of Commerce, supported by the Washington Criminal Justice Association.

Some 4,000 boys, of ages ranging from 12 to 17, were arrested in Washington last year. To handle their cases, there was only one special police officer. He could give his attention to only 450 of them; regular precinct officers, with neither the time nor the training for reform work, necessarily handled the rest. It is safe to say that many of the latter group would have merited a "second chance." But there were not men enough to offer it to them; moreover, the present District code permits of little discretion in juvenile cases.

It will be recalled that Congress failed to complete enactment of a modernized juvenile court bill at the last session. Presumably it will be revived next year. Preparations should be under way now to insure its passage at that time. Likewise community support ought to be forthcoming to make effective Maj. Brown's repeated request for additional policemen, some of whom would be assigned to his juvenile squad now so inadequately staffed.

The New Co-ordinator.

The exact nature of the duties assigned to James Roosevelt as contact man between the President and nearly a score of independent agencies and commissions is by no means clear. Apparently he will confer with the heads of these agencies in order to decide whether their problems are of sufficient importance to warrant an interview with the President. Officials with minor issues to discuss will presumably talk matters over with Roosevelt the younger, or some other subordinate official. This new system, we are told, will relieve the President from the pressure of killing detail and at the same time facilitate access to him by those whom he really should see.

This simple explanation leaves a number of questions unanswered. For instance, what will happen if the head of the Federal Reserve System and young Roosevelt differ about the relative importance of a question of credit policy? Will Mr. Eccles be sent away or will he be permitted to discuss his problems with the President?

Presumably the President's son will not set up his inexpert judgment against that of high Government officials in case of disagreement. Yet if reports are to be trusted the new liaison officer is expected to exercise considerable discretion in dealing with the problems of agency heads. Indeed, it is suggested that these officials will have to be rapid and persuasive talkers to break down the barrier interposed between them and the President in the person of his son.

The vague and conflicting reports of the new duties assigned to young Roosevelt in "weeding out" applicants for interviews are thoroughly confusing. And the situation is made still more bewildering by the statement that he will undertake to co-ordinate the work of various agencies to prevent duplication and overlapping. This appears to be a reorganization problem calling for legislative changes.

Some of the independent agencies, such as the FTC and the ICC, which are none too pleased with Administration plans to place them in the regular executive departments, may strongly resent the new arrangement. In any case, co-ordination of the work of administrative agencies is a matter for joint consultation by the officials directly concerned. It is not a one-man job to be taken on by an amateur.

There is another puzzling feature of this new position. In certain respects it entails duties like those assigned to the six aides for whom provision is made in the reorganization plan. However, even a Roosevelt would hardly attempt to do the work of six mystery men who, according to the Brownlow reorganization committee, should be "possessed of high competence, great physical vigor and a passion for anonymity."

No doubt a competent secretary dealing exclusively with inside Government agencies could do a great deal to simplify executive contacts, thus saving the President from needless expenditure of time and energy. Such a position, however, should be filled by a man who is experienced, diplomatic, and sound of judgment. It is very doubtful whether anybody under 30 years of age with limited experience could do this work without arousing great antagonism among older officials. Moreover, even if James Roosevelt had all the necessary qualifications for a strictly liaison job, the fact that he is the President's son makes him an utterly unsuitable appointee.

An intermediary should be a person to whom petitioners are willing to talk without constraint. Few Federal officials will feel thus free to discuss their problems and grievances with the President's son. This natural reluctance of the average man to treat a near relation of a person in authority "just like the other fellow" is one of the very important reasons for objecting to nepotism in any form.

Regardless of the exact nature of the duties assigned to James Roosevelt, therefore, he is the wrong man for the new place.

Why is it that no matter how prices and income may fluctuate, the cost of living is always about 10 per cent more than you can make?

We wish it were possible for man to hibernate. It would suit us to a T to set the alarm for half past March and go to sleep for the winter.

Example For Stockholders.

From the Chicago Tribune.

A stockholder sued the officers and directors of Swift & Co. to recover for the corporation the $3,500 which had been appropriated to purchase Farley campaign books at $250 the copy. The suit was dropped recently when Gustavus F. Swift, president of the company, personally reimbursed the corporation.

Stockholders in other corporations whose funds were used to buy the campaign books should file similar suits. The law against corporate contributions to campaign funds made the purchase of the books in the name of corporations doubly illegal as it was always immoral. The treasury of a business belongs to the stockholders, who may be adherents of any or no party. When directors use corporate funds to finance one party or another stockholders in effect are forced to contribute to a cause which many of them may disapprove. Their money is taken from them without justification or warrant.

The only excuse which directors can offer for approving such contributions is the fear that if the money is not paid the corporation will suffer at the hands of vengeful politicians. The excuse will not stand examination. If directors have a duty to defend their company against blackmailers, the duty does not include yielding to the demands of the extortionists.

Navy Day.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In commemorating Navy Day, October 27, America should pay a solemn tribute to those foreign navies which came to her aid in the critical and dark days of her history. The navies of France and Russia both contributed, one by active assistance and the other passive. In the War of Independence by virtue of the French fleet, Washington won the decisive victory at Yorktown and the United States started on her course as a great Republic.

Historians are prone to overlook the part that Russia played in American history. When England was on the verge of recognizing the Confederacy during the War of the Rebellion, the Czar of Russia dispatched a squadron of warships to the port of New York. Recognition by England of the Confederacy would have meant a divided Union, and it is not unlikely that the presence of the czar's fleet at New York changed the policy of the British government to one of definite non-intervention.

America today is at peace with the world, and her Navy, like that of England, her sister across the sea, is the guardian and advocate of peace. BUFORD A. LYNCH.

Protests Greenbelt.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Elizabeth Wilson, in a letter in your column, alleges Tugwelltown luxurious homes cost only $5,000, although the Greenbelt project is down on the Federal books as costing over $15,000,000 for the 885 homes, or over $16,000 per home. She arrives at her figure by subtracting the cost of the streets, the parking, the sidewalks and other absolutely essential parts of Tugwelltown. The streets, the sidewalks, the parks and all the other such subtracted attributes are just as necessary as are the foundations, the walls and the roofs of the 885 homes. If they are not then the New Deal is to blame for such inexcusable extravagances.

I agree absolutely with "Outraged" and absolutely disagree with Elizabeth Wilson that it is favoritism and a perversion unjustified of public funds to rent houses that cost over $16,000 tax free for $438 per year, when owners of homes in Washington have to pay almost that much in taxes for owning their own homes and, also have to pay special heavy assessments for paving, widening streets (that are not even abutting their homes) and the like. In addition a home owner has to pay insurance and for a lot of other things that the Government takes care of out of the taxpayers' (home owners) pockets for Greenbelt favorites.

Real estate bears entirely too much of the tax burden in the District of Columbia and many other cities and States. Home owning ought to be encouraged by tax exemption instead of discouragd by such heavy realty taxes and by such "show places" as Greenbelt whose occupants can get so much more for their money by renting and loaning their money to us taxridden home owners that they will never want to own a home of their own or want to get out of the favored low-bracket salaried class. Mr. Straus' Opportunity.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Under the heading "Mr. Straus' Opportunity," The Post of October 20 comments editorially on the national service which the newly-appointed administrator of the United States Housing Authority will be called upon to render. The President has indeed chosen wisely in naming Nathan Straus to administer the vast slum clearance program, and the Nation is fortunate that this successful businessman, who has had wide experience in housing matters, is going to tackle such a stupendous job.

As you have so ably pointed out, a great deal of groundwork must be done before the municipalities affected can begin to reap the benefits that will accrue to them under the housing act of 1937. But Senator Wagner and his associates, who labored long and untiringly to place this forward-looking legislation on the books, have real cause to congratulate themselves in seeing their efforts translated into brick and mortar under the expert guidance of Mr. Straus.

Your editorial mentions that "many states lack the legislation necessary to permit co-operation of their cities with the Housing Authority." There is an analogy here with the national housing act as practically no states formerly allowed banks, trust companies and other fiduciaries to lend on mortgage up to 80 per cent of the appraised value of the realty. However, the several State legislatures were quick to make laws conforming with that stipulation. In the matter of slum clearance, those States which cannot participate in the program will no doubt act to pass enabling legislation.

Reclamation of the slums, our national disgrace, is on the way for both "urban and rural communities," to quote the act; with Mr. Straus at the helm thousands of underpriviliged families will, in time, be decently housed, and let us hope that the environment which they are to leave shall be forever banished from American cities.

"Make No Promises."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Prosperity was here again in 1932 and President Hoover promised two chickens in every pot. Happy days were here again in 1936 and President Roosevelt promised to balance the budget.

Man appoints and the Lord disappoints. Moral: Make no promises. This is a lesson I learned from my mother when I was a kid.

Hoover was not given the opportunity to fulfil his promise, but Roosevelt was. What is the result? Prosperity worse confounded.

Not A Liberty Leaguer.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Hugo L. Black, the recently appointed associate justice of the Supreme Court, has taken his seat, and there is great consternation among the ranks of the self-appointed defenders of the faith and saviors of America.

It would seem that everyone possessing the intelligence above that of a moron should fully understand that all this tripe and balderdash about the former relationship of Mr. Justice Black and the Klan is a cleverly devised smoke screen of the American robber barons to further deceive and hoodwink the people; for as a matter of fact, the unfounded charges of racial prejudice and religious bigotry brought against Justice Black have been completely refuted by his splendid record in the United States Senate.

But let us presume that Mr. Justice Black is still a member of the Klan. . . . What of it? Is such membership unlawful, or unconstitutional? Is it in reality any more reprehensible to be a member of the Ku Klux Klan than it is to hold membership in the Masonic Order, the Knights of Columbus, or other secret organization? Moreover, the highly significant fact remains that Hugo L. Black has never as yet been a member of the American Liberty League, the Black Legion, the United States Chamber of Commerce, nor the Daughters of the American Revolution!

1933 And 1937.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: How President Roosevelt has the audacity (during the World War we used the term "guts") to make statements, including those with regard to our national debt, is beyond my comprehension. I feel many others will be of the same opinion.

For instance, when the national debt stood at $21,000,000,000, Mr. Roosevelt stated in his Presidential message March 10, 1933: "For three long years the Federal Government has been on the road toward bankruptcy." Then on September 24, 1937, at Cheyenne (when the national debt was approximately $52,000,000,000), the President said: "Do not let anyone deceive you—the Government of the United States is not going broke."

Hymen's Harp.

A reader of the Manchester Guardian recently forwarded to that estimable British journal a clipping from an American paper yclept the Nebraska Call, with the observation that the extract illustrates how "infinitely far behind" us the British are in their "manipulation of the English language for complimentary purposes." The Middle Western publication rhapsodized as follows:

The bride is a woman of wonderful fascination and remarkable attractiveness, for, with a manner as enchanting as the wand of a siren and a disposition as sweet as the colors of flowers, and a spirit as joyous as the caroling birds, and a mind as brilliant as the glittering tresses that adorn the brow of winter, and with a heart as pure as the dewdrops trembling in a coronet of violets, she will make the home of her husband a paradise of enchantment, where the heaven-tuned harp of Hymen shall send forth those sweet strains of felicity that thrill the sense with the ecstatic pulsing of rhythmic rapture.

We haven't seen anything to equal that apostrophe to a Midwestern bride since we run across a glowing passage in the Podunk Bugle, eloquently and affectionately limning the virtdosity of Farmer Si Hayrick as a raiser of high-grade hawgs.

Suggested Program For Congress.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A growing contingent of voters of both parties is fed up on more spoils-conducted bureaus in Washington, bitten with humanitarian zeal to reshape the universe.

No better chance will ever confront the Congress to match its patriotic anti-court-pack fight of last session, and recommend its services to 1938 voters by promotion of a real—not bogus—business recovery, than the coming extra session affords, if it will—

1. Balance, promptly, the Federal budget.
2. Moderate, for effect this year, the undistributed profits tax.
3. Restore emergency railroad freight surcharges, to prevent unemployment, already increased by higher wage grants, from further increase next spring.
4. Free industry and business from the menace of legislative jugglery dictated from higher up; and offset, by its independence of action, the sniping and innuendos of ghosted fireside chats.
5. Recognize that greater hope of common good may reside in "brigands of business" and "princes of pillage," et al (selfishly intent on profit) than in a muddled political bureaucracy swamped by its own blunders and gripped by petty "hates" and antagonisms.
6. Oppose Treasury raiding schemes that impose new tax levies on enterprise. All future half-fried projects, or enlargements of present ones, to be consigned where reasoning citizens have long since tossed them—the scrap heap and oblivion.

Which preliminaries attended to, the "human budget" will quickly demonstrate an astonishing ability to balance itself.

"Call Me Happy."

WE were standing on the dock, looking up a long ladder-stairway that led to the deck of the coast line freighter, Maiden Creek. Suddenly there appeared at my side a fellow who was already smiling when, turning, I saw him. He tipped his sea-beaten cap gently and said, "It's all right to go on up. Here, let me take your bags." And although there were three heavy ones, he had them under his arm at once, and was half way up the swinging stairs as we set out to follow.

When we reached the top he was standing beside the bags he had lined up on the deck. He was a little sawed off in stature, I noted, yet he was stocky enough to be the AB I later learned he was.

"Just call me Happy," he said, still smiling; "I'm known all over the world as Happy."

He was about to go back down the stairs—the boat was still loading—but with one hand on the rail he lingered. "I'm known all over the world, all right," he said to me, "I bet you don't know how many miles I've traveled on the sea."

I said I didn't.

"Well, guess," urged Happy.

"Fifty thousand miles," I guessed. Audrey guessed "seventy-five thousand."

"Both wrong," announced Happy. "It's 103,000."

Audibly we marveled at that, and Happy responded with another question, "How many years do you think I've been at sea?"

I ventured "ten years," and Audrey "thirteen."

"Both wrong again," said Happy, and now his smile had widened to a grin—like that of a boxer who has just followed a right jab to the nose with a telling left hook to the jaw. "It's 12 years."

For the next 10 minutes we guessed the answers to all the questions Happy could think of as to the life and works of himself. "How old am I?" "How tall am I?" "What's my job on this boat?" "How much do I weigh?" "What (nationality) am I?" "What time do I get up in the morning?" "How many hours do I work a day?" We guessed—but we were wrong. We didn't get a single answer right. Finally Happy turned the questioning on us: "Ever been seasick?" he asked.

There could be only one answer to this, "No, of course not, Happy," I said.

"Well, I'll bet you will be this trip. Probably hit some rough weather down the coast," said Happy, and with that he disappeared down the side of the ship.

We weren't out of New York a day before it appeared that Happy had put his quiz to nearly all the passengers. We found they had all missed the answers—no one had disappointed Happy by giving him correctly the figures about the extent of his travels, his height, weight or age correctly. We were just considering tipping off the one couple not approached by Happy to the right answers when Jennings, the mate, came along.

"Funny fellow you got there—that Happy," I said "Quite a fan for questions and answers."

"Yes, he is a little funny," said Jennings, "You know, I wouldn't be surprised if he's a little touched in the head." Then Jennings, speaking confidentially, told us about a malady known among freighter crews as "tankeritis." "It comes," said Jennings, "from working on oil tankers—you know, the fumes—they get you. And Happy worked on a tanker before he came aboard this ship."

(When we consulted Steward Fleming about Jenning's theory he stopped his pantry work short; said solemnly, "There is nothing to that. I ought to know—I shipped with a tanker myself for seven years. And look at me.")

For seven days Happy sniffed storm in the air, and he never left off suggesting sickening chaos that might come to our physical well-beings when the ship started rolling. Of an afternoon he would pause before my deck chair as I read, look me over from behind that smile of his, then ask, "Feeling all right?" Another afternoon Happy found a half dozen of us out on deck sun-napping, or otherwise lazily enjoying the blue Atlantic. "Hm-m-m-m," he mused, "All seasick."

We left the Maiden Creek at New Orleans, and I saw Happy last as we waited for the outside stairway to be lowered for us to land. Happy was up over the fo'castle helping dock the ship. He was, it appeared, hopelessly entangled in the coils of a great rope that Jennings was yelling to have heaved ashore.

It was rumored going down that Happy would not be kept on the crew, that he'd be discharged at Mobile. But he wasn't. Yesterday we had a letter from Edmund and Jenny Hays who stayed on the Maiden Creek for the trip back north.

"Hurricane warnings twice a day caused orders for full steam ahead around Florida," wrote Jenny, "so that we ended up 12 hours ahead of the storm, and didn't get to see a real hurricane. But this didn't bring us home any sooner. It seems that when Mr. Jennings set the course at 42, Happy (assigned to the wheel) would steer anywhere from 35 to 50. At times we could actually see the poor old Maiden Creek zig-zagging up the Atlantic."

Fair Enough

'Gansett Closed.

IT MAY BE HARD to believe, but Robert Quinn, Governor of Rhode Island, a State of the American Union, has called out the National Guard to execute his personal reprisal against the publisher of a paper which called him a swearword liar in print.

The soldiers, 300 strong at first but reduced to about 50 at this writing, are maintaining nominal martial law in the vicinity of the Narragansett race track, operated by a cunning and audacious little promoter from Massachusetts named Walter O'Hara, who prospered so highly in the horse business that he jumped into Rhode Island politics and bought a newspaper with which to advance his political program.

Mr. O'Hara apparently wants to become the political boss of the State, which, though small, is very rich and likewise very corrupt. He easily captured the municipal admiration of Pawtucket, where the horse park lies.

Knowing this, Gov. Quinn was afraid the local police might attack the State police if he moved them in to close the race track in retaliation for the published insult. But he was determined to punish O'Hara, whom he described in a radio address as "an unscrupulous and ruthless individual," so he invoked the authority of his office to declare martial law and send in the soldiers. He says he figures that if he keeps the track closed until November 11, the last day of the scheduled season, O'Hara will be out so much money that he will lose his paper and possibly control of the track as well.

THERE ARE five charges in the complaint against O'Hara. They accuse him of embezzlement, misuse of horsemen's funds, interference with the racing authorities, obstruction of the auditors and "blasphemous and libelous attacks upon the Governor." The last item is the one which brings into issue the freedom of the press, and Gov. Quinn frankly says that though his political career be ruined he will not permit the track to operate as long as it is controlled by the man who called him a swearword liar.

Of course, the personal and political enmity amounts to more than just that. The Governor also says he has received threats against his children from persons whom he associates with the race track; he says two justices of the State Supreme Court are partial to the horse-park faction, and he insists that O'Hara's paper is of such a character as to deserve no sympathy from those who cherish the freedom of the printed word.

And it is, in very truth, an unconventional paper, a throw-back to the days of personal journalism when the editor kept a sixer in the half-open drawer of his desk and Governors who took offense went down to the shop and did their shelling in person, scorning the services of the National Guard. It does not express the noblest instincts of the profession, and journalists priding themselves on their ethics and taste might regret an occurrence which, for the defense of an important principle, places them on the same side of the barricade with Mr. O'Hara.

GOV. QUINN, however, need not be viewed with alarm as a successor to Huey P. Long, for he is distinctly not the type. He makes a very bad speech, he lacks Huey's shocking effrontery and ingenuity in argument, he is not given to showmanship or swaggering, and his predicament boils down to the simple fact that a very exasperating enemy has driven him to a foolish act. His racing commission, which has authority over the horse park, sustained the charges against O'Hara and rescinded his license, but, on O'Hara's appeal, the State Supreme Court reversed this action on a technicality without going into the merits of the accusations.

The law requires, however, that the track operators must file with the commission ten days before the start of a meeting the names of the racing officials for that meet, and this O'Hara failed to do, because the Supreme Court decision on the original suspension was not delivered until the deadline had passed. So, technically, that is the reason for the closing of the track by force of arms, although the Governor admits that O'Hara himself is the real objection, and the complaints list as one of his offenses a published affront to him.

Horse racing was legalized in Rhode Island in 1934 for the first time in the history of one of the oldest States and has been a source of virulent political infection.

Not only have the usual following of underworld talent flocked into Rhode Island, but an enterprise always previously regarded as a vice and tolerated only as a source of necessary public revenue has acquired so much money and such an arrogant feeling of political muscle that it now threatens to subdue all decency and convert the little State into a Northern Miami, with horse rooms and gambling houses on every highway and more or less candid grafters in many public offices.

Providence.

RHODE ISLAND, with a long history of turbulence and nonconformism, is once again demonstrating its fondness for violent solutions to its political problems. The contest between Walter E. O'Hara, manager of the Narragansett race track, and Governor Robert E. Quinn over the operation of the track in Pawtucket is on the surface a battle over racing policies and practices. More fundamentally however, it is a struggle for control of the leadership of the Democratic Party in Rhode Island.

The recent closing of Narragansett by the National Guard under the Governor's orders is the long-awaited culmination of a dissension in the ranks of the party which dates well back in the administration of former Gov. Green. For O'Hara's ally in the dispute with Quinn is the Mayor of Pawtucket, Thomas McCoy, an anti-Quinn man of long standing.

In the early days of the Green administration, McCoy was appointed to the office of budget director and comptroller. He fell out of favor, however, and so out of office. From that time on, he was a persistent critic of the Green administration over the distribution of patronage. His chief talking point was that the Italians and French-Canadians who make up a large part of the population of Pawtucket, were discriminated against by the Green administration in the matter of appointments.

Pawtucket Mayor Rules Job Placements At Track.

AS ONE of Pawtucket's most powerful political figures, McCoy has exercised considerable influence in the disposition of jobs at the Naragansett track. Officers of the State administration have on more than one occasion sought to dispossess McCoy of these perquisites. Even before the elections of last fall, the State Democratic committee made evident its opinion that the race track was a matter of State-wide concern, and that it was inequitable for McCoy to regard it as his personal fief. But the latter has never surrendered squatters' rights in track patronage, Narragansett being located in his home town.

Secure in the knowledge of his strength in Pawtucket, McCoy campaigned last fall for the office of Governor in an effort to unhorse the Green administration. The Democratic nomination for this office went, however, to Quinn, who at the time was lieutenant governor. McCoy was conclusively defeated in the nominating convention by a vote of 170 to 30, but solaced himself by becoming Mayor of Pawtucket.

In this office, McCoy has been in even a better position to resist the influence of the Quinn faction in Narragansett affairs. He has been assisted in this opposition by the harmony which has prevailed in his relations with O'Hara. Coincidentally, the latter has become an important political force in his own right. He maintains a newspaper in Providence which prints political matter as well as racing results and track gossip, and recent disclosures have indicated that O'Hara was a contributor to various campaign funds last fall.

Squabble Began With O'Hara Kept From Track.

THE CURRENT showdown which finds Quinn and O'Hara in extremist positions started off rather mildly. O'Hara was ordered by the Governor to stay away from the track because of alleged infractions of track rules. This order was ignored with the assistance of a squad of Pawtucket policemen. The State Racing Commission then revoked the license of the track to operate. O'Hara got a court order vacating this action. The track has since been closed by the militia and the region of the track put under martial law. In answer to this, there has been some agitation, but little responsive sentiment, for the impeachment of the Governor.

In this rather sorry demonstration of hair-trigger tempers and abuse of the democratic process, certain conclusions stand out. The first is that the issue seems destined to be fought out to the proverbial bitter end. What started out as a more or less temperate disagreement between the Governor and O'Hara has resulted in the use or threat of extreme sanctions. The employment of troops by Quinn and threats of impeachment by the manager of Narragansett would seem to be commitments which leave little room for compromise. It is a safe conclusion that the Governor's political future is involved in the Narragansett war and hence the future of the Democratic party in Rhode Island.

The second conclusion is a corollary of the first. The readiness with which the Governor has used armed force to gain his present advantage over O'Hara is regrettable, to say the least. The conflict is essentially a struggle between the governments of Providence and Pawtucket and has all the appearance of a rivalry between city-states of Renaissance Italy, even to the use of armed bands in the hire of the local lords. Martial law was imposed upon the Narragansett area presumably because the State police, some weeks ago, had not succeeded in removing O'Hara, surrounded by the Pawtucket police, from the track.

Public Grows Cynical Of Public Authority.

SUCH ACTIONS tend to foster a cynical contempt for public authority. Among race track patrons, the opinion seems to be fairly widespread that political interferences with the operation of the track are being animated by personal motives. On the other hand, reformist groups and church organizations seem to accept the spectacular engagement between Providence and Pawtucket as evidence of the corrupting influence of legalized gambling upon government.

Whatever the outcome may be, it seems certain that the vestments of political authority will suffer a loss in brightness.

In the meantime, the business which the Narragansett track would ordinarily enjoy is being diverted to the Rockingham track in New Hampshire. Massachusetts patrons are driving north instead of south for their racing. Gov. Quinn promises to keep the Narragansett track closed until O'Hara leaves.

Rhode Island's undeclared war needs a peace-maker.

2 Rowing Nations Accept U. S. Offer To Define Borders

By the Associated Press.

The governments of Honduras and Nicaragua last night accepted the offer of the United States, Venezuela and Costa Rica to seek a peaceful settlement of their border dispute.

Frank P. Corrigan, whom president Roosevelt designated to represent the United States in mediation proceedings, and who recently was named as United States Minister to Panama, said yesterday he had not yet been informed where he would meet the mediation delegates of Costa Rica and Venezuela to begin a study of the boundary controversy.

Longshoremen Strike Against 2 Ship Lines

New York, Oct. 22 (U.P.).—A strike against two coastwise shipping lines, affecting 500 New York employes, was called by the International Longshoremen's Association today, a day after settlement of a longshoremen's strike in Southern ports.

Joseph P. Ryan, international president of the association, said the strike was called because the Clyde Mallory and the Savannah Lines refused to accept freight and indicated they were "closing down" shipping to avoid granting wage increases to the union.

Storm Signal?

By

Germany Baits Czechoslovakia.

IT IS NO new thing for the regimented German press to be inveighing against Czechoslovakia. That safe sport has been indulged in by Nazi organs for a long time. But never in the past has journalistic abuse of the last remaining democracy in Central Europe reached such lurid heights as now.

The German press does nothing without official inspiration. It is an organ upon which Hitler and Goebbels are free to play. Every sentence of every column in every newspaper published in the Third Reich, therefore, reflects the government's point of view.

Thus, when a certain action of the Czechoslovak authorities is denounced in the German press as a "barbarous provocation" that Germany "does not propose to tolerate," it is the German government itself that is speaking through its journalistic Charley McCartheys.

No wonder, then, that many are now convinced that a Nazi putsch in Czechoslovakia is in the offing.

THIS IS TO BE doubted for more than one reason, indicated below. Nonetheless, the German press campaign against Czechoslovakia is not without its ominous significance. For it reflects anew Hitler's restless and devious diplomacy.

The incident that gave rise to the German attack was a minor one. The "Fuehrer" of the German minority of Czechoslovakia, Konrad Henlein, who sprang into world headlines when his party, the Sudeten Deutschen, polled 1,294,000 votes in the general elections of May, 1935, and won 44 seats in the lower house of the Czechoslovak parliament, returned to Czechoslovakia this week from London. His followers sought to stage a demonstration in his honor. This the authorities prevented. Some minor scuffles followed. But in the German press all this was exaggerated into a tremendous episode tending to prove how bitterly the German element in Czechoslovakia is being persecuted.

THIS IS EYEWASH and German editors know it. If their hearts bleed over the plight of their brothers in Bohemia, it is because they have received orders from up above to display such emotions. For precisely the same reasons they have been strangely silent over the plight of the German minority in Poland and the German minority in Italy, where even the tombstones of the Tyrolese have been de-Germanized by order of Hitler's great and good friend —Mussolini.

The question then arises as to why the plight of Czechoslovakia's Germans is of such interest to the Nazi regime. The obvious answer is, and it has frequently been given, that Czechoslovakia is an obstacle in the way of Germany's east and central European ambitions and must, therefore, be smashed. The German minority in Czechoslovakia, numbering over 3,000,000, is an effective lever for the achievement of that purpose.

IT IS DIFFICULT to believe, however, that a direct military assault on Czechoslovakia is contemplated by the German government. Such action would cause France to come to the aid of its ally. That, in turn, would bring Russia in on Czechoslovakia's side. And Czechoslovakia, too, has an army and air force that must be reckoned with. The Chinese at Shanghai, the Spanish loyalists at Madrid have shown how powerful is the defense in modern warfare against even a seemingly overwhelming attacking force.

German policy with regard to Czechoslovakia, it may be concluded, does not envisage the immediate possibility of warlike action. It is not yet ready to unloose another world war. Besides, what Germany wants from Czechoslovakia can be secured, many Nazis are convinced, by other than warlike means.

The Danzig example is, in this particular, illuminating. For Danzig has now been made an integral, if not a legal, part of the Third Reich without recourse to war. This was brought about by means of fostering Hitlerism in the Free City and employing there the same tactics that Hitler and his henchmen employed in Germany.

• • • •

CZECHOSLOVAKIA is, of course, not Danzig. While the Germans constitute an important minority in the republic they are, nonetheless, a minority. A putsch by Henlein might not get very far. To be sure, a large part of the Sudeten Germans live near the border. They are in a position to receive supplies from abroad. But that same border is the concentration point for a considerable portion of the Czechoslovak army.

What the Nazi government is driving at, therefore, is a grant of autonomy to the Czechoslovakian Germans which would mean the extension to Czechoslovak soil of the totalitarian system to be found in Germany. Once this occurred, the diplomatic and military paralysis of Czechoslovakia would inevitably follow.

Indeed, it is more than a coincidence that the latest German press attack against the little republic occurred immediately after Henlein made his demands for autonomy status for the Sudeten German group. It was a barrage that was designed to demoralize the Prague authorities and compel them, out of fear of war, to give way to the Nazi demand. But there is no indication that this strategy has any chance of succeeding.

• • • •

THERE IS ONE other reason for the virulence of the latest German press campaign against Czechoslovakia. The Henlein movement is showing signs of ebbing.

The depression hit Czechoslovakia hard. It hit the German minority within Czechoslovakia particularly hard. As a consequence, the discontent of that minority, already considerable, flared to new heights.

Since 1935, however, when Henlein scored his great electoral successes, the depression has lifted in Czechoslovakia. Besides, the Prague government has begun to make considerable concessions to the German minority and thus remove their legitimate grievances.

It is much too early to say, of course, that the Henlein movement is near collapse. But even a relative diminution of its importance in the Czechoslovak scheme of things would be a blow to the Third Reich.

In the first place, such a development would reveal the fact that Hitler's siren call has an ephemeral potency with Germans who live in a state of freedom. And, secondly, it would interfere very materially with Germany's plan to use Czechoslovakia as a stepping stone to eastern Europe and the Balkans.

No More Ladies

By William Lyon Phelps

"Dol Bonner."

It is not for readers to dictate to writers, not even to their favorite ones. Authors ought to write only what pleases them. True enough; but readers do not have to share an author's opinion of its comparative merit.

• • • •

Thus, Rex Stout, by many regarded as America's foremost living writer of detective fiction, who has delighted us with tales in which the fat detective, Nero Wolfe, is so ably seconded by Mr. Goodwin (it is not possible to judge of the relative inspiration of liquid refreshment, for Wolfe drinks beer and Goodwin drinks milk). Mr. Stout, I say, has now chosen to give us a novel in which the detective is a woman, Dol Bonner by name.

This story is fittingly called "The Hand in the Glove," but I like much better the situations with the orchidious Nero Wolfe, because they are handled without gloves.

• • • •

This new book is clever, ingenious, complicated; but it is cluttered up with fashionable and wealthy ladies; no true boy wants girls mussing up his games. I will say to the author what Macbeth said: "Bring forth men-children only!"

Tom McCarthy

Attends A Press Conference.

SOMEHOW it held an unreal quality. It savored too much of the theatrical.

Some of the press correspondents greeted each other in low tones, but the atmosphere never achieved informality. It was simply unreal.

TOM McCARTHY.

All the chairs beside the long green table had been filled except for the one at the head, from which the "great man" would give out his interview. The photographers lounged uneasily in the corners fingering their cameras and adjusting flash bulbs.

When most of the three dozen chairs in the room had been occupied, the publicity man came in and announced that the "great man" would soon be present. The publicity man assured with an air of sharing a secret that the "great man" had made him privy to this information by calling through the closed door of his apartment. The gentlemen of the press nodded sagely. You might have thought that they were waiting for a Lazarus to come forth.

The agent had scarcely finished reiterating the date of the projected lecture when the "great man" came through the door. He walked with a careful speed, which allowed for a slight bow. From the doorway to his chair he accompanied his progress with murmurs of "So sorry"—"Waiting for someone to fetch me down." When he took his seat the correspondents resumed theirs.

He leaned forward against the table, his fingers knitting together lightly for a moment. He wore a gracefully tailored blue suit. It wasn't the suit of a prophet. Nor was his carefully barbered mustache the trapping of a prophet. He was undoubtedly a delightful, worldly gentleman with a crisp diction, which gave quality to a reedy voice.

Then because he was H. G. Wells, and had written so many books that he had forgotten the titles, everyone leaned forward to catch the words projected from that burly frame on that startlingly, reedy voice.

• • • •

MR. WELLS was charming. There could be little doubt about that. He didn't wait for questions.

"I suppose first thing you'll want to know if I've been here before," Mr. Wells said, with the genial camaraderie of a fellow gentleman of the press.

He started off with a quick and easy assurance touched with a knowing "but-what-does-it-all-matter" style of delivery.

"Yes, I was here as far back as 1906 . . . after writing a book everybody has forgotten." Mr. Wells' modesty brought forth a chuckle from the journalists.

"It was something about . . . Americans and the Future . . . I said two things then . . . that there was a drift toward socialism . . . inadequate civil service . . . not bad . . . 1906." Mr. Wells smiled and the tall, young lady on the wall side of the table rolled her eyes in a gesture of proper appreciation.

Mr. Wells dipped into the field of education and the intellect and there was something in the tone of the one-time professor of biology. The ladies and gentlemen of the press maintained a respectful silence. And several were seen to look studiedly serious. The class had really come to order.

"Life," said Mr. Wells, "is getting so complicated . . . we can't get along without intellectual organization . . . working toward that end now. A changing world . . . everything changing . . . except one thing. Universities . . . still giving out degrees . . . holding lectures in the classrooms . . . just as they did hundreds of years ago. Something must be done . . . in the organization of knowledge. Am working on that myself."

Nobody asked Mr. Wells just how the knowledge of the world needed to be organized. It wasn't quite clear as to just what sort "intellectual organization" was necessary. But Mr. Wells said so, so it went down on the pads for future reference.

• • • •

MR. WELLS talked about Mr. Roosevelt, reiterated his admiration for the Chief Executive, admitted that he saw no signs of dictatorial ambitions in the President, and brought down the house, by anticipating objections to his open statement of critical reactions to America. "Possessed of an American characteristic," said Mr. Wells, ". . . asked for my opinion . . . I give it . . . American characteristic . . . I refuse to shut up."

Everyone laughed very heartily at Mr. Wells' informality. Everyone was delighted that when faced by questioners, or moved by the spirit to speak, he "refused to shut up." Mr. Wells made no mention of his lecture fees.

Mr. Wells expressed himself genially, and graciously on everything. Told the young lady in the corner that rugged individualism didn't build this Nation, but rather that it was the result of opportunity. Also we were fortunate that certain inventions came along at the proper time. We could understand that we had cast off the yoke of England at the proper time. The inventions had come at the proper time. Mr. Wells did not note that in retrospect all things happened at the "proper time."

Still everyone was charmed by Mr. Wells, and it cannot be denied that he was a gracious host. With an audience of news readers represented by the assemblage of the press, he touched on his ghost stories, the world war of the future and the deficiency of the English Civil Service.

However, his was a rather disappointing admission, that he didn't want to hear much more about his prophecy of war in 1940. And that in interviews he had covered himself from almost every angle. Laughingly, he admitted that he had said that it would come, that it might come, and that it wouldn't occur.

Also, it was a rather disconcerting admission that "an author shouldn't be held responsible for a statement made more than ten years before," when confessing that he didn't recall, and wouldn't confirm an opinion expressed in a preface to Tono-Bungay.

Operators Split, U. S. Steps In to Fix Coal Prices

Commission Intervenes 4 Weeks After Parley Passes Deadline.

Failure of soft coal operators in the Appalachian field to reach an agreement on co-ordinated prices led the Federal Coal Commission to take over the job itself yesterday.

The Appalachian field produces about 70 per cent, or 300,000,000 tons a year, of the Nation's soft coal.

Under the Guffey coal control act, producers' district boards were ordered by the commission last August to co-ordinate minimum prices and to equalize competitive conditions among producers serving a common consuming market. The deadline for the co-ordinating agreement was September 23.

When the operators admitted they were unable to get together four weeks after the deadline, the commission invoked its powers to complete the task with its own experts.

Chairman Charles F. Hosford, jr., said the operators have a tendency to "do nothing unless they are compelled to do it," and declared "the industry can not be stabilized until these prices are made effective."

Co-ordination of prices is preliminary to the actual promulgation of minimum price schedules for the entire industry.

Coal men in the Capital, conceding that industrial consumers are getting the benefit of present unstabilized conditions in the industry, where coal is selling for less than the cost of production, said they hoped the commission would give them minimum prices for a Christmas present.

School Textbooks Cause 'Illiteracy,' Dr. Hutchins Says

New Concord, Ohio, Oct. 22 (A.P.).—A textbook, "racket," President Robert M. Hutchins, of the University of Chicago, told an education conference here today, "has despoiled us of our intellectual heritage."

"No books that are any good appear in the elementary or high school curriculum," he declared at the William Rainey Harper Memorial Educational Conference, at Muskingum College.

"It is perfectly possible to graduate from a good American college without reading a single great book in its entirety.

"We must be appalled at the illiteracy of our pupils. They have read nothing. They do not know how to read. They cannot write or speak. They cannot think.

"Since some of them come to us with good native equipment we must concede that it is their education that is at fault."

Fear of Japanese Sweeps Australia

Sydney, Australia, Oct. 22 (A.P.).—Increased fear of Japanese expansion, a result of the Chinese-Japanese conflict, today made national defense a major issue in the general election for Australia's federal parliament, to be held tomorrow.

The government, headed by Prime Minister J. A. Lyons, has favored concentrating on naval defense. The Labor opposition advocated stronger air forces. Informed political observers believed the government would win, but with a reduced majority.

Text of Secretary Hull's Talk

Excerpts from the address of the Honorable Cordell Hull, Secretary of State, at the University of Toronto, in Toronto, Canada, yesterday, follow:

Order within a community or a nation must necessarily be based upon a general observance of law by the individual citizens. Let such observance waver through a flouting of the existing laws by any substantial portion of the community or Nation, and the whole structure of civilized existence in that community or nation will become impaired and will ultimately disintegrate. All the immeasurable benefits conferred by social organization will then be brought down in ruin, and man will again revert to what we are now accustomed to regard as barbarism.

Theoretically, a nation can isolate itself from the rest of the world. But just as in the case of an individual who would lead a hermit existence and of a family or a community which attempts to segregate itself, an inexorable price must be paid, and, in the end, paid by individuals through a lowering of their material, moral, and spiritual standards.

Sanctity of Pledges.

There must be a firmly established sense of mutual respect and consideration of nation for nation. The very essence of an international agreement is destroyed, if any one party to it arrogates to itself a position of superiority with regard to the other parties, or the right, solely by its own decision, to denounce it or to alter the application of its terms.

There must be a firm belief in the inviolability of the pledged word. International law is not enforceable in the same sense as domestic law. The observance of the duties which it imposes, and the safeguarding of the rights which it confers, rest primarily upon voluntarily accepted self-discipline on the part of the nations which are parties to it.

There must be a willingness to adjust differences by peaceful means—without the exaction of victory or the infliction of humiliation. No conflict is really settled unless the terms of its settlement are reasonably acceptable to both sides.

International order may be impaired in many ways.

Widespread violation of treaties or agreements which embody the law of nations will quickly bring the very concept of such law into disrepute and destroy its immense usefulness. Suspicion and distrust will lead nations into courses of action, harmful alike to themselves and to others.

Economic Isolation.

Economic policies directed not toward the promotion of mutually beneficial commercial and financial intercourse among nations, but toward the wresting of apparent immediate advantages at the expense of long-range benefits, inevitably push nations in the direction of isolation or other forms of economic warfare. This, in turn, inexorably results in increasing economic and social strain within nations, which may lead to a break-down of orderly processes of government and may even lend the appearance of attractiveness to military adventures. Economic warfare only too frequently is the precursor of armed conflict.

Interference by one nation in the domestic affairs of another, refusal by a nation to recognize and respect the independence, sovereignty, and territorial integrity of another, represent still other types of lawlessness in international relations which destroy order based on law. They, too, frequently result in armed conflict.

No matter what form it assumes, and no matter from what causes it springs, war represents the most complete negation of order in both the internal and the international life of nations. Armed conflict disrupts and destroys all those numerous relationships which advance and ennoble the lives of individuals and of nations. It harnesses to the chariot of its death-dealing fury the energies and abilities which should be devoted to the promotion of human welfare. It draws irresistibly into its vortex of destruction the material resources of mankind. It sweeps aside moral and spiritual values cherished zealously through periods of peace. It lowers every standard of civilized existence.

War Injuries All.

Under modern conditions, no nation escapes the repercussions of a major armed conflict anywhere in the world. However far they may be removed from the seat of actual fighting, all nations feel their morale weakened by the horror of war and their well-being impaired by the processes of disruption and ruin which spread in ever-widening circles from the territories being laid waste by war. Once the engines of war are brought into action in any portion of the earth, there is no security, no confidence, no buoyancy of energy or spirit anywhere.

There is a grim paradox in the trends which are so clearly discernible today. As civilization moves to higher and higher levels, as the march of progress opens wider and wider horizons of material and cultural advancement, war becomes more relentlessly cruel, more thorough and effective in its unrestrained savagery.

Yet in this very paradox, in this soul-shattering contrast, there are seeds of hope. No more than a community or a nation can the world today base its existence in part on order and in part on chaos, in part on law and in part on lawlessness. And just as, sooner or later, the outraged conscience of a community or a nation sets into motion forces which re-establish order under law, so, I firmly believe, the outraged conscience of mankind will set into motion forces which will create, in the sphere of international relations, unshakeable order based on law.

Duke's Visit Ends; Parting of Wallis And Hitler Warm

Berchtesgaden, Germany, Oct. 22 (A.P.).—Chancellor Adolf Hitler played host to the Duke and Duchess of Windsor today, his face wreathed in smiles. The couple visited him for two hours in his country home in the climax of their 13-day tour of Germany.

Hitler showed them around the estate after a 20-minute talk with the former British sovereign. They were served tea on the balcony.

Members of the entourage reported the duchess and Der Fuehrer became fast friends. He bave rer became fast friends. He gave both of her hands in his in saying a long good-by.

GENERAL MOTORS

Congratulates

CHEVROLET

ON ITS GREAT NEW LINE OF CARS FOR 1938

The new Chevrolets, now on display, are the most beautiful and desirable Chevrolets ever built; and again, as for twenty-seven years, the Chevrolet trade-mark is The Symbol of Savings

General Motors takes special pride and pleasure in inviting the attention of the motor car buying public to the new series of Chevrolet motor cars for 1938.

Because we believe it will be apparent to everyone who sees these new cars that the builders of Chevrolet have surpassed all their previous accomplishments in producing motor cars that are excellent to own and economical to run.

For twenty-seven years, Chevrolet has specialized in lifting motoring standards up while keeping motoring costs down. For twenty-seven years, the Chevrolet trade-mark has been the symbol of savings. All of which is emphatically true again for 1938, because Chevrolet has made low cost mean more in terms of quality this year than ever before in its history.

You will find, when you examine the new 1938 Chevrolets, that they are bigger-looking, more substantial-looking, more massive-looking —with poise and distinction ordinarily associated only with luxury cars.

You will find that they are much more beautiful both in the Modern-Mode Styling of their new All-Silent, All-Steel Bodies and in the tasteful appointments of their new Art-Color Interiors.

You will find that they have that full range of quality features, including Perfected Hydraulic Brakes, Knee-Action* with Shockproof Steering, and Fisher No Draft Ventilation, which distinguishes Chevrolet as the modern car of low price.

And you will also find that the new Chevrolets fulfill all Chevrolet traditions of economy, which means that they are not only economical to buy, but also extremely economical to operate and maintain.

We of General Motors are proud to share sponsorship of motor cars so truly outstanding in beauty, in quality and in value.

We cordially invite you to inspect the new Chevrolets at your nearest Chevrolet dealer's showroom, today or at your earliest convenience.

*Knee-Action and Shockproof Steering on Master De Luxe models only.

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

Apparently those new matinee idols of the Supreme Court are destined to play to capacity houses this season. . . . Well, most of the justices are a lot more fascinating than George Arliss . . . They could get $3.30 a seat.

• • • •

As they file in, your first impression is that the nine justices are not quite so godlike as you had expected. . . . But after they get their weight off their feet divinity mantles their brows.

• • • •

Justice Hughes is patriarchal vigor and clarity incarnate. . . . He could sit for a modern painting of Jehovah with his beard trimmed and in the pink of condition.

• • • •

Cardozo reminds me of the wizard Merlin, whom I almost saw in my grade school days. . . . He follows proceedings with an almost supernatural contemplative alertness. He's the sphinx-like one.

"—5½ to 3½ for the angels"

Stone is the ideal American type. . . . In the geographies his face would be labeled "typically American," which usually means ideal. . . . Rugged, and hostile to hair-splitting.

• • • •

Sutherland's little beard and his precarious perch on the edge of his seat leaning forward remind you of a mountain goat prepared to be shrewd and ultra-sound in every move.

• • • •

McReynolds masks his face successfully. . . . It would be interesting to inveigle him into a game of Truth. . . . His profile is not quite so inscrutable . . . He seems to control a bit of a temper.

• • • •

Brandeis is the medieval scholar, with compassion etched in every line. . . . On the bench he seems 20 years younger than he is. . . . A streamlined Socrates.

• • • •

Butler is the sort who might be a great guy to his cronies at the club, but rather difficult for the unknown stranger . . . The perfect apostle of things as they are. To him this is the best of all possible worlds.

• • • •

Roberts is another who would be recognized as an American in Timbuctoo or Piccadilly . . . The cautious guardian of an open mind . . . Dubious about spectacular innovation, though.

• • • •

Black—it will be fascinating to watch that eager, sophomoric countenance change gradually to the Olympian visage now worn by seven of his colleagues, as expediency vanishes and he sits more comfortably on high.

"—as quaint as pacifist generals"

They do not give any impression of age, senility or feebleness . . . Rather they seem supernally vigorous and alert, vastly encouraging to the youth who fears his seventies.

• • • •

What the court needs is a peppy announcer to dramatize and clarify its cryptic pronouncements: "The Nine Solomons have just thumbed down Elmer Zilch's demand for gold shekels"—that is, if its moderated performance happens to bore you.

• • • •

If you are in a contemplative mood, though, the Nine are the best show in town, as they file in with the hands of the clock straight up . . . The President has put them over; one of the best press agent jobs in history.

• • • •

I hope Mr. Roosevelt's sense of the fitness of things will lead him to keep at least three reactionaries on the court always. . . . Even if he has to appoint Al Smith or a Dupont.

• • • •

A court composed entirely of liberals would be as silly as an army staff composed entirely of pacifists . . . We need some tories to save us from hop-skipping into Utopia on our noses.

• • • •

No one ever hopskipped anywhere without skinning his knees . . . But a 5½ to 3½ majority for the side of the angels is the best score since we got kicked out of Eden.

2 Seriously Hurt In Car-Bus Crash

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Oct. 22.—R. M. Allport, 65, this city, was seriously injured, and Miss Lucy Kneisly, also of this city, seriously hurt late yesterday when the car which Allport was driving ran into a standing school bus at Bunker Hill, 10 miles south of here on the State highway.

The bus had stopped to discharge school children. None in the bus was hurt. Neither Paul Spillman nor his mother, this city, in the Allport car, were hurt. The bus driver was Thomas L. Shirley.

A bus driver, two teachers and six students were killed when this streamlined Rocket train struck a bus filled with high school students just outside Mason City, Iowa. Twenty-one other students were seriously injured, a number not expected to survive.

Wage Directors Urged to Help Employer Also

Wisconsin Official Speaks to Delegates of D. C., 15 States, Philippines.

The interests of employers as well as workers and the general public must be considered in the administration of minimum wage laws, Miss Maud Swett, field director of woman and child labor in Wisconsin, told delegates to the Seventh Minimum Wage Conference in the Department of Labor Building yesterday.

Representatives of the District, 15 States, the Philippines and Ontario heard Miss Swett and Miss Anne Davis, official of the Illinois Department of Labor, explain problems of minimum wage administration.

To avoid prosecution and penalties, "it is essential that employers have a thorough understanding of all phases of the law and its significance," declared Miss Swett.

Efficient methods of keeping records were explained by Miss Davis, assisted by Mrs. Louise Q. Blodgett, of the Rhode Island Department of Labor. "The success of our minimum wage orders depends on the skill with which we keep track of the work we are doing," Miss Davis observed.

It was pointed out that scientific analysis of data is necessary to ascertain how many women are employed before and after a wage rate goes into effect in an industry, whether employers comply with the order, whether wages tend to increase, decrease or concentrate at the minimum, and if there is a tendency to lengthen or shorten work hours.

A moving picture, "What's in a Dress," to be released next month by the Women's Bureau of the Department of Labor, was shown the delegates.

Dr. Henry Jaeger Funeral Is Today

Funeral services for Dr. Henry Jaeger, 49, of 700 East Capitol street, well known is medical circles, will be held this afternoon at 3 o'clock in St. Mark's Episcopal Church, followed by burial in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Dr. Jaeger died suddenly of a heart attack at his home Thursday morning at 3:30 o'clock. He apparently had been in the best of health.

A native of Washington, Dr. Jaeger was a graduate of George Washington University Medical School. He had practiced medicine here since 1911.

Surviving Dr. Jaeger are his mother, Mrs. Harry Jaeger; his widow, Mrs. Bessie S. Jaeger; three children, Dorothy, William and Cynthia Jaeger; a brother, Ferdinand Jaeger, of Long Island, New York, and a sister, Mrs. Meta Jaeger Richardson, of Washington.

Kennedy to Fight Palmisano Again On District Taxes

Washington's two councilmen from Baltimore will battle again at the approaching session over what taxes shall be imposed upon Washingtonians, it appeared yesterday.

Representative Kennedy, who was chairman of the special tax committee last session, announced during a brief visit to Capitol Hill that he would fight to retain the local business privilege tax which he helped enact into law.

Only a few days ago Chairman Palmisano, of the full committee, assailed the tax as "cockeyed" and said he would do everything he could to block its renewal by Congress.

Meanwhile, Allen F. Brooke, administrator of the business tax section of the assessor's office, said he will start his door-to-door hunt for delinquent taxpayers in about ten days.

Milk Bottles Returned With Lunch Money

'Take an Unseen Guest' Campaign Gets Results in Restaurants.

Milk bottles filled with nickels and pennies—to provide free lunches for the District's needy school childrn—are beginning to be sent to headquarters of the Citizens' Emergency Committee, at the Mayflower, Mrs. John Boyle, jr., announced last night.

"As soon as they come in we empty them and send them right back," she said. "One came in this morning with $25 in 'little money' inside and a $10 bill on top. We'd like to have some more like that."

Contents of the bottles are being donated by Washingtonians willing to "take an unseen guest to lunch" by dropping 7 cents in the bottle placed in the restaurant where they are eating. Seven cents buys the food for a child's lunch in the District schools. The WPA supplies all labor needed in its preparation and serving.

A total of $67,000 is being sought in the campaign now under way. This amount will provide lunches for 5,000 certified applicants for the remainder of the school year. Slightly more than $20,000 of the sum has been realized.

The charity ball at the Mayflower next Tuesday night will be the next large city-wide event from which a big money realization is expected.

Approximately 100 "vanishing teas" are being given for the lunch fund this week, with six guests in attendance. Next week, according to the plan, 600 teas will be in progress. Each guest pays 50 cents.

Food sales at the Inter-American Horse Show at Meadowbrook will continue today, with the Army women in charge. During the first week in November a series of benefit magic shows will be held at the Belasco Theater.

Medical Tests for All Students Urged by D. C. Education Chief

Four urgent needs of the District school system were discussed yesterday by Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, president of the Board of Education in an address before the Women's Alliance of the All Soul's Unitarian Church.

As Mrs. Doyle sees them, they are (1) medical examinations for all school children, under direction of the health department, (2) at least six teachers to be in charge of classes for children unable to come to school, (3) extension of the physical education department, (4) extension of vocational opportunities.

Realization of the first two needs would mean an economy to the school system, Mrs. Doyle believes. They would prevent repetition of grades in many cases and would "have many future citizens for lives of usefulness."

The community can play an important part in making vocational work a success by changing its attitude that training in the vocations is not quite as high class as training in the classics, she told the Alliance.

Mrs. Doyle traced the growth of the Board of Education from its beginning in 1804, when President Thomas Jefferson became its first chairman. The budget for that year was set at "not more than $1,500." This amount was to be raised from "taxes laid on slaves and dogs, for carriages and hacks, for ordinaries and taverns, for retailing wines and spirituous liquors, for billiard tables, for theaters and other amusements, and for hawkers and peddlars."

The first public school built in the District was at 1700 I street, and cost $1,589.41. The teacher received $500 per year, but resigned because he was unable to live on that amount in Washington, Mrs. Doyle said.

Johnson Attack By Magazine Is Called 'Unfair'

Bureau Head Denies Assistant Secretary Balked Airport Solution.

Branding as unfair charges made in an aeronautical magazine that Assistant Secretary of Commerce J. M. Johnson interfered with the solution of the local airport muddle, Howard F. Rough of the Bureau of Air Commorce yesterday stated that Johnson "has not even been informed about the doings of our office."

Rough, who is the assistant director of the Bureau of Air Commerce, and Fred D. Fagg, director, have been working for month on regulations at the Washington Airport, which would afford maximum safety for air travel.

"The article in the latest issue of American Aviation," Rough said, "is their own affair, but I want it known that Col. Johnson has never interferred in any way with our efforts at arriving at a solution."

In an editorial titled "The Colonel Carries the Key" the magazine said:

"The Air Line Pilots Association insists that the Bureau of Air Commerce close the airport to scheduled airline operations. The bureau hems and haws and stalls for time . . . Col. J. M. Johnson, Assistant Secretary of Commerce, thinks Washington has a good airport. He testified so at a Congressional hearing this year . . . We regret to say that there is not a man in the entire bureau, from the director down, who has the nerve or stamina to buck the colonel's position . . . For years the airlines have feared a transport crash at the doorstep of the Nation's Capital. If it does come, what of the man who testified that the airport is safe and adequate?"

Charles Renouf's Services Today

Funeral services for Charles R. Renouf, 29, formerly of 2318 Huidekopea place northwest, one-time District traffic manager of United Airlines, who died with 18 others in the crash of the Mainliner on a Utah mountain last Sunday night, will be held at Kent, Ohio, this afternoon.

His body will arrive in Kent, the home of his parents, Dr. and Mrs. J. J. Renouf, this morning.

Renouf was widely known in Washington, where he was a member of the Bon Vivants and the Junior Board of Commerce.

Besides his parents, he is survived by his wife, Mrs. Eleanor Daniels Renouf, who was living here at the time of the crash.

Mrs. Lucy H. Crisp Funeral Set Today

Funeral services for Mrs. Lucy Howland Crisp, who died Thursday atherresidence in the Brighton Hotel, will be held at 10 a. m. today at St. Margaret's Episcopal Church, Connecticut avenue and Bancroft place. She will be buried in Arlington Cemetery.

Mrs. Crisp, the wife of Rear Admiral Richard O. Crisp, retired, was born in New Bedford, Mass. She was a member of the League of Coast Guard Women and of St. Margaret's Chuch.

Admiral Crisp, who retired in 1925 after more than 45 years' service, was personnel officer at the Coast Guard headquarters here for several years.

Mrs. Crisp is also survived by a sister, Mrs. G. M. Linthicum, of Baltimore.

Kreml Plan Will Be Tried In 2d Precinct

All Auto Accidents to Be Marked on Map and Thoroughly Studied.

Death of Man Hit by Trolley Raises Year's Traffic Toll to 86.

The famed "Kreml system" of accident prevention and traffic control will be inaugurated on an experimental basis in the Second Police Precinct, Maj. Ernest W. Brown announced last night.

A report, prepared by Private Horace E. Caranfa, recent graduate of the Kreml traffic school at Maryland University, prompted Maj. Brown to experiment with the system, it was learned.

Caranfa, in his report, suggested the system be installed on a small scale before authorities adopted its use for city-wide traffic control purposes. The Second Precinct was chosen because of its record as a congestion center, Maj. Brown said.

Traffic Toll Now 86.

Meanwhile, the District traffic toll reached 86 with the death in Casualty Hospital of Emeroy Dove, 65, of Seat Pleasant, Md. Dove was struck by a street car at Sixty-second and Dix street northeast October 18.

Under the system founded by Lieut. Franklin M. Kreml, youthful Evanston, Ill., traffic authority, accidents are prevented by scientific methods of investigation and recording.

When the plan is placed in operation here, Brown announced, a large "spot" map will be hung in the Second Precinct station. Each day, as accidents are reported, they will be "spotted" on the map. A record will be kept of all crash locations and trained investigators will attempt to learn causes of each accident.

When the cause is determined, remedies will be applied either through enforcement, physical changes or preventive measures such as warning signs and signal lights.

Cruising "crash" cars, manned by two policemen and equipped with investigation apparatus, will visit every reported accident scene.

Reports will be filed according to accident types. Investigators will attempt to learn whether the crash was caused by a law violation, lack of safety precautions or highway imperfection.

To Meet With Judges.

Each week the "spot" map will be analyzed and the worst accident spots will receive special attention.

It is expected traffic officials will meet with Police Court judges and prosecutors before the system is adopted to seek co-operation and explain the new methods.

In suggesting the small-scale experiment, Caranfa reported:

"This test of the plan in a small area for a period of from six months to a year will show just how much could be expected if it were adopted for the entire city. Weaknesses could be detected and corrected. The personnel used in the trial would become proficient in this type of work and could offer valuable instruction to new men."

Refuse Co-operation.

And at the same time yesterday two additional Government departments refused to join Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer's plan of reducing rush-hour traffic congestion by further staggering the working hours of Federal employes.

The Department of Agriculture and the Securities and Exchange Commission refused to agree. On the other hand, the Treasury Department offered to change the hours of workers in the Bureau of Engraving and Printing and the Procurement Division. The Bureau of Engraving employes would report for duty at 8:15 a. m. instead of 8 a. m. and Procurement workers would go to work at 8:30.

A. F. G. E. Resolutions

Resolutions condemning the "profligate and extensive practices of fixing traffic tickets in the District" and calling for "fewer regulations and more enforcement" were adopted unanimously by the District Department, American Federation of Government Employes, last night. The resolution was offered by James G. Yaden, chairman of the civic committee.

It called on the director of traffic and the District authorities "to enforce rigidly and impartially the traffic regulations . . . without favor to friends and to those who have influence, since a fair and impartial enforcement of the law will unquestionably produce respect for the law and will go far toward alleviating the recklessness on the part of traffic violators."

The paper further pointed out that "there is agitation on the part of the director of traffic here for staggered hours among Government employes. It apparently has not occurred to the director that the employes of the various departments and independent establishments have equity and rights in the premises, and therefore have not been consulted." It contended the employes should be consulted "before any arbitrary and far-reaching changes in working hours are inaugurated."

Mailer Turner to Celebrate 50th Year With Post Today

HARRY TURNER.

Paper's Oldest Employe in Point of Service Also Marks 64th Birthday; Heads Department That Starts News to Readers.

Father Time is not a bearded patriarch after all!

He's a gay blade who has found the fabulous Fountain of Youth and new worlds to conquer with the magic of efficiency.

This is the experience of Harry Turner.

For today will be a dual anniversary for Turner, who is foreman of the addressograph department of The Washington Post and oldest employe of the paper in point of service.

He will begin his fiftieth year with the circulation department today, and today he will mark his sixty-fourth birthday.

Turner, who has had a side-line seat to history's greatest moments, came to The Post in the old mailing room of the struggling young newspaper 50 years ago today.

His first duties were many. He helped mail papers. He started them to what were then considered the suburbs via horse car and hansom cab. He even delivered some of them himself, for his father, the late Jacob Turner, organized the first Post route in Washington and was a route agent for 24 years, until his death in 1900.

Today Turner starts the journeys of The Post to all corners of the earth. He supervises the room where The Post is addressed to American cities from Bangor to Miami, from Boston to Los Angeles.

His responsibility is great—for he gives to the world through the mechanism of the mailing room what The Post has collected from the world in the way of news.

In the old days, Harry recalled yesterday, the circulation of The Post was about 8,000. Today it is at its peak, over the 104,000 mark daily

Harry described The Post of the eighties, all the while alertly going about his duties.

"There were classified ads on the first page. It was something to talk about if we went over 12 pages. There were no big Sunday papers. All press dispatches came in over Morse wires, which sang and clattered. The reporters wrote their copy in long hand. And we addressed our papers by hand. We didn't have machines to do it as now."

History in the making?

"I guess I've seen more extras come off The Post presses than any man alive," ventured Turner.

The night President McKinley was shot, he remembered, great crowds milled in the streets. The mobs ebbed and flowed in front of The Post Building, where Scott Bone, managing editor, shouted out the latest bulletins through an improvised megaphone of rolled-up paper.

Harry Turner lives with his wife, the former Mary J. Elvert, to whom he was married 41 years ago, and his daughter, Mrs. Allan Redrow, at 1125 I street northeast.

"I want to serve The Post 75 years," he chuckled yesterday.

Southeast Youth Council Formed As Civic Aid Body

Sponsored by the National Youth Congress in co-operation with the Council of Agencies, the Southeast Youth Council held its first meeting last night in the Southeast branch of the Public Library.

Composed of delegates from various young peoples' organizations in the Southeast district, the council will meet twice a month to discuss civic problems of the neighborhood and promote social and recreational activities.

Joe E. Grossberg, representing the Eastern High School branch of the American Students Union, was elected president of the council and Theodora Raines was chosen as secretary. The council also voted to undertake a study of recreational facilities in the Southeast district.

Mrs. Elsie L. Wyatt Burial Set Monday

Funeral services for Mrs. Elsie L. Wyatt, 49, wife of Maj. Thomas B. Wyatt, retired army officer, will be held at Ives undertaking establishment, 2847 Wilson Boulevard, Arlington Cemetery.

Mrs. Wyatt, who lived at 1430 North Fillmore street, Arlington, died Thursday at Walter Reed Hospital.

A native of Santa Cruz, Calif., Mrs. Wyatt had lived at Arlington and Fort Myer, Va., for the last 19 years. She was a member of St. George Episcopal Church in Arlington and of the Order of the Eastern Star.

Surviving, besides her husband, are a daughter, Mrs. Louise Pomfrey, of Richmond, Va., a son, Thomas F. Wyatt, of Washington, and a sister, Mrs. Ethel Ketchum, of San Jose, Calif.

Burial Set Today For Mrs. Mason, Belle in Civil War

Mrs. Caroline Mason, who as a young girl sang and played the piano for Gen. John Huntley Morgan's Confederate cavalrymen when they rode through her home town of Salem, Ind., will be buried in Rock Creek Cemetery this afternoon after funeral services at Hines undertaking establishment.

Mrs. Mason, who was 92 years old, died Thursday at her home, 3722 Livingston street northwest. She had fractured her hip in a fall about two weeks ago.

The widow of Dr. William C. Mason, a medical examiner in the Pension Office and a drummer boy with the Union troops at the age of 14, Mrs. Mason had lived in Washington for the past 60 years.

Surviving are a daughter, Mrs. Cora L. Kantz; a granddaughter, Carolyn L. Alsop, and a grandson, William C. Perkins. All live in Washington.

Aid for Mahoney Urged in Capital

Asserting that the election of Judge Jeremiah T. Mahoney as mayor would strengthen the Democratic organization in New York and liberalize Tammany Hall, Arthur M. Chaite last night told 100 registered Democratic voters of New York City that the efforts of New Yorkers in Washington "will have an important effect on the mayoralty campaign."

The Washington organization of New York voters also heard speeches in support of Mahoney's candidacy by Richard J. Wagner, nephew of the Senator from New York; Charles Fish, Tom Brennan and Herbert Colton. A telegram from Judge Mahoney, thanking the organization for efforts in his behalf, was read at the meeting.

City Police May Patrol Park Areas

Attacks on Women May Lead to Long-Sought Merger Here.

Finnan to Ask Brown for Cycle and Foot Policemen.

By Howard F. Wentworth.

A step toward long-discussed proposals for consolidation of the Metropolitan and U. S. Park Police departments was seen last night when it was learned that park authorities will petition the District for aid in patrolling the city's park system.

As an aftermath of the recent brutal attack on a George Washington University coed in Rock Creek Park, C. Marshall Finnan, superintendent of National Capital Parks, it was reported, will ask Maj. Ernest W. Brown, police superintendent, to assign motorcycle and foot policemen to augment the understaffed park police force.

Maj. Brown indicated he would agree to co-operate within the limits of his own personnel problem.

A sixth suspect in the McMillen case was detained yesterday by park police, after a woman reported she had been annoyed in Potomac Park. A 49-year-old Arlington County man was held last night for investigation.

Meanwhile, the George Washington honor student is recovering from knife wounds.

First serious consideration of police consolidation proposals came last year when authorities were attempting to cope with the increasing problem of traffic enforcement. At that time recommendations to combine the tangled jurisdictions met opposition on Capitol Hill and the plan was abandoned.

Under the present setup, park police confine their activities to Rock Creek and the various city parks. Metropolitan policemen, on the other hand, have no jurisdiction within the park areas.

Conflicting and overlapping jurisdictions of the two police agencies have harassed enforcement officials for many years. Under present plans, however, boundaries will be ignored and District policemen will be authorized to patrol park areas with full power of arrest.

Undermanned and with a large area of the city to patrol, the park police force, officials contend, is unable to provide adequate protection against crimes in secluded sections of rambling Rock Creek Park.

Without adequate policing facilities, however, authorities said they must face future possibilities of sordid attacks similar to the one on Miss McMillen.

Simensen Remains Civic Group Head

H. E. Simensen will remain president of the Anacostia Citizens Association until a successor has been nominated and voted on, the group decided at its meeting at Anacostia Junior-Senior High School last night.

William Benhoff, jr., was re-elected first vice president; Mrs. Phyllis Plemmons was re-elected second vice president, and W. J. Tucker was re-elected secretary.

The association named G. Frank Reed treasurer and Mrs. Carrie G. Smith and W. J. Tucker delegates to the Federation of Citizens Associations.

A resolution urging Congress not to re-enact the business privilege tax was adopted.

Lacey E. Morlock Held In Death of Pedestrian

Lacey E. Morlock was held for action of Police Court under the negligent homicide act by a coroner's jury yesterday, investigating the traffic death Tuesday night of Matthew J. Cusack, 60, of 1931 Sixteenth street northwest.

Earlier detectives had stated Morlock confessed driving the truck which hit Cusack at Jennsylvania avenue and John Marshall place. Police also said he had rehearsed his four colored companions in alibis that would exonerate all five, but that Morlock broke down under questioning.

'Probation After Death' Scientist Church Topic

"Probation After Death" is the subject of the lesson-sermon in all the Churches of Christ Scientist tomorrow. The golden text is from Matthew 24:13 "He that shall endure unto the end, the same shall be saved."

Among the citations which comprise the lesson-sermon is the following from the Bible: "For we know that if our earthly house of this tabernacle were dissolved, we have a building of God, a house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens." (II Corinthians 5:1.)

The lesson-sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "The sinless joy, the perfect harmony and immortality of life, possessing unlimited divine beauty and goodness without a single bodily pleasure or pain, constitutes the only veritable, indestructible man, whose being is spiritual."

Today's Sermon

Rector, St. Thomas' Episcopal Church.

By Dr. Howard S. Wilkinson,

Last Monday was the day on which we are bidden to remember St. Luke, concerning whom our information is largely traditional or to be inferred. A man versed in the arts and sciences, an authority on the practice of medicine, the author of two outstanding books in the New Testament. The beginning of his association with St. Paul is suggested in Acts 16:10, while his Gospel is perhaps the most biographical sketch of the master. It reveals a friendship with the Holy Family, from whom he evidently secured information not related elsewhere, and there does one find many masterpieces of church music, such as the Ave Maria (1:28-33), the Gloria in Excelsis (2:14), the Magnificat (1:46-55), the Benedictus (1:68-79) and the Nunc Dimittis (2:29-32).

Unlike the others who left their occupations in order to become active followers of the Nazarene or missionaries of the cross, Luke remained a physician, dedicating his talents and his profession to the natural and normal life of a Christian layman.

Every honest or legitimate business, the making of a living, the provision of certain comforts and necessities may be made a means of grace for the Christian life quite as truly as "preaching the Gospel." Continuing to buy and sell and teach and dig and build and paint and plead and prescribe for the body, the temple of God; a deepening of the spiritual through even material things; living in the work-a-day world a life of prayer and consecration, such is the need of church and nations in these trying and uncertain times.

God gives us laymen who will strive to practice what we clergy try to preach.

Wanted! Men—Who live in the highlands of God to work for Him in the lowlands of sin.

Dr. Daugherty to Talk.

Dr. Simpson B. Daugherty will preach at 11 a. m. services in United Brethren Church on "Big Business" after which the church officers will be installed publicly.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, Oct. 22.

ALICE HUGHES

ONE OF the best known "society reporters" in town, Helen Worden, after 10 years of relating the feats, didoes and peccadilloes of our high-nosed set, has finally abandoned the marble halls of Fifth avenue. She's had enough, and now turns to the reporting of women's events for her newspaper here.

This act of Helen's gives me pause—and plenty of it. She and I started on the old Sunday World of hallowed memory. Our first story together was an interview with Olga Nethersole, the most daring Sappho of her day in the theater. I wrote it, and Helen drew the pictures.

Helen is succeeded on the society page by a very colorful local gal known to us as Molly Cogswell, but on society pages as Mary Van Rensselaer Cogswell Thayer—IF you please. Molly—to me—and I worked in the same store at one time. Her high spirits then showed by her turning up for labor wearing forbidden bright clothes, and she didn't mind the scoldings. She's always had adventures, such as arriving in Russia without a passport, and later she married a very social Mr. Thayer. Now she writes pieces for the paper.

But to get back to Helen Worden. I asked her why she was leaving society in a ditch. She said that though she liked many of the mob as persons, for the ritzy racket she had no respect at all, and that she was fed to the bicuspids with the whole pretentious show. So she took a walk-out powder. We began together, Helen and I. For a fine decade I've written a daily column on shops, clothes, people for papers here. Wonder if my number is up for a change, too?

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Sign of the times here—the big town is seized with a nasty mania for gum-chewing in the upper brackets. The little typists and clerks, bless their hearts, have long since been shamed out of this ugly habit by movie caricatures and story jokes. Now the executives are going in for it—one great and smart Fifth avenue store had to start a rule forbidding the practice by its top people. Imagine! What are they trying to do—make it smart and get its acceptance by Emily Post? Heaven forbid!

* * * *

I saw Connie Bennett, the languorous lollipop, buying a couple of bottles of perfume called "Verve," the other day. What's up, Con old kid—trying to change your type at this late date?

* * * *

And Gracie Allen, dripping silver fox, buying hankies on the avenue. "Buying up the town," as she threatened, but starting small! . . .

* * * *

This sentimental village is on tiptoe awaiting the arrival of one of its pet sons, George M. Cohan, who is starring in the new musical show, "I'd Rather Be Right," which pokes much barbed and relentless fun at the present dynasty and doings in the Nation's Capital. The most hardened Broadway loafer cries into his soup whenever he speaks of Cohan, the eternal Yankee Doodle Dandy.

Gay Clan Plaids Smart for School and Office

Accenting the beige cashmere suit above is a blouse and matching jacket lining of soft, woven cotton in a reproduction of a clan tartan design. Note high waistline of skirt, smart for the youthful figure.

Tartans of Scottish Chiefs Inspire Modern Designs.

By Ethel Ehlen.
The Post Fashion Editor.

YOU'D THINK that girls this fall were all descendants of Sir William Wallace, or that each could claim ancestors in the Scottish Guards, the way they have taken to the current vogue for tartans. Plaids, to be smart this season, should be more than just gaily colored square patterns, they must be authentic. For instance, replicas of Macduff, Stuart, Gordon, or one of the other old Scottish clan tartans. Colors, too, must be true—shades and patterns exactly right for historical accuracy.

Another requisite for plaid school clothes is they should be able to withstand hard wear and all kinds of weather, as did the kilts of the intrepid Highlanders in the days of Rob Roy. Today, it is merely a matter of making sure that the material will launder or dry clean successfully; not shrink or fade with frequent washings or cleanings. Manufacturers have made this an important point in the new plaids. The fabrics have been scientifically treated (sanforized-shrunk), to insure wearability after numerous trips to the tub or dry cleaners. Reliable dyes, too, guarantee fast colors.

Plaids are as much in evidence as an accent as they are for entire costumes. Blouses, Scotch caps, scarfs and belts, coat linings, jackets and skirts (these combined with solid colors), topcoats over dark dresses, are all appearing on smart campuses, in numerous versions. For a touch of color, or a change from the inevitable dark school color tones, plaids are an ideal choice. They are youthful, extremely collegiate and adaptable to various accessory changes, with predominating colors of the plaid for the accents.

Don't infer from the foregoing that plaids are confined entirely to the school crowd—they aren't. Business girls are selecting plaid woolens for simple frocks for office wear, in bright colors and the more somber black and white. Gay plaid blouses are also much in evidence, both silks and cottons, to dramatize black suits; twin plaid scarfs, tied at the throat and waistline, enliven black dresses of silk crepe and sheer wool. This is a season, when age or Scottish clan claims mean absolutely nothing to the propriety of wearing clan plaids; women and girls of all ages from 6 to 60 are wearing tartans.

An authentic Scottish clan plaid in sanforized-shrunk cotton, which looks like wool, fashions the shirtmaker dress above. The tailored blouse and full-pleated skirt may be worn separately with solid colors.

Exercise (Pulling) Good for Hair, but You Can Overdo It.

By Ida Jean Kain.

THERE IS a saying that if you pull out a gray hair two grow in its place—but it isn't so! Emile Rockefeller, an authority on the care and beauty of the hair, poohpoohs the idea that yanking out a gray hair is a misdemeanor. He suggests "tugging at the hair, to move the scalp and arouse the circulation, and as exercise for the hair roots."

You can overdo a good thing, however, so be gentle with your hair-pulling. Continually pulling out patches of hair may leave you with bald spots. You have seen people who seem to find tugging at a lock of hair an aid to concentration. After they have been working the same spot for a long time the hair just doesn't grow in again.

You might also be warned by the case of the young woman who did her hair up in curlers for years. She skinned the hair back from her face and wound it about the curlers so tightly that gradually it was pulled out, and now she has to wear a transformation. Curlers are indispensable, but don't pull out your hair with them.

One thing you cannot overdo—brushing. Make a mental note to brush the hair regularly for a stimulating facial and for splendid exercise of the muscles of the arms, shoulders and chest, advises this authority on hair. Your minimum brushing should be 50 strokes in the morning and 50 again at night—and really brush. Stand up straight and tall, breathe deeply and move the arm from the shoulder with each stroke. Use one hand, then the other, so that the exercise is evenly distributed.

First brush the hair back from the forehead and temples until it is standing on end. Then lean over and brush the hair up from the nape of the neck until you look like a Zulu princess. This brushing technique affords exercise. You can keep the arms firm and lovely, improve the contour of the bust, and tap new springs of youth for your facial muscles just by a few minutes' daily brushing.

Don't imagine for a moment that brushing hurts your new permanent. Brushing is good for it. As Mr. Emile explains, the hair is separated into strands for the permanent wave, and even in the most perfect permanent the wave begins at a fractionally different place on each of those strands. Brushing the hair helps to counteract the tendency to separate and makes the wave more uniform.

Speaking of styles, take this last bit of advice—change your coiffure! Do what you like about the color of your hair—one of the most stunning women I ever saw had a lovely white feather running through her hair. But don't keep on arranging your hair as you did when a schoolgirl. It dates you.

Adrian Predicts Rich Clothing As Result of World Upheaval

Culver City, Calif.—A new high in extravagance and glamour will be seen in fall fashions, Adrian, of the movies, said today.

"Feminine wearing apparel will be more beautiful and more elaborate than ever," he said. "This is always the case when there is an upheaval in world affairs. It happens whenever nations seem to totter on the verge of catastrophe. At times such as these the world reaches out, almost hysterically, for beauty."

Adrian thinks that the extravagance, beauty and luxury of lovely clothes often aids in averting impending disaster.

"I can liken the effect to that of an orchestra that continuues to play as the theater burns," he said. "In many instances, the beauty of the music and the diversion of the melody have averted disaster.

"I feel certain," he said, "that the light-heartedness, the gayety and the gowns of American motion pictures have done much to give this country a level-headed attitude toward stress. People can go to a theater and have their minds completely diverted from the chaos that surrounds them.

"Amazing as it seems, featuring imagination and beauty at a time such as this is not su superficial as it might appear."

Some of the things that this designer of stars' gowns sees for fall include:

Housecoats of satin, with wide fur collars and cuffs.

Plain tailored suits adopting a dressy appearance through the addition af lapels and cuffs embroidered in fine metal threads.

Daytime skirts moderately short. Evening gowns longer. (For formal creations Adrian favors stiff cloths of bright metals.)

"Tricks in fur trimming for daytime and street wear, such as a collar that may be turned into a huff at a moment's notice, or cuffs that become pockets.

Food Colors Used In New Paris Modes

Paris (U.P.).—Food colors have inspired the most interesting shades shown in the winter collections of Paris couturiers, all of whom concede black the title as the leading basic color for street and daytime wear.

"Prickly pear" is the picturesque name given to a weedy green by Schiaparelli, while "burned brown bread" and "fresh yellow butter" inspired colors in the Jacques Heim collection.

Marcel Rochas' "spinach" shade is self-explanatory, and "mustard" is chosen by Goupy Rosine for a jacket to be worn with a brown skirt. Lanvin uses another "mustard" version for handsome daytime coats trimmed wtih black, and "chocolate" is the inspiration for Bruyere's favorite brown. Wines suggested Molyneux's "bordeaux" and Maggy-Rouff's "burgundy," as well as Heim's "rose red wine."

Green's rusts, wines and blues lead the lists of colors sponsored by the various fashion houses, each presenting its special shades as trim for black ensembles or to make daytime and evening costumes.

Mainbocher offers a dull "Chinese black" as his outstanding daytime color and introduces also Georgian greens, bracken browns and damask reds, while Molyneux favors a dark "derain green" and "nigger brown" with gloves in "Venetian pink," "October brown," "Paris gray," "chrysanthemum yellow" and "autumn green" for wear with black ensembles.

Women Prefer Football Type As Companions

Suave Escorts Definitely Out, Relates Secretary of Bureau Here.

By Genevieve Reynolds.

AMERICAN women now prefer the strong, he-man football type to the sleek, soulful, languishing "lounge lizards or sophisticates. Suave gentlemen are definitely out, for neither the younger nor older women approve of too urbane a manner, according to observations made by Miss Carrie Roper Fulton, in her duties as secretary of the National Escort Bureau of Washington.

"Women want sophistication only to the extent of knowing where to go and the right thing to do or say, Miss Fulton said. "All girls refuse to have any escort that faintly resembles a foreigner, but perhaps that is because we do not have nobility to offer."

Miss Fulton thinks that there is an equal demand for men who are sportsmen and for those interested in music.

Young Girls Like Athletes.

As to the age and kind of man most in demand for all ages of customers, Miss Fulton says: "Young girls prefer athletic men with wavy hair, who are good dancers, but middle-age women request intellectual men who are well-mannered and good conversationalists. A blonde girl usually wants a brunette man and the brunettte generally wants a blond man. Older women like the older men better and the young girls demand men near their own age."

"While no particular demands are made for gallantry, according to Miss Fulton, yet women of all ages want their paid escorts to be courteous and possess a knowledge of the right places to go, such as hotels and night clubs. Too, they want them to know the best programs at the popular places and a few of the society people in the city.

Many Repeat Orders.

For the most part no requirements are made as to the men's attire beyond the specifications of evening or street clothes. However, during the summer a few women requested that their escorts for the evening wear white trousers and dark blue coats or white garbadine suits.

Miss Fulton said that many of the women asked for the same escorts again and again.

In order to qualify for a position as escort in the bureau, Miss Fulton said the men had to be highly recommended with the following qualifications: Well-bred, a college graduate, a good dancer, an entertaining conversationalist, of good family, hold a responsible position in the business world or professional sphere and boast of a certain amount of manly beauty.

Shoes Tight as Gloves Include Many Styles

Footwear as sheath-like as gloves includes tucked oxfords, wrap-around effects, high-tongued slippers, and new variations of the foot-flattering opera pump. Heels range from the built-up models that are indispensable when lasting trimness and walking comfort are the main considerations to ornate spikes on the dressier types of shoes. An increasing number of heels on formal footwear are of medium height, the idea being to counteract, at least partially, the sky-towering new hats.

TODAY'S HEALTH TALK

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

Face's Danger Zone.

Little pimples, or boils, or hair root infection of the face, are very common. They usually are treated at home by the victim himself. Good advice recently given by a distinguished surgeon is as follows:

Don't meddle with boils, carbuncles or pimples which occur in the danger area of the face.

The danger area of the face is the triangle whose points are the angles of the mouth and the bridge of the nose. If you draw an imaginary line from the corner of the mouth to the center of the bridge of the nose, just between the eyes on both sides, and consider the edge of the upper lip as the base you have the danger area triangle.

In 90 per cent of all (and most fatal) cases of infection arising in the danger triangle, unnecessary meddling is a factor. Infections in this area, according to this surgeon, are almost universally mistreated. Surgical treatment is absolutely the worst. What is required is complete rest of the part. Proper treatment is exceedingly conservative, and consists in masterful inaction—complete rest of the part, warm compressess, etc.

Infection in this region are not only troublesome, but they may be fatal. One surgeon of my acquaintance has seen 20 cases of death from infection in this area. The reasons why this area is so much of a danger zone are:

(1) The skin is thin in this region.

(2) It is constantly exposed to injury.

(3) Its rich supply of blood vessels provides a direct pathway from the surface of the face to the inside of the skull by way of the great cavernous veins.

(4) Connective tissues, which poorly adapts itself to infection, predominates in this area.

(5) The constant motion of the lips breaks down the protective wall formed by the white blood cells which ordinarily limit infection in other parts of the body.

Questions From Readers.

W. B. M.: "Would the daily use of mercuric oxide yellow in upper passages of the nose subject the user, in time, to metallic poisoning? Is this ointment of value in the treatment of inflamed nasal passages?"

Answer: I do not know of any specific instance in which the use of the yellow oxide of mercury has resulted in poisoning, but it is a wise rule not to use any mercuric drug indefinitely. Many cases of silver poisoning have resulted from the use of argyrol and other silver salts in the nose over a long period of time. The patient is advised by a physician usually to use these drugs, and then continues long after the doctor has ordered their discontinuance.

Theater Party Etiquette Rules Are Flexible

Bachelor Needs No Chaperons When Couples Are Asked to Apartment.

By Margaret Wallace

MEN have their host problems. One of their chief difficulties seems to be in regard to theater parties and supper parties. One man writes:

"I am a bachelor in the thirties and have no near women relatives in Washington. I wish to give a theater party followed by a supper party in my apartment. Is it necessary to have a chaperon? I have invited several married women and their husbands. Would it be proper to ask one of these women to act as chaperon. There are several young girls in the party. Would it be necessary to provide escorts for them to the theater and to my apartment afterwards? I have invited an equal number of men and women. If I ask some of the men in the party to escort the unmarried girls, should I give them the tickets for the theater or should we meet in the lobby of the theater? The women in the party intend to wear dinner dresses with long sleeves and high necklines. Will it be proper for the men to wear tuxedoes?"

The fact there are married women with their husbands in this theater party makes a chaperon as such unnecessary. If desired, one of the married women could be asked to act as hostess—not chaperon—but this is not necessary. It would be proper to ask the young men in the party to escort the unmarried girls to the theater and to be their escorts during the evening. It is quite proper to meet them in the foyer of the theater and all go in together with you presenting the tickets to the doorman. Many hosts, however, distribute the tickets to the men who are to escort the women guests to the theater. Either method is proper. If the party does meet in the foyer, it is proper for the escorts to give their tickets to their host for him to present to the doorman. It is also proper for a host to distribute the tickets and request his guests to take their seats in the orchestra or boxes as soon as they arrive at the theater. When the foyer is apt to be crowded this is a much simpler way.

It is quite proper for the men of the party to wear tuxedoes for such entertainments.

QUERY—My sister and myself are giving a supper party in my apartment. My sister does not live with me. She is 20 and I am 25. Is it necessary to have a chaperon?

ANSWER—It is not necessary but considered better form to have some older or married woman act as chaperon at such parties. Strictly speaking, it is not bad form for a brother and sister to entertain together without a chaperon.

Dusty Window Frames Often Smudge Hands

Smudges on hands and elbows are often the result of neglected window frames and sills. Every time you open the window or lean on the sill you gather unto yourself an assorted collection of outdoor grime. In addition to daily dusting, these surfaces should be mopped with soap and water twice a week, or even more often, depending on your environment. If the framework is metal be sure you dry it carefully. If it is made of polished wood it will need an occasional application of furniture polish.

PLEASANT HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

IF THERE'S one thing that makes a lady see red, white and blue, it's a glimpse of her best curtains looped up in a big knot to get them out of the way. And yet unless a man has been expertly house-broken, he'll knot them every time they flutter in his face. We don't usually advocate nagging, but in a case like that we do think it's forgivable.

But, of course, the best way is to fix the curtains so they won't flip around irritatingly. It goes without saying that you can't keep curtains looking like anything if they're going to be knotted from time to time, and yet we certainly can sympathize with a man who gets mad at a curtain that flaps at him when he is trying to take it easy.

If you drew a man who feels strongly about curtains that flutter, better take care to see that adequate provisions are made for getting the curtains out of the way without damage to themselves or dispositions. The best way is to have a pair of tiebacks at each window ready for use, even though the curtains normally are made to hang straight. These tiebacks can be simple knobs or metal holders that probably won't show at all most of the time, but they'll be there when needed. Be sure that they're good and substantial so they'll really do the job. Use them with or without cords, depending on the curtain and the tiebacks.

Another way to solve the problem is to have the curtains made with rings across their tops to pull back or else draw back out of the way on transverse rods. Then have the buttons weighted with dressmaker weights that you buy by the yard. This will keep the curtains from fluttering when drawn back. As a matter of fact, weights in the hems of the curtains will alone do a lot toward keeping them from fluttering in the way.

Go to College At Home

DO COLLEGE people always skim the cream? Beth, envious of Mildred's college training and the attention she gets, thinks bitterly that they do.

Yet Thomas Edison, Elizabeth Browning, Charlotte Bronte became great without going to college. Of the famous people listed in "Who's Who," 13 per cent never attended college, another 12 per cent never graduated.

So surely—in a modern world overflowing with ways to acquire culture at home—Beth can climb out of her rut. She needs only a plan and a little time daily.

Where should Beth start? Right where she is. Instead of listening tongue-tied while Mildred chats vividly about the psychology of the latest war scare, the historical background of the new movie, the month's best seller—she can list these topics as ones to explore.

The first step is laying the groundwork for culture. Popular outline books cover the subjects college people study; psychology, history, science, literature. Even French can be learned at home—from books and phonograph records.

How to catch up with the talk of the day? By regular reading of newspapers and weekly magazines you quickly store up information that makes you interesting to educated people.

You can even enjoy the stimulating contacts college people have. Suppose you've a hobby—theatricals. Join a little theater group—begin as "prop man" if you must. You soon make inspiring friends.

Gay Sunflowers Bloom on Wall In an Easily Stitched Picture

By Alice Brooks.

A shiny needle, a pair of deft hands, and presto! this colorful jug of sunflowers is ready to bloom on your walls through the wintery months to come! Penny-wise? Use gay silk or wool, omit a frame, and you have the gayest bit of stitchery that ever left a budget untouched! In pattern 5937 you will find a transfer pattern of a picture 15x20 inches; color key and chart; material requirements; illustrations of all stitches used.

To obtain this pattern send 10 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred) to The Washington Post, Household Arts Department, 259 West Fourteenth street, New York, N. Y. Be sure to write plainly your name, address and pattern number.

Old-Fashioned Apple Pie Wins Post Recipe Prize

Apples have long been the harvest festival fruit but this week their lush goodness is transformed into unusual concoctions by winners of the Favorite Recipes Contest.

Mrs. Fenton Gall, of Martinsburg, W. Va., Gets First Award; Mrs. E. L. Frances, of Washington, Is Runner-Up With Apfelstrudel.

By Jean Green.

THE BIG APPLE Contest wins the popularity palm. Entries recorded outnumber those in any previous Post recipe contest. However popular the fruit, there seems to be no method of preparation that our readers seem to prefer. All manner of ways to utilize the fruit were described as well as recipes for apple juice, apple sauce, and new methods of preserving apples.

If there was a favorite, it was for apple pie. However, there were many schools of thought. Some preferred using the apples sliced, others in apple sauce, some had two crusts, others nestled in deep dishes. The seasonings were many. Cinnamon, nutmeg, ginger, lemon peel, grated cheese, raisins and pineapple were a few of them.

JEAN GREEN.

It took careful deliberation to choose the winner. An old-fashioned recipe finally won. It comes from West Virginia, is simple to prepare and has a delicious flavor. Mrs. Fenton Gall, of Martinsburg, is the entrant.

Open Crusted Apple Pie.

Make a rich crust for bottom of pan only. Peel and cut into quarters or eighths medium sized apples. Maiden Blush or Ramboes are best.

Mix ¾ cup of sugar with ¼ cup of flour. Place smoothly over the bottom crust, saving back two tablespoonsful.

Place the quarters of apples around the crust overlapping like shingles at about a half slant. Sprinkle remainder of sugar and flour over the apples. Add four tablespoons of medium cream and a dash of cinnamon. Bake and if a slow cooking apple is used, cover the pie with a pie tin during the last part of baking.

The second award was given Mrs. E. L. Frances, 2440 Sixteenth street, apartment 309, for an unusual way to prepare apfelstrudel.

The Real Viennese Apfelstrudel

Mix 2 cups of flour with 1 cup of lukewarm water; 1 tablespoon of olive oil, 1 lump of sugar, and 1 teaspoon of vinegar, and a pinch of salt.

Mix first in a bowl, then put on a board and work the dough thoroughly with your hands. Take the mass and beat it against the board, beat it hard in order to get a very fine dough. Beat until it shows bubbles. Leave the dough on the floured board, brush the surface with a little olive oil, and cover with a warm pan. Let rest for one hour.

Cover the tablecloth with a clean cloth, dust with flour; put the dough in the middle. Roll with the roller first, then begin to pull carefully from all sides until it gets as thin as cigarette paper and covers the whole table. Cut the thick edges off.

Cover half of the dough area with ½ cup of white breadcrumbs, toasted in butter, 2 pounds of sliced apples, the rind and juice of ½ a lemon, ¾ cup of granulated sugar, some seedless raisins, and ground almonds. Drop melted butter over it and also over the uncovered part of the dough.

Lift the tablecloth with both hands and coil the strudel carefully into a long roll. Turn on a buttered baking sheet, giving the strudel a spiral form, for it will be too long for your sheet. Brush the surface with melted butter while it is baking. Serve lukewarm or cold.

The "Big Apple" wins the third award. The recipe was sent in by Mrs. W. M. Cowhig, 1811 E. Fifth street, Sharlotte, N. C.

Big Apple.

8 large firm cooking apples (York Imperials)
¼ pound of small red cinnamon drops
¾ cup of sugar
3 cups of hot water
2 tablespoons of butter
¼ teaspoon of nutmeg

Peel and core apples. Mix sugar, water, cinnamon drops and nutmeg. Add apples. Cover and cook slowly, turning frequently until apples are a tender and clear red. Remove apples from syrup and fill cavity with a mixture of chopped raisins or dates and nuts blended with a small amount of orange marmalade. Add butter to the syrup and boil hard until quite thick. Pour carefully over apples. This forms an attractive glaze. Serve with whipped cream.

The fourth prize was awarded Violet Griffin, 2700 Q street northwest, for her recipe from northern Minnesota.

Apple Fritters.

1 egg
2-3 cup of milk
¼ teaspoon of salt
2 apples
1½ cups of flour
1½ teaspoons of baking powder

Make a batter by mixing the beaten egg, milk, and sifted dry ingredients. Pare the apples, slice thin, and add to the batter. Drop by spoonfuls in hot deep fat, cooking until an even brown. Remove from fat, sprinkle with confectioners sugar, and serve hot with maple syrup.

The last prize goes to Mrs. Lemuel Bolles, Apt. 809, 1437 Rhode Island avenue northwest, for a famous southern delicacy, "Applets."

Applets.

Dissolve 2 envelopes of gelatine in one and a half cups of cold apple sauce. Boil this with 2 cups of sugar for 15 minutes.

Cool and add 1 cup of nuts cut fine. Add 1 teaspoon of vanilla extract. Pour into a pan. Let set and cool. Cut into squares and roll in powdered sugar.

Spinach.

Boiled spinach, well drained and served with cheese sauce, creamed fish, meat, mushrooms, or frizzled dried beef, makes an appetizing and quickly prepared food.

These Hot Egg Dishes Are A Meal in Themselves

BACONIZED EGG RINGS WITH POTATOES
SIX SERVINGS

Temperature: 350°
4 cups mashed potato
salt, pepper
2 well-beaten eggs
6 whole eggs
Time: about 45 minutes milk or cream butter
12 bacon strips

Season potatoes very well with salt, pepper, milk (or cream) and butter. Mix into them the two eggs. Pile lightly into well-greased casserole making six "holes" in the surface with the back of a spoon each large enough to hold 1 egg. Meanwhile partially cook bacon and wind a strip or two around each depression. Break an egg into each. Bake in a moderate oven until the eggs are set and the bacon browned. Season top.

Grated cheese may be sprinkled over the top if desired—preferably toward the last just long enough to melt it.

POACHED EGG IN "SHERRIED" SHRIMPS
TWO OR THREE SERVINGS

2 tablespoons butter
¼ clove garlic or slice of onion
¼ cup tomato pulp
2 teaspoons chopped parsley
2 tablespoons flour
2 or 3 poached eggs
¼ cup cream
¼ cup sherry
1 tablespoon Worcestershire shrimp, 1 can salt, pepper
buttered crumbs—about 1 cup

Cook garlic (or onion) in butter until slushy browned. Remove garlic, add tomato, parsley and flour. Mix and stir and cook about 2 minutes. Add cream, sherry, Worcestershire, and shrimp. Cook about 5 minutes. Season to taste. Pour into individual shallow casseroles lined with buttered crumbs and bake 10 minutes in a moderate oven (375° F.). Meanwhile poach the eggs. Garnish with pepper and paprika. To serve center 1 egg into each casserole.

Apples Go To School

APPLES and cookies are boon companions for the school lunch. The red-cheeked McIntosh has been a favorite with youngsters ever since the days of the little red schoolhouse. And here's a new failure-proof recipe for cookies that may be turned out in a jiffy to win favor with mother, too. Just blend together 1 1-3 cups (1 can) sweetened condensed milk, 3 cups graham cracker crumbs, ½ pound (1 cup) pitted pasteurized dates, chopped, and 1 teaspoon cinnamon. Drop by spoonfuls on buttered baking sheet. Bake in moderately hot oven (375 degrees F.) 15 minutes, or until brown. McIntosh Apples ..... 5 lbs. 19c

Based on the private recipe of George Washington's mother. Guaranteed to come out right—sure to please.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

She Took Him Back Once; Should She Do It Again? Asks Wife Whose Husband Tires of Second Affair.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have been married 19 years and have a beautiful, talented young daughter. Eight years ago my husband developed a glandular affliction which necessitated four operations over a period of seven years. The accompanying emotional upset may account in part for his distressing conduct during that time—but he was discharged by his physician as being in apparently good health nearly a year ago, and still his conduct has not improved.

* * * *

Six years ago he asked me for a divorce, saying he was in love with another woman and wished to marry her immediately. We separated, but after five months he returned to say he couldn't live without me. I took him back but the affair left it's scar, although I have never once mentioned it to him since.

* * * *

Two years ago it became necessary for me to go to work to keep our home (two furnished rooms) going. My day begins at 5 in the morning so that by 9 o'clock in the evening I am ready for bed. My husband's day (he is a salesman) begins at 9 o'clock in the morning and ends whenever he feels like coming home, which is generally pretty late. This conflicting arrangement may be partly responsible for my losing him a second time to another woman.

* * * *

During the time I have worked, I have paid half the rent and supported our daughter. I didn't know, until recently, that my husband all that time was making over $100 a month. When I went to this second woman about my husband, she said she didn't know he was married and wouldn't see him again, but he proceeded to tell her he hadn't lived with me for 14 months, whereupon she continued seeing him regularly.

* * * *

Now—for the second time—my husband wants to come back to me. He says he will tell the other woman it is all over. There is a difference of 23 years in their ages and both deny to me that they love each other, even though they once took a trip together as man and wife. Because of the hard years I have had, my nerves are bad, and my thoughts for years were mostly on making a living and paying bills, instead of romance. I have been a cool, indifferent wife, but would gladly have given up my work and devoted all my time to my home and husband if I had known his salary was sufficient to meet the bills.

* * * *

Miss Haworth, I do want peace of mind and a small share of happiness, and I am afraid if I let him come back he will continue to see this other woman, and, if not her, some one else, as he hasn't the slightest difficulty in making love to his wife while having an affair with another woman. Should I put him out of my life entirely Or should I give him another chance? I'm 38 and still attractive. I feel that my life from now on is to be what I make of it. So please help me to decide. I'll go mad if I have to go through this again. Sincerely,

H. H.

Things to Consider.

DEAR H. H.: My first impulse is to say—don't give him another chance; he doesn't deserve it, and wouldn't improve it; he has simply tired of the other woman and is taking to cover in returning to you; he wants a quiet breathing spell before embarking on another philandering experience. And yet, when I stop to consider the fact that he was for 13 years (to judge from your story) a faithful husband, it occurs to me that you might just possibly be justified in giving him one more chance to come to his senses.

* * * *

But if you take him back, don't accord him the prodigal's welcome. Make the terms of surrender stiff and let it be clearly understood that you mean him to keep them, or else——. For one thing, since he's making a living wage, insist that he pay the whole rent (not just half of it) and contribute the lion's share to his daughter's support. Don't give up your job—that would be playing into his hands and cutting yourself adrift from a life belt you may need later on if he doesn't toe the mark—but use your earnings to make life a little more comfortable for yourself, and yourself a little more attractive to others. Give him to understand this what you propose to do with your earnings in the future—supposing he is willing to come back to you on terms of your dictating.

* * * *

I am not suggesting that you put his nose to the grindstone and keep it there as a form of revenge. I am suggesting it because I believe he is the sort of man who is fool-rich, so to speak, when turned loose with a margin of spending money in his pocket. He has evidenced this by spending money on other women that should have been spent on his own dependents. He'll be better off for having to count his pennies and sit by the fireside.

* * * *

And, if you take him back, don't let him suppose that you want him—particularly. Let it be clearly understood that you're taking him back as a special favor to him; that for your part, you'd just as soon—in fact, rather—wash your hands of the whole thing now, and proceed to order your life along less hit-and-miss, along more self-respecting lines. Let him understand that just one more slip of his foot with women will dissever your life from his forever.

* * * *

If you think there is any likelihood of his subscribing to such terms, and any likelihood of his making a sincere effort to keep the contract, give him one last final chance. But if you're fairly certain in your own mind that it will be only a matter of time until he's out philandering again—in spite of what he may say and think he means today—then have done with him at once, by all means. I know of no more futile occupation in this world than a decent, responsible-minded woman's trying to adjust her life to the life of a chronically philandering, cheating, deceiving husband. Any man may make a mistake, but only a fool—or a rascal—won't learn from experience. It's up to you to decide whether, in this instance, your husband won't learn, or whether it required two lessons to teach him.

* * * *

Another thing—don't overlook the fact that one's primary and essential duty is to one's self; that unless one's own fundamental interests are truly safeguarded, one can't really be of assistance to others in this world. So don't make a senseless sacrifice of your own interests in catering to the selfish solicitations of a wishy-washy husband who really doesn't know what he wants. And don't let any lingering traces of physical infatuation, or any sentimentality over old times' sake prompt you to take him back unless you think he has reformed for good. As an attractive woman of 38, who has proven her ability to support herself and take care of her daughter, you are, indeed, justified in believing that your life from now on may be what you choose to make it. And if your husband can't play a man's part in that future, get rid of him, and make way for the coming of a more trustworthy life partner.

M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Cranberry Dishes Will Be Featured In Recipe Contest

How do you use cranberries? Have you a new recipe for cranberry relish that makes the family style roast look like a party dish, a salad that brightens the whole meal, or an appetizing dessert? The Favorite Recipe contest invites these recipes.

It has been said that the Indians first saw the culinary possibilities of cranberries and used them in preparing their meat dishes. Now the berries are cultivated and shipped to all parts of the country. They remain as the first choice for meat garnishing and their delicious piquant taste has made them popular throughout the meal. The cranberry not only lends flavor to the piece de resistance but also to the salad, dessert, and even cocktail course.

If you have a favorite cranberry dish, this is the week to share your recipe with other readers. Five cash prizes are being awarded. The first prize is $3, the second $2, and there are three $1 prizes. Mail your entries to Jean Green, Post Food Editor, before October 30.

Child's School Lunch Part of Balanced Diet

In planning food for the lunch box, remember that the food served at luncheon, when added to the other meals of the day, should total the daily needs of the school child. These, besides the quart of milk a day, include an egg, meat or fish, potato, two other vegetables, some fruit, a cereal, dark bread and white bread, rice or macaroni. Butter should be served at each meal and a small amount of sweets included in the day's food allowance.

Party Dessert Has Painted Faces

Even the dessert comes in masquerade for the Halloween party and it wins the wholehearted approval of two important guests. These "ghosts" are really cup cakes frosted with seven-minute frosting and decorated with raisins.

Halloween Offers Opportunity For Unusual Party Dishes

Black and Orange Foods May Be Used for Color Appeal; Pumpkin Meringue With Prune Whip Is a Menu Suggestion.

By Nancy Ellis.

PARTIES are apt to be much the same the year around unless you take advantage of the passing holidays. Halloween is especially appropriate for the hostess who wishes to entertain in a lively and festive manner.

All sorts of decorations can be used to create the right setting for a Halloween party. The room may be decorated with autumn leaves, goldenrod, chrysanthemums or cranberry strings. There must be pumpkins, of course. Over the door, apples and pears can be tied securely to an elastic cord so they dangle just within reach.

For the table, downtown stores are featuring many types of decorations in paper mache. There is a spooky assortment of candy favors, some of them incased in cellophane.

The masquerade is the clever type of Halloween party. After the mask the clever hostess will plan refreshments for the occasion in keeping with the Halloween spirit.

Plan Simple Menus.

For the younger set, simple foods are better than rich foods. Lots of sandwiches and cider, apples and peanuts and all-day suckers will take care of children's nutritional needs for the time. A fortune cake or double cookies into which fortunes are slipped will provide amusement.

Many black and orange foods can be used in working out color schemes. Yellow carrots, tangerines, oranges, persimmons, cheese, ripe olives, raisins and prunes are some of these. These can be used in decorating the salad and sandwich tray.

For an unusual dessert, try a pumpkin meringue. The meringue is tinted orange and baked in a pumpkin shape. The filling can be any type of fresh fruit or a prune whip. The prune whip will simulate the black and orange color scheme.

Meringues for Halloween.

4 egg whites
Few grains salt
1 cup granulatd sugar
¼ teaspoon orange fruit coloring
Green gumdrops for decorating

Beat the egg whites until frothy. Add salt and beat until stiff but not dry. Add sugar by tablespoonfuls, beating well after each addition. Add coloring and beat well. Drop by large spoonfuls, about 2 inches apart, onto a cookie sheet lined with plain brown paper. Shape as pumpkins. Bake in a slow oven (275 degrees) for 1¼ hours. Remove from the oven and cool. Cut out bottoms very carefully and fill with prune whip. Cut stems and small leaves from gumdrops. Fasten stem to pumpkin with toothpicks. This makes 6 or 8 meringues, depending on their size.

Halloween Salad for Fruit Salad Tray.

6 halves of canned peaches
¼ cup chopped pecans
1 package cream cheese
3 chocolate drops
3 orange mints
Cloves

Chill the halves of peaches. Blend the cream cheese with the nuts and fill the centers of the peaches. Arrange on lettuce cups. Place the halves of peaches together and slive a thin piece from the bottom of the peach to allow it to stand upright. Top with a flat orange mint and chocolate drop for a hat. Use cloves for the features or bits of candy inserted for eyes, nose and mouth. Serve with whipped cream mayonnaise. Instead of a chocolate drop, chocolate cookies or a marshmallow may be used for a hat.

The whipped cream mayonnaise is made by blending half cup of whipped cream with one cup of mayonnaise. Serve the dressing in a separate serving dish and garnish with a sprinkle of chopped nuts.

Crumb Pie.

As a Nation, we're simply "pie-eyed" when it comes to desserts. And judging from the variety of pie recipes, there isn't anything that doesn't taste better when put into a shell of flaky tender pie crust or finely ground zwieback or graham cracker crumbs.

Capital Dishes

Sally Lunn, Richmond Style, Is Served to Dieticians.

OUR DISH of the week, as seen by The Post Food Editor, is Sally Lund served at the banquet for dietitians at the John Marshall Hotel, in Richmond, Va. On the attractive menus of quaint block print it was stated: "The art of making Sally Lunn, an old English brand, has spread throughout the South. It is a yeast bread enriched with eggs and butter, and cooked in the age-old stem pan."

The banquet, served in the main ballroom, recaptured the gracious hospitality of old Virginia. On the menu were festive foods from all parts of the South.

Menu.

Gulf coast shrimp cocktail
Cream of pimento soup
Cheese crackers
Roast young turkey hen
Giblet gravy
Cornbread dressing
Candied sweet potatoes
Green butterbeans
Cranberry sauce Celery
Southern green salad with herb dressing
Ambrosia
Fruit cake Creole pralines
Coffee

SALLY LUNN.

1 pint roll dough
3 eggs, well beaten
3 tablespoons melted butter
2 tablespoons sugar

Mix thoroughly, pour into greased stem pan and let rise like rolls. Grease on top and bake.

Winter House Plant.

The brilliantly flowered bougainvillae, so characteristic of Miami gardens, can be grown as a house plant in the North during the winter and provides an enchanting spot of color for living room or conservatory. There are several types of the bougainvillae, but that known as scarlet lake, having a bright crimson flower, is the most attractive.

Ham Is Always A Favorite for Dinner Parties

No matter what the size of your dinner party you can be safe in getting ham. For the large parties there are whole baked hams that have an eye appeal any hostess appreciates. For smaller parties there are slices of ham or combination dishes and salads made from sliced boiled ham.

For the very special dinner party, a whole baked ham, nicely browned and decorated with maraschino cherries, presents an imposing appearance. Many different types of fruits can be used to enhance its flavor. Honey or maple syrup, cider, and fruit juices can be used for basting it if desired. Last fall the old Maryland recipe for baked ham basted with champagne gained international prestige.

A garnish of sliced apple rings, pineapple slices, or orange broiled to a delicate brown is attractive.

In planning your menu for the ham dinner, there are certain dishes like candied sweet potatoes, and carrots glazed with butter and sugar that have a natural flavor affinity for the ham. Brocolli with Hollandaise sauce, and French fried okra are Southern favorites.

If you have ham left from your dinner you can use it to advantage in a number of ways. One new combination is with sweet potatoes. For this, cut the baked ham in thin slices and wrap around the cooked sweet potatoes. Fasten with a toothpick and place in a baking dish. Sprinkle with sugar, and any desired fruit juice. Pineapple juice is excellent. Bake in the oven until they are heated. If desired, the fruit sauce can be thickened and raisins added to it before serving.

Bathroom Mirror Hint.

A triple mirror will prove helpful in the bathroom which does not have much space.

Diplomat Set Entertains Visitors From Abroad

Count Potocki to Be Host at Luncheon for 14 Today; Envoy and Mme. Peter to Have Swiss Author as Guest.

The Polish Ambassador, Count Jerzy Potocki, will entertain 14 guests at luncheon today at the embassy, later taking them to the Inter-American Horse Show at Meadowbrook.

• • • •

The Minister of Switzerland and Mme. Peter will have as their guest this week-end Col. Rene Gouzy, widely known Swiss author and explorer. He will lecture Monday evening to members of the Swiss colony here on "With Mittelholzer over the Alps and through Africa." Mittelholbzer was a famous Swiss explorer and aviator who died recently.

The Minister and Mme. Peter will entertain at dinner in honor of Col. Gouzy tomorrow evening and Monday evening before his lecture.

• • • •

The Minister of Hungary, John Pelenyi, will leave the first of the week on a business trip, accompanied by Mme. Pelenyi and they will spend the following week in New York. Miss Flora Mather, of Cleveland, niece of Mme. Pelenyi, will leave Washington to morrow after a week's stay with her aunt and uncle.

• • • •

Mme. Van Haersma de With, wife of the Minister of The Netherlands, is not expected to return from abroad until after Christmas.

• • • •

The Minister of Columbia and Senora de Lopez have as their guest at the legation Alfonso Lopez, son of the President of Colombia, who will enter a Washington university.

• • • •

The Minister of Greece, Demetrios Sicilianos, will return on Wednesday from a speaking trip to Chicago and Pittsburgh.

• • • •

The Dominican Minister, Andres Pastoriza, has returned from a trip to New York, where he went to bid bon voyage to Bonetti Burgos, Foreign Minister of his country, who sailed to return to South America.

• • • •

Senora de Boyed, wife of the Minister of Panama, will entertain at a luncheon today at the legation.

• • • •

The First Secretary of the French Embassy, Roger Gaucheron, and his sister, Mlle. Simone Gaucheron, have taken an apartment at the Roosevelt. This summer they occupied the home of Miss Janet Fish in Georgetown.

• • • •

Former U. S. Envoy And Mrs. Edge Back From Hunting Trip

The former Ambassador to France and Mrs. Walter Edge have returned to Washington from a hunting trip at their summer home in Small Point, Me. They will be here until November 15, when they will open their place at Thomasville, Ga., for more shooting, and will not return to the Capital until after Christmas.

Mr. and Mrs. Dwight Davis, who have an estate in Florida, will go there November 18 to remain about a month until Christmas, when they will come to Washington for a brief stay before returning South.

Suzanne White Is Married Here

Miss Suzanne White, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Mason White, of Akron, Ohio, became the bride yesterday of Reeve L. Biggers, son of John Biggers, recently appointed Administrator of the National Unemployment Census, and Mrs. Biggers.

The ceremony took place at St. Paul's Episcopal Church in Akron, with the Right Rev. Stephen E. Keeler, Bishop of Minnesota, presiding, and the Rev. Walter Tunks assisting.

Guests from Washington in addition to the parents of the bridegroom were Mr. and Mrs. William Walton Brown, brother and sister-in-law of the mother of the bride. Mrs. C. Paul Fox, of Gaithersburg, Md., sister of the father of the bride, was also present.

The bride wore a lace dress with a square neck, short puffed sleeves and full skirt. Her veil also was of lace.

The opening of the National Symphony Orchestra season finds one of its standard bearers, Mrs. Robert H. Dunlap, back in town after a long vacation which included a stay at her Chateau de Coulennes in France and also later in the summer, a visit to the MacDowell Colony, where she has a studio.

Mrs. Dunlap, who attracted wide attention last year through "Encore for Love," her first novel, is already hard at work on another story, "Lady Be Good," which has its publication date this coming January. Before her marriage to the late Brig. Gen. Dunlap, U. S. M. C., Mrs. Dunlap was the former Miss Katharine Wood and is a great-niece of Washington's W. W. Corcoran, through whose civic interests our first art gallery was started.

Mrs. Robert Low Bacon To Honor Clergyman

Mrs. Robert Low Bacon, wife of Representative Bacon, will give a tea next Wednesday at Ariough, her home in Old Westbury, Long Island, at which the Rev. Otis R. Rice, assistant rector of St. Thomas' Church in New York, will be guest of honor.

Miss Murphy Weds Tuesday

J. E. Cramer, Jr., to Marry Capital Girl at St. Paul's Church.

Miss Katharine Egan Murphy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jerome Elmer Murphy, of 2308 Nineteenth street, has completed plans for her wedding on Tuesday morning at 11 o'clock to John Edward Cramer, jr., son of Mr. Cramer, of St. Louis, and the late Mrs. Cramer. The ceremony will take place at St. Paul's Church, the Rev. C. J. Dacey, officiating.

Mrs. W. Gwynn Gardiner, jr., will serve as maid of honor, and the bridesmaids will be Miss Jane Egan, a cousin of the bride, and Miss Katherine Tumulty. William Otto Cramer will serve as his brother's best man, and the ushers will be Maurice O'Reilly, of New York, cousin of the bride-to-be; Charles von Brecht, of St. Louis, cousin of the bridegroom, and George Cassidy and Lee Kenny, of Washington.

A breakfast at the Mayflower Hotel will follow the ceremony. After a wedding trip to the South, the couple will reside at 7100 Lindell avenue in St. Louis.

The bridegroom's father is coming to Washington for the wedding, and other out-of-town guests will be Mrs. Charles von Brecht, and Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Mitchell, of St. Louis, and Mrs. Charles Harper Walsh and Miss Carmel O'Reilly, of New York.

Miss Murphy attended Georgetown Visitation Convent and studied costume designing at Pratt Institute. Mr. Cramer attended Georgetown Law School and is now with the law firm of Paul Bakewell, jr., of St. Louis.

Halvdan Koht On Way to U. S.

Norway's Minister of Foreign Affairs Debarks Tuesday at N. Y.

The Minister of Norway, Wilhelm Munthe de Morgenstierne, will go to New York early next week to meet Dr. Halvdan Koht, Norwegian Minister of Foreign Affairs, who lands on Tuesday. His visit in this country will be filled with social engagements, of which the most important will be the luncheon to be given next Friday by President Roosevelt at his home in Hyde Park.

Dr. Koht will come to Washington on Wednesday and that evening the Norwegian Minister and Mme. Monthe de Morgentierne will give a dinner in his honor at the legation. On Thursday the Secretary of State, Cordell Hull, is giving a luncheon in his honor at the Carlton, and that afternoon Dr. Koht will leave for Hyde Park.

He will return in time for the reception which the Minister and Mme. Monthe de Morgenstierne will give for him on Saturday, October 30, and the next day will leave Washington for Chicago. After making a speech there he will visit Boston before returning to New York.

Mme. Carol Bhejska, wife of the new Counselor of the Czechoslovakian Legation, who, with her family, has recently arrived in Washington and is now residing at 2820 Thirty-sixth place. Her husband succeeds Dr. Joseph Nemecek, who left Washington Wednesday for New York and sails today on the Vulcania, for Prague.

About the Town

With Dudley Harmon

MEMBERS OF THE Supreme Court are going to stay away in droves from the Baltimore premiere of George M. Cohan's New Deal satire, "I'd Rather Be Right," which opens in the Duchess of Windsor's home town on Monday evening. The absence of Justices Brandeis and Cardozo won't, of course, count for much, as they never go to the theater, anyway, but even Chief Justice Hughes, who is fond of the play, will not be among those present.

DUDLEY HARMON.

All nine of them must be heartily bored with being lampooned, anyway.

Who is going to occupy the six seats reserved by Col. Starling, Secret Service head, and Mrs. Malvina Scheider, Mrs. Roosevelt's secretary? The Chief Executive's family will all be out of town that evening. Mrs. Roosevelt left the White House yesterday for a speaking engagement at Cornell University, and will not return to Washington until the first week of November. James Roosevelt will be in his beloved Boston when the play opens, and his wife expects to join him there.

• • • •

ALTHOUGH BALTIMORE is not on Mrs. Roosevelt's announced itinerary for the next week, she would have no reason to fear any digs directed at her. The only crack about the First Lady is when the president of the play in his song "Strictly Off the Record," sings that his wife is a columnist, but he never reads her.

The Attorney General will not, at this writing, be present to hear the President deliver himself to the quip, "Cummings, take down a law." Mr. and Mrs. Cummings are still at White Sulphur Springs, and the Attorney General's secretary doesn't expect them back in time for the opening.

"I'd go in a minute if the play were in Washington," said Representative Sol Bloom, who seemed to think Baltimore was too far away. However, the House and Senate will be represented by Mary Norton and Senator Robert Wagner, who have reserved seats for the performance. Mr. and Mrs. Jouett Shouse are others who have tickets, although the president of the Liberty League is not among those who are made fun of.

• • • •

BOSTON RECEIVED the play enthusiastically, but the producers don't consider this stronghold of conservatives a very good barometer of opinion. For this reason they decided to try it in Baltimore, as Cohan thinks it would hurt his reputation if it opened in New York and was too heavily criticized for its political digs.

An interesting Washington angle to the production is the fact that several songs are sung by Mary Jane Walsh, former student at Trinity College here, and a cousin of Harold Gallagher, a leading New York lawyer. Miss Walsh made her debut last year with Rudy Vallee's orchestra and so impressed an Englishman in the audience that he signed her up to sing at London's Ciro's and Mayfair House during coronation week. Returning to New York after "I'd Rather be Right" had already been cast, she so impressed the composers that they wrote in two songs for her, one of which is called "I'll Take and Take and Take." Only 22, this is her first stage appearance.

• • • •

WITH HER TWO young sons, George and Mannfried, who was born this summer, Frau Herbert Scholz returned to Washington yesterday after several months in Germany. She landed in New York in the morning on the Deutschland and was met by Dr. Scholz, First Secretary of the German Embassy. This attractive pair is one of the most popular couples in the diplomatic corps.

Robert Witthoeft-Emder, naval attache of the German Embassy, will return to Washington on Tuesday, after a vacation abroad.

Iselins in Capital To Attend Wedding Of Miss Laughlin

Among out-of-town guests here for the wedding this afternoon of Miss Gertrude Laughlin to Lieut. Hubert Chanler are several members of the Iselin family. Mrs. Irwin Laughlin, mother of the bride to be, was formerly Miss Therese Iselin, of New York.

They include Mrs. Lewis Iselin, of 178 East Seventh street, and Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Iselin, of 15 East Seventy-fourth street, New York; Mr. and Mrs. Columbus Iselin, of Vineyard Haven, Mass., and Ernest Iselin, jr., of Davenport Neck, New Rochelle, N. Y. The latter is a cousin of Miss Laughlin and will be an usher at the wedding.

All the Iselins, who are staying at the Shoreham, were guests at the dinner given last evening for the wedding party by Mr. and Mrs. Irwin Laughlin.

Completing Her Debut Plans

Harris & Ewing.

Miss Alice Barry, whose parents, Maj. and Mrs. Davis K. Barry, will present her to society at a tea at their home, 2220 Massachusetts avenue on November 19. In December, Miss Barry will also be guest of honor at a dance at the Sulgrave Club.

John Hans Weds Miss Thompson

Miss Catherine Regina Thompson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. V. K. Thompson, became the bride yesterday of John Edward Hans, son of Mr. and Mrs. John J. Hans, at St. Joseph's Church, with the Rev. E. P. MacAdams officiating.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore white satin brocade and a short veil fastened to her coronet. She carried a white prayer book with a shower bouquet of lilies of the valley.

Her sister, Miss Doris Thompson, served as her maid of honor and wore a picture frock of wistaria taffeta with a matching hat. Her flowers were yellow chrysanthemums. Miss Mary Ann Jennings, who was flower girl, appeared in an aquamarine picture frock and carried an old-fashioned bouquet of pink rosebuds.

Robert McVean, of Pittsburgh, was best man. The ushers were Franklin Thompson, Vincent Connelly, George Chappelear and Robert Hans.

At the wedding breakfast which took place at the Hay-Adams House, the mother of the bride wore black embroidered crepe and the mother of the bridegroom chose royal blue velvet. Both wore ochid corsages.

Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone To Show Water Colors

Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, wife of Associate Justice Stone of the United States Supreme Court, will exhibit some of her water colors at a show at the Corcoran Art Gallery from November 13 through December 3.

Among the pictures will be scenes from her summer home at Isle au Haute, Me.; Mexican scenes from her trip there early last summer, and also a New York street scene.

Blackfriars to Give Drama Tomorrow

The Blackfriars Guild will combine a play with a social evening tomorrow night at Catholic University Music Hall.

The works of Henri Gheon, French Catholic playwright, will form the theme of the evening's discussion, and the guild will produce "Old Wang," one of his plays. Prof. Leon E. Dostert, chairman of the modern language department of Georgetown University, will speak on "Henri Gheon and the Catholic Drama in France."

Members of the Blackfriars Guild who will appear in this drama of China at the time of the Boxer rebellion are Edgar Ford, Leo Brady, Clarence Wittler, Edgar L. Kloten, Julian Zier, and Al Loritch. Mary Olive O'Connell derects the performances and the setting was designed and constructed by Jerry Gross.

Mrs. Crowley Selects Nov. 6 for Wedding

Miss Kathleen Crowley has selected November 6 as the date of her wedding to Dr. Clarence Joseph Enzler, of Dubuque, Iowa. The ceremony will be performed at a 9 o'clock nuptial mass at St. Gabriel's Church, with the Rev. Leroy J. Enzler, brother of the bridegroom, officiating.

Miss Beth Crowley, sister of the bride-to-be, will be maid of honor, and Dr. Clarence J. Wittler will be best man.

Ushers will be Henry Lefebure, Edward J. Heffron, Walter P. Enzler and George Berg.

To Visit Farm.

The Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, jr., are expected to leave this evening for Dutchess County, N. Y., and will spend the remainder of the week-end at their farm there.

Charles Remey Gives Fete for Mrs. Griffiths

Former Gertrude Tredick Returns From England for Visit Here.

Mrs. Percival Griffiths, of Sandridgebury, near St. Albans, England, has arrived in Washington to be the guest of Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman and later of the Chief of Naval Operations and Mrs. William D. Leahy. Last evening Charles Mason Remey entertained at a dinner in her honor at his home, 2440 Massachusetts avenue.

Mrs. Griffiths is the former Miss Gertrude Bailey Tredick, of Portsmouth, N. H., and Washington, and made her debut here some years ago. Since her marriage she has lived in England.

Mrs. Tuckerman will entertain at dinner this evening in honor of Mrs. Griffiths, and at tea tomorrow afternoon and at supper afterward for the visitor. Early next week Mrs. Tuckerman and Mrs. Griffiths will leave for Williamsburg, Va., and upon their return Mrs. Griffiths will visit Admiral and Mrs. Leahy.

Mrs. John Winthrop Wadleigh, sister of Mr. Remey, served as his hostess at his dinner last evening. The guests were Rear Admiral and Mrs. Alfred W. Johnson, Rear Admiral and Mrs. William Hemphill Bell, Mr. and Mrs. Tuckerman, Miss Maud L. Davidge, Mrs. Lindsay Russell, Mr. and Mrs. Harrall Mulliken, Mrs. Austin Kautz, Walter D. Davidge, Clarence B. Hewes, Keith Schwinley and George R. Wadleigh.

Other guests invited for after-dinner music included Admiral and Mrs. Leahy, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Charles Connard, Capt. and Mrs. Dudley Carpenter, Capt. and Mrs. Barron P. DuBois, Mrs. James Meredith Helm, Mrs. J. H. Ten Eyck Burr, Mrs. Albert P. Niblack, Mr. and Mrs. George Rublee, Mrs. Harry Taylor, Mrs. Thomas C. Treadwell, Miss Mary L. McQuade, Miss Isabella C. Wells and Miss Alice W. Goodwin.

The musical program was given on the organ by Walter L. Nash, of Saint Alban's Church, assisted by Jeno Sevely, violinist, of the National Symphony Orchestra.

Dinner Honors Miss Phillips

Niece of Envoy to Italy and Friends Entertained by Fiance.

Miss Nina Phillips, niece of the United States Ambassador to Italy and Mrs. William Phillips, was guest of honor at a dinner given on Thursday evening in the Persian room of the Plaza Hotel in New York by her fiance, Stanley Washburn, jr. Miss Phillips is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. John C. Phillips, of Wenham, Mass.

The other guests included Miss Virginia Winmill, of Warrenton, and the Misses Helen Hope, Camilla Moss, Fawan Washburn, Sally Richardson and Lydia Sherwood; Robert McIlvain, David E. Austin, Webb Ware Trimble, Robert H. Radsch, Thomas Wilkins and Bennett Fisher.

• • • •

Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Thomas Q. Ashburn will entertain at a buffet supper this evening in honor of the Assistant Chief of Construction of the Navy, Capt. Henry H. Williams, and Mrs. Williams, who recently moved to Washington from Philadelphia.

Among other guests will be Gen. John A. Hull, Judge and Mrs. O. R. Luhring, Judge and Mrs. James Proctor, Mr. and Mrs. John Lewis Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Robert V. Fleming, Mr. and Mrs. Everett Sanders and Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Shipp.

Elizabeth Donner To Be Bride Today

Mrs. Elizabeth Donner Roosevelt, former wife of President Roosevelt's second son, and Curtin Winsor, of Ardmore, Pa., will be married in Philadelphia today in a quiet church ceremony.

Only members of the immediate families will be present at the ceremony to take place in the chapel of the Second Presbyterian Church with the Rev. Alec MacColl officiating.

Mrs. Roosevelt received a divorce from Elliott Roosevelt and sole custody of their son, William Donner Roosevelt, at Minden, Nev., in July of 1933. She has been a frequent visitor at the White House and at Hyde Park since that time. Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt visited the bride-elect last week.

Mr. Windsor, a graduate of Princeton University and the University of Pennsylvania Law School, is a student at Philadelphia's Curtis Institute of Music.

Mrs. Beveridge, Kin of Mrs. Field, Staying in Capital

Mrs. Albert Beveridge, niece of the late Mrs. Marshall Field, has arrived in Washington from Chicago and is staying at Mrs. Field's home on Sixteenth street, which was left her by her aunt. She will be here until late December.

Spencer Eddy, nephew of Mrs. Field, is at present in Paris, but will return to this country the first of November. He and Mrs. Eddy, the former Viola Crouse, will come to Washington then to visit his sister for about a week.

Visit Capital.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Seay, of Eagle Rock, Va., are at the Raleigh Hotel while in Washington to see their friends, Mrs. E. F. Brooks and Mrs. W. P. Taylor, of Chevy Chase.

Gay Colors on a Windy Field Mark 2d Day of Horse Show

Brother of Cuban Envoy With His Wife and Sister-in-Law Among Throng at Meadowbrook; Wives of Fort Myer Officers Attend.

By Elizabeth Ford.

White and red flags snapping in a dust-raising wind—sunlight blown in gusts across the field—Mrs. John Hay Whitney's entry, Grey Knight, tossing his head as they pinned the blue ribbon on his bridle—Mrs. Whitney, herself, in black hat, black coat and fawn-colored riding breeches—the blue and gold of full-dress Army uniforms—oh, well, picture for yourself the second day of the Inter-American Horse Show at Meadowbrook yesterday afternoon.

Just behind the trophies sat the Cuban Ambassador's brother, the Speaker of the Cuban House of Representatives, in whose honor tonight the Cuban Embassy holds its first formal reception of the season. With him were Senora de Fraga, wife of the Speaker, and her sister, Senorita Hilda Valdes Raimundo, both in black, the only spot of color in their ensembles being the gay little feathers in their jaunty black hats.

Chatting for a moment with the Fort Myer group was Mrs. Irving Brotman, in a wine ensemble with which she wore a dark suede hat with a visor of contrasting green and russet. Next to her was Mrs. John Meade, wife of Capt. Meade, in informal riding clothes.

Mrs. William McClellan, wife of Dr. McClellan, left her box now and then to talk with friends. For the sports event she had chosen blue tweeds with a matching hat in a shade of darker blue. Mrs. Wallace Chiswell sat nearby in tweeds also—powder blue.

Mrs. Peyton C. March, wife of Gen. March, U. S. A., occupied a front-row box wearing a burgundy-colored suit, black hat and black fox furs. Mrs. J. M. Wainwright, wife of the Commandant of Fort Myer, wore a brown coat, black velvet hat and black veil.

Mrs. Frank L. Whittaker, whose husband, Maj. Whittaker, is responsible for the success of the Inter-American, was present in soft, russet tweeds and darker sports hat, not missing a thing from behind her brown sun glasses. Mrs. Alexander Lyon, wife of Dr. Lyon, arrived late in a black suit topped with a silver skyscraper hat.

The audience which filled the boxes could have been counted in the hundreds, all in gay, informal mood.

Later in the afternoon, after the exhibition, the Belgian Ambassador and Countess van der Straten-Ponthoz gave a reception in honor of the much-entertained Belgian team.

Luncheon Given For Miss Ayres

Mrs. E. L. Davis Entertains for Bride-to-Be of Mr. Weigester.

Mrs. Ewin L. Davis entertained yesterday at luncheon at her home in Alexandria in honor of Miss Margaret Ayres, daughter of William A. Ayres, chairman of the Federal Trade Commission. Miss Ayres' engagement to Mr. William Frederick Weigester was announced recently, the wedding to take place in November.

Guests at the luncheon were Mrs. Charles H. March, Mrs. Robert E. Freer, Mrs. Finis Garrett, Mrs. Harllee Branch, Mrs. Kingman Brewster, Mrs. South Trimble, jr., Mrs. William B. Snow, jr., Mrs. Albert Waller, Mrs. J. Craig Peacock and Mrs. George W. Williams.

Tweeds from Garfinckel's

never fail to lend individuality to those clever women and misses who choose them for sports, rough and ready country wear, for town and daytime activities. There is such a diversity in styling that you will always find just the suit or coat for your special need . . . some are simple in line and cut, others are handsomely tailored in three-piece fashions with furred or unfurred topcoats. The harmonious colors are especially attractive for now and later for wear under your fur coat. Today is a very good time to see these special groups of tweeds on our Third and Fourth Floors.

Mrs. Henry Ford Will Give Farm and Home Garden Association $5,000 a Year for Headquarters and Executive Secretary

3-Year Gift Contingent on Club Women Raising a Similar Amount.

Honor Guest at Luncheon; Mrs. Babcock Discusses Reorganization.

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

Mrs. Henry Ford came as a fairy godmother to the meeting of the National Council of the Woman's National Farm and Garden Association yesterday at the A. A. U. W. clubhouse. She listened to its plan of reorganization as presented by Mrs. Murray Boocock, new national president, and then offered it $5,000 annually for three years, contingent on the association's raising a similar sum for the establishment of a national headquarters and employment of an executive secretary. Her offer was enthusiastically accepted.

She did little talking except for expressing interest in the work of the association and presenting her offer for promoting its program.

"There is great need for the work we are sponsoring," she said in an interview at the luncheon which followed the morning session. "This is the only organization of its kind, designed to bring women of the cities in touch with those of the country in an effort to help them find profitable market for their produce, and offering scholarships to educate girls in agriculture and the crafts. Present conditions make its program of much importance. With an executive secretary we shall be able to acquaint women generally with what the association is doing and enlist their co-operation."

Magazine Responsible For Her Membership.

Mrs. Ford, a small, alert person, who talked quietly but with definite purpose, joined the association originally not because of interest in its work, for she knew nothing about it, then. "They may not like me to say it, but I really joined in the first place in order to subscribe for their fine little magazine," she confessed, "I was interested in gardening and liked its articles. Then, through reading it, I became acquainted with the association's purpose and became an active member during its early years."

She was dressed in black yesterday, wearing a tailored black dress with a black hat trimmed in feathers and a fur scarf.

Mrs. Robert A. Ware, of Boston, editor of the association's publication, was among those who attended the council meeting and the luncheon following at which Mrs. Ford was guest of honor.

Plans were discussed for the new headquarters, which will be maintained for the present in Charlottesville, the home of the president, but eventually will be established in Washington. Announcement was also made of the appointment of Mrs. Howard L. Lewis, of Pittsburgh, past president of the association, as national treasurer to succeed Miss Jane Haines, a charter member, who died in September.

Many Sections Are Represented.

Other members of the national council who were here for the meeting yesterday included Mrs. Lynn McNaughton, of Grosse Pointe Farms, Mich.; Mrs. E. R. Bryant, of Dearborn, and Mrs. Edith M. Forbush, of Detroit, who accompanied Mrs. Ford; Mrs. Ellis Yost, of Huntington, W. Va., president of the West Virginia Association; Mrs. Alexander J. Barron, of Pittsburgh; Miss Emma L. Martin, of Princeton, N. J.; Mrs. Jay Winston Johns, of Charlottesville, president of the Capital Division, of which Mrs. Ford is honorary president; Mrs. Arthur T. Esgate, of Washington; Mrs. F. Wayland Ayer, of Chestnut Hill, Mass.; Mrs. Harold Murdock, also of Chestnut Hill, president of the New England Division; Mrs. Edward V. Huntington, of Cambridge, Mass.; Mrs. Bartlett Johnston, of Baltimore; Mrs. Charles D. Walcott, of Washington; Mrs. Horace B. Tobin, of Trenton, N. J.; Mrs. Francis King, honorary national president, of South Hartford, N. Y.; Miss Sara Bulette, of Philadelphia; Mrs. Raymond A. Pearson, of Hyattsville, and Miss Betty Straub, office secretary of the association, who was here from Ambler, Pa., where the office has been maintained at the School of Horticulture for Women.

Pi Phi Chapter To Give Tea Here

The Washington Alumnae Club of Pi Beta Phi will entertain Tuesday with a tea at the home of Miss Marion McCoy honoring Mrs. Adele Alford, a member of the grand council and editor of the Arrow, official organ of the sorority.

The delegates and alternates of the District of Columbia Panhellenic Association, the president of local alumnae clubs, national university sororities and the active chapters of Pi Beta Phi at George Washington University will be guests.

Assisting in receiving will be Mrs. W. Thomas Magruder, Mrs. Samuel Spruce, Miss Margaret Emelie White and Mrs. Rogers Fred, president of the Washington Alumnae Club.

Those assisting in the dining room will include Mrs. Frank Nesbit, Mrs. Willard Hart, Miss Florence Berryman, Miss Mary K. Lutz, Mrs. Winslow Nesbit and officers of the club. Mrs. B. Harrison Lingo is Panhellenic delegate and Miss McCoy alternate from the sorority.

An exhibition of Arrowcraft linens, textiles and rugs made at the settlement school in Gatlinburg, Tenn., maintained by the school, will be a feature of the occasion.

University Women's Session To Draw Many Leaders Here

Dean Virginia C. Gildersleeve, of Barnard College, will be here from New York next week to report to the national council of the American Association of University Women on the Paris meeting of the International Federation of University Women, of which she is president. Dr. Margaret S. Morriss, dean of Pembroke College, of Brown University, at Providence, R. I., will preside at the sessions of the council Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, for which distinguished university women from all parts of the country will come to the Capital.

They will be guests of honor Tuesday night at a dinner sponsored by the education committee of the Washington branch of the association, of which Mrs. Richard Hogue is president, under the chairmanship of Mrs. Robert Olesen. Miss Constance Warren, president of Sarah Lawrence College, Bronxville, N. Y., will speak on "What Educates a Girl?"

Mrs. Hogue will preside at the dinner, and receiving with her and Mrs. Olesen preceding it will be all of the national officers except Dean Morriss, who will not arrive until Wednesday. They include Dr. Louise Pound, noted English scholar, of the University of Nebraska, first vice president; Dr. Edna Noble White, director of Merrill Palmer School, in Detroit, second vice president, and Mrs. A. Ross Hill, of Kansas City, Mo., treasurer.

Co-operation in consumer movements will be one of the matters to come before the council. The A. A. U. W. has taken an active part in the demand for standards and informative labels on retail items, which is gaining increasing co-operation from the retailers.

Dr. Woolley To Make Report.

The report of the committee on international relations, of which Dr. Mary E. Woolley is chairman, is considered of particular importance in this time of international crises. Under this committee, there has been developed throughout the association a broad program of study to cultivate an informed public opinion on international matters.

An innovcation in the association's study program to be reviewed by the board is a recently launched study of the American family, in which groups of university women have agreed not only to study changes in family life under the stresses and strains of modern conditions, but have also promised to contribute to a composite picture of the family of the trained American woman today.

The board will also consider standards in colleges and universities admitting women in connection with membership in the association. A. A. U. W. admits to membership only the graduates of those institutions which it has approved for academic standing and provision for women students.

One of the items to be reported by Dean Gildersleeve has to do with representation of the United States on the international committee making fellowship awards. Four members from this country have been appointed to the international committee, and to the American section, meeting in the United States once in three years, the international awards will be entrusted. The American association considers this especially important, in view of the fact that several of the fellowships being raised as part of the $1,000,000 fellowship fund campaign will be international awards open to women of other countries.

Many Prominent Educators to Attend.

Many leading women educators of the country are included in the membership of the council. Sectional directors who will attend the sessions are Dr. Elizabeth F. Jackson, of Agnes Scott College, Decatur, Ga.; Mrs. Adam Leroy Jones, of Montclair, N. J.; Dean Irma E. Voigt, of Ohio University, Athens, Ohio; Miss Martha Enochs, of Jackson, Miss.; Mrs. H. K. Painter, Minneapolis; Dean Margaret M. Justin, Kansas State Agricultural College, Manhattan, Kans.; Mrs. W. S. Garnsey, Greeley, Colo.; Mrs. L. T. Merwin, Portland, Oreg.; Mrs. Frederick Faulkner, San Francisco.

Committee chairmen include Dr. Woolley, of Westport, N. Y., as chairman of international relations; Mrs. Arthur S. Heineman, of Los Angeles, chairman of education; Mr. Faith Williams, of this city, chairman of the social studies; Miss Lura Beam, of Philadelphia, chairman of the arts; Dr. Katharine Rogers Adams, of Albany, of membership and maintaining standards; Dr. Katharine J. Gallagher, of this city, chairman of the fellowship awards; Dean Harriet Elliott, of Woman's Carolina, chairman of the legislaCollege, University of North tive program; Mrs. Hogue, president of the Washington branch, chairman of the national clubhouse committee, and Dr. Susan M. Kingsbury, of Bryn-Mawr, chairman of the committee on the economic and legal status of women.

Dr. Katheryn McHale, general director of the A. A. U. W., and Mrs. J. K. McClintock, comptroller, also will attend the sessions.

Church Women Shown Movies

Members of the Woman's Council of the Federation of Churches had the program of the Juvenile Court department brought to their doorstep yesterday in a showing of motion pictures presented by Miss Etta Mai Russell, Juvenile Court worker, at their fall rally at Luther Place Memorial Church. Mrs. Frank A. Linzel, president of the council, presided at the morning session and Mrs. Thomas J. Howerton, chairman of the department, in the afternoon.

The pictures showed the summer programs in the alleys, the toy truck, the dolls and their little foster mothers to whom they were given under the "doll adoption" plan, the camps and other activities of the department.

The Rev. W. R. Moody, chairman of the department of religious education of the Diocese of Washington and rector of St Mark's Episcopal Church, addressed the women at the morning session, pointing out the responsibility of the community to the child. Mrs. Dudley N. Carpenter also spoke, and music was provided by Prof. R. Dean Shure, of Mount Vernon Place Church.

The devotional service was in charge of the Rev. John L. Mixon, and Dr. W. L. Darby pronounced the benediction. The luncheon at noon was served by the Lutheran women, under the leadership of Mrs. Frank Burger, with Mrs. Arthur Briscoe as hostess.

G. W. KEYED FOR GREAT GAME WITH TIDE TODAY; U. S. ARMY, WHITNEY HORSES SWEEP SHOW EVENTS

The Washington Post Sports

*X WASHINGTON: SATURDAY, OCTOBER 23, 1937 19

This Morning

G. W. U. Scores With Public Here.

By Shirley Povich.

The man in the street may hold no great respect for George Washington's football team as a touchdown-producing unit, and he is apt to look down his nose at the forward-pass defense of the Colonials, but one things he must concede to G. W. U.: Precious few would be the big-time games in Washington were it not for the schedule-making ability of the Colonials.

POVICH.

Today the G. W. U. team takes the field against the Crimson Tide of Alabama at Griffith Stadium, and once more the football-going public of the city is beholden to George Washington for a five-star football attraction. No other college of the local group has shown the willingness or the ability to schedule such as Alabama.

* * * *

They can never accuse the Colonials of ducking the tough ones. In recent years Athletic Director Jim Pixlee has brought Alabama (three times), Tennessee, Louisiana State, Vanderbilt, Rice and Arkansas to the Capital. Only once was George Washington able to squeeze out a victory in those games, but victory apparently was not the purpose. G. W. willingly risked defeat to do duty by its customers.

* * * *

Beaten, yes, but never a push-over, have these George Washington teams been. And the suspicion is that Alabama will not find the Colonials a set-up today. If the Colonials have proved nothing else, they have proved they are a worthy trial horse. If any team of the local college group stands a chance of beating Alabama, then that team is George Washington with its ably coached squad.

* * * *

There isn't any great natural rivalry between Alabama and George Washington; in fact there is none, but it makes for a good football game. Alabama can hardly hope to increase its national prestige with a victory over George Washington. It has little to gain and much to lose; in fact, but the chance is worth taking in the light of the $10,000 guarantee that Alabama is getting.

* * * *

That kind of money which the athletic heads of George Washington are willing to pay is a powerful attraction for teams such as Alabama, which does not average nearly that much in its Southern games. The game that this fall loomed as the greatest revenue producer in the South—the Alabama-Tennessee affair of last week—drew a crowd of 28,000, and it is doubtful if Alabama's end of the gate approached the guarantee it is getting today.

* * * *

The team that Coach Frank Thomas will put on the field for Alabama has Rose Bowl aspirations, to hear the Eastern football critics tell it, but apparently they are forgetting about the recent rule passed in the Southeastern Conference, to wit and viz: that the Southeastern Conference winner must accept any proffered invitation to compete in the Sugar Bowl game at New Orleans on New Year's Day.

* * * *

The New Orleans people, with great zest and financial backing, are intent on building the Sugar Bowl battle up to Rose Bowl proportions, but the chances are that Alabama, if unbeaten this season, will seriously consider snubbing the Sugar Bowl.

* * * *

Each time that Alabama has played in the Rose Bowl it has dragged away more than $80,000 as its end of the gate and that kind of money is not offered by the Sugar Bowl. It is also pertinent to observe that that kin dof money makes the wheels go round. Alabama is apt to kick over the conference traces if it gets a Rose Bowl invitation.

* * * *

This fellow Thomas who has succeeded in a large way as the Alabama coach ever since he succeeded Wallace Wade all but accepted the job of coach at Louisiana State after the close of the 1934 season.

* * * *

That was the year, you remember, when the late Huey Long fired "Biff" Jones as the Louisiana State coach and then demanded that his university officials get the best coach in the country for his school. Frank Thomas was the man they sought, and to Thomas they offered a $15,000 yearly contract along with other honorariums that would boost his salary to nearly $20,000.

* * * *

Thomas, who was taking his Alabama team to the Rose Bowl, did not give the L. S. U. people an immediate answer. The L. S. U. folks, however, sent their athletic director to the Coast along with Thomas to press their offer. Each day he asked Thomas to sign and each day he was told to wait until after the Rose Bowl game. Finally the fellow became exasperated and withdrew the offer to Thomas.

Dry Field for Game

Alabama and George Washington will have a dry field for their game this afternoon despite last night's heavy rains, Clark Griffith reported. The field is protected by a tarpaulin covering which was placed over it immediately after the Tide completed practice yesterday. It will not be removed until just before game time.

Bush Refuses Bee's Offer

Minneapolis, Oct. 22 (AP).—Five successful years as manager of the Minneapolis American Association Baseball Club and the pleasant associations built up here outweighed today for Donie Bush a "flattering offer" to manage the Boston Bees.

Bush, who had piloted four different major league clubs at various times before coming to Minneapolis, said he had wired Bob Quinn, Bees president, his decision to remain as Minneapolis manager during 1938.

"It was hard to pass up a chance to return to the major leagues as a manager," Bush said, "but I have been so happy in Minneapolis that I am really glad that I have decided to stay. Mike Kelley (Minneapolis president), the newspapers and the fans have been so grand to me that I didn't have the heart to leave."

Bush's Minneapolis teams have won three association pennants.

"Mr. Quinn made me a fine offer to manage the Boston club," he continued, "but I have reached the age where money isn't everything. Fortunately, I am well fixed financially and can afford to turn down the Boston proposition.

"With the exception of the three years I managed my home town team of Indianapolis, I never was so happy anywhere as I have been in Minneapolis."

During his long baseball career, Bush also directed the Washington Senators, the Chicago White Sox, the Pittsburgh Pirates and the Cincinnati Reds.

Let's Hope Old George Repeats

Reserve Lack Main Worry Of Colonials

Alabama Heavy Favorite Over Locals; Game at 2:30 P. M.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

An all-powerful Alabama eleven with a potent reputation and an abundance of talent to uphold it, and an untested but ambitious George Washington team meet this afternoon at Griffith Stadium in what may well be the most colorful local game of the season. The kick-off is scheduled for 2:30 o'clock.

Undefeated in four games, scored on only once, and fresh from a convincing 14-7 triumph over Tennessee, the current edition of the Tide appears to be fully as strong as the two teams which preceded it here. Alabama dealt the downtown school a humiliating 28-6 defeat in their first game, and crushed it two years ago in their second meeting, 41-0.

Pre-game odds indicate another overwhelming Alabama triumph, for the Crimson is a 4-1 favorite. Most George Washington supporters were asking, and getting, 15 points at even money. Few were taking the juicier straight odds, which would seem to indicate that the majority are hopeful the District team will hold its guest to a respectable score.

Plenty of Reserves.

While Coach Frank Thomas' eleven is not as big, physically, as usual, it still packs enough heft to match George Washington. It is fast, reputedly speedier than the Colonials, and is three-deep at every position, whereas the downtown school is notably lacking in reserve strength.

Probably the outstanding star in the visitors' backfield is Charley Holm, 191-pound fullback and triple-threat star. He excels in passing, and is the key man in the team's aerial attack. In 20 passes Holm has made nine good for total gains of 148-yards. His line-cracking

Hot Battles in Sectional Warfare Due to See Grid Leaders Toppled

Title Contenders Are Paired in Six 'Big Leagues.'

By Alan Gould.

Associated Press Sports Editor.

New York, Oct. 22 (AP).—All roads traversed by this week's football forecasters lead to the nearest bomb-proof shelter.

There's every indication, from coast to coast, that tomorrow's collegiate gridiron returns will shell-shock the intrepid dopesters besides supplying sufficient thrills for the wildes-eyed among several million onlookers.

For the first time in the current campaign, sectional warfare dominates the proceedings. There's plenty of intersectional sharpshooting, especially on the Eastern front, but the chief combative prospects involve long-standing "natural" rivals.

Championship contenders are paired in six of the so-called "big leagues" of college football, with unbeaten records involved, and the outcome highly speculative in every instance.

Great Crowds Expected.

Top crowd forecast is 75,000 for Southern California's challenge to united, unbeaten California, currently the Nation's No. 1 ranking team, at Berkeley. Ohio State expects 70,000 to see its Battling Bucks tangle with Northwestern, 1936 Big Ten titleholder. Close to 50,000 will be on hand for each of the two principal "Ivy League" pairings—Cornell-Yale at New Haven and Dartmouth-Harvard at Cambridge.

Navy's invasion of Notre Dame, for one of the day's outstanding intersectional engagements, is expected to draw 45,000 spectators. At least a dozen other games will attract from 20,000 to 35,000 fans in various sections of the country.

Nearly a score of major teams have so far escaped either tie or defeat, but they will be lucky to get as much as an even break in tomorrow's touchdown scramble. The sharp curtailment of the select list, in a number of cases, will come under the heading of either an upset or a surprise.

Here are the major prospects, as viewed from behind barbed wire entaglements:

Sectional Headliners.

Southern California-California—Ambrose Schindler has been ambling high, wide apd handsome for the Trojans, who are intent upon wiping out the effects of an early season setback by Washington. It's one of the day's best spots for the underdog, but the Golden Bears have shown no weakness so far. California.

Northwestern-Ohio State—Another shooting match. Ohio took an extra week to prepare for this one, while the Wildcats saved a flock of fresh replacements just for the occasion. On a double lateral from a forward pass, Ohio State.

Baylor-Texas A. & M.—Unbeaten and united Baylor will feature Billy Patterson's aerial sharpshooting, but the Aggies' line and all-around capable defense is likely to decide. Texas A. & M.

Nebraska-Missouri: Missouri is over-due to cash in on its many

'Fire Hunch' Boys Collect Second Time

Gould Favors California Today; Picks Irish Over Navy.

push-over, but Army should hold he fort.

Manhattan-Kentucky — Manhattan's manpower versus an attack revolving around Bob Davis. On the numerical system, Manhattan.

Western Reserve-Boston University—Unbeaten in 27 starts, Western Reserve's streak should remain intact.

East: Unbeaten Rutgers hasn't beaten Princeton since they played the first American college game in 1869, and the Tigers still look too formidable for the Scarlet. Lafayette likewise figures to be dumped from the unbeaten ranks by New York University. Otherwise it looks like Amherst over Wesleyan in the first "little three" match, Holy Cross over Western Maryland, Columbia over Brown, Villanova over Bucknell and Pennsylvania over Georgetown.

Midwest: Four Big Ten teams are idle for the week, including Minnesota. Iowa gets the call over Michigan on the theory the Wolverines are still shell-shocked; Michigan State over Marquette, Indiana over Cincinnati, Oklahoma over Kansas, Kansas State over Creighton, Drake over Iowa State, and Catholic over St. Louis.

South: Tulane's stouter defense appears to give the Green Wave the edge over North Carolina in an interconference headliner. Otherwise it looks like V. M. I. over Virginia, Virginia Tech over Washington and Lee, North Carolina State over Wake Forest, Georgia over Mercer, and Florida over Mississippi State.

Far West: Washington, if its backfield is at full strength, figures to outscore Stanford. In other Pacific Coast Conference scraps it looks like U. C. L. A. over Washington State, Oregon over Oregon State. Colorado, unbeaten and untied Rocky Mountain power, gets the call over Colorado State, with Utah the choice over Denver.

power but the team that beat Minnesota is still intact, despite last week's letdown in the rain. Nebraska, but not by much.

Dartmouth-Harvard: The Indians have scalped four opponents but this is a different warpath, and the tomahawk may prove just a boomerang. Harvard, primed and polished, is the choice.

Cornell-Yale: On the upswing after last week's surprise setback at Syracuse's hands, Cornell will be tough to take, with or without George Peck, but Yale gets the call for two reasons: (1) greater experience and (2) Clint Frank, the East's best all-round back.

Auburn-Georgia Tech: After two scoreless matches, Auburn exploded at Mississippi State's expense last week, while Georgia Tech lost a scoring spree to Duke. After the fireworks, Georgia Tech.

Louisiana State-Vanderbilt: Only one touchdown has been scored by the combined opposition of these two unbeaten, untied aggregations. It's going to take some slick passing to crack either defense, and on that basis the choice goes to Vanderbilt, tutored by Ray Morrison, a past master at the aerial game.

Southern Methodist-Arkansas: Swinging from limb to limb, Arkansas.

Rice-Texas: Rice has yet to score a point, Texas.

Major Intersectionals.

Navy-Notre Dame: A good spot to let the breaks decide. Both mislaid their scoring punch last week but Fighting Irish are due to shake off those goal-line jitters. Notre Dame.

Wisconsin - Pittsburgh — There's only one answer on form—Pittsburgh—but the Panthers haven't done any man-eating for three weeks against rugged defensive outfits and Wisconsin has at least an outside chance to shock the Rose Bowl champs.

Texas Christian-Fordham — Rushing the passer is the best defense against aerial attacks. The Rams annoy anybody who has the ball. Fordham.

Duke-Colgate—The Dukes have been lured a long way from home, but there's no occasion for alarm. Duke, decisively.

Syracuse-Maryland — This is no spot for the Orange to rest on laurels gained at Cornell's expense. It may be close. Syracuse.

Detroit-Boston College—No team has yet stopped Andy Farkas, Detroit's ball-lugging terror. There's no harm trying. Detroit.

Washington (St. Louis)-Army—No

Hoyas Lose Valiquette by Resignation

Star Quarterback Quits Team and School in Philadelphia.

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

A Staff Correspondent.

Philadelphia, Pa., Oct. 22.—Georgetown University's football fortunes, beset with injuries to virtually the entire squad and suffering from successive defeats by Holy Cross and Lafayette were dealt a further bow on the eve of the Pennsylvania game today when Wilford Valiquette, quarterback from North Tonawanda, N. Y., resigned from school and left wor his home.

The Hoyas' signal-calling ace, who led the team in the Holy Cross and Lafayette battles, practiced with the squad yesterday but failed to report this morning and was reported en route to his Northern home. No reason could be given for his actions.

A brief signal drill on Franklin Field was the extent of the Georgetown workout this afternoon, with three full teams drilling before leaving for the Manufacturers Club, where they will spend the night, on the outskirts of the city.

Tommy Keating and Elmer Moulin, two of the three players injured in the scrimmage with the Redskins, worked out and will probably see action for a time tomorrow.

Coach Jack Hagerty announced that starting backfield would consist of Dooley, Keating, Mellendick and either Wychunas or Urbanski. Cavadine and Snyder will start at end, with Stralka and Joe Frank at guard, Hardy at center and John Frank and either Shuker or Burke at tackle.

The Hoyas are invading the city for the fourth time since 1893. They have yet to score on the Quakers, although the last meeting between the teams, in 1924, resulted in only a 3-to-0 win for the hosts with one of their greatest teams in history. Hagerty, present coach, played halfback for the losing Hoya team, under Lou Little.

Temple Upsets Dope to Beat Carnegie Tech by 7-0 Score

By the United Press.

Temple Stadium, Philadelphia, Oct. 22.—A powerful first-period scoring punch gave Temple University a 7-0 upset victory over Carnegie Tech's football team tonight in a game that was played in a drenching rain from the opening whistle.

Twenty-five thousand spectators saw Temple go into an early lead midway through the first quarter, when Chris Pappas, who bore the brunt of the Temple attack, cracked through a stubborn Carnegie line from the 1-yard line for the touchdown and converted with a placekick.

Temple's score came after Kovacevich's 65-yard punt had placed Tech on its 25-yard line. Condit attempted to punt out of danger, but he was hurried and the ball went out of bounds on the Tech 25. Vince Renzo came up to the 19 on a double reverse and then Lukac took another reverse from Pappas that gained 13 yards to the Tech 6. Carnegie was penalized 5 yards for being offside and Pappas crashed through on the next play.

International Title Clinched by Dakota

Veteran Jumper, With Lieut. F. K. Wing, Jr., Up, Performs Brilliantly; Belgian Riders Fail to Place in Money; Capt. Matteson Stars.

With a performance as brilliant as the sheen of his silken-black coat, the show-ring veteran, Dakota, literally lifted the United States Army team into the international, individual championship at the Inter-American Horse Show yesterday.

Faultlessly taking the difficult jumps at the Meadowbrook Saddle Club course with Lieut. Franklyn K. Wing, jr., on his back, the venerable Dakota eclipsed every entry of the Belgian Army team as an enrapt audience of 2,500 applauded.

Dakota's time was 1 minute, 14 seconds and it was equaled only by one Belgian entry—the famed Ibrahim with Lieut. Mondron up. But Ibrahim was charged with eight faults.

It was a drab day for the Belgians, who had taken a lead in the international team competition on Thursday. In the open jumping class, the Europeans failed to place a mount in the money, with the Fort Myer team, led by Capt. Milo Matteson, sweeping all places.

Feature Event.

The international, individual jumping class—the feature event on yesterday's program—was opened with great panoply. Red and yellow pennants fluttering from their lances, the machine gun troop of the crack Negro Tenth Cavalry trotted into the field in column of fours. Their halter ropes and saddle pads were bright yellow and there were yellow bandages around the fetlocks of their mounts. They wheeled into line before the reviewing stand and dipped their lances to the Belgian and American colors standing in front of it.

The Third Cavalry Band (dismounted), played the "Barbraconne" and "The Star-Spangled Banner."

It was the good fortune of the American Lieut. Wing to be victor in both of the climactic classes. At the end of the big $500 Jumper Stake, in which both officers and civilians competed, five horses, three American and two Belgian, stood at honors easy. In the jump-off four of the five—the exception was Acrobate, with the Belgian Lieut. Poswick up—took the jumps without a fault, and it became a question of timing.

Some Great Riding.

Lieut. Wing had made a beautiful showing of the brilliant Army jumper, Joe Aleshire. A moment later Capt. B. F. Luebbermann made what seemed an equally faultless showing of Billy. But the stop watch showed that Joe Aleshire had bested Billy by two-fifths of one second.

It was Virginia day and a number of prominent Virginians were present. Senator Harry Byrd, who had excepted an invitation to officially represent his State, was obliged to send a refusal due to an accident suffered by his mother.

The Model Hunter class, first event of the day, was judged in the paddock by Maj. Henry G. Leonard and Col. Wyndham W. T. Torr, British Military Attache. The blue went to Mrs. John Hay Whitney's chesnut gelding The Bear. This award surprised no one, as The Bear had won the model class at Warrenton and has been victorious in many other shows. He is a fine looking animal and wears his laurels well. Second went to Mrs. Whitney's Grey Knight.

The second class, a spectacular hunt team event, saw the triumplant return to Mrs. Whitney's gray team to the show ring. This eye-filling combination has not competed as a team for four years, and it is good to see them cleaning up again. Second went to an Army entry consisting of Jinwich, ridden by Miss Jane Kromer, the Chief of Cavalry's daughter, Mully Grubble, owned by Lieut. Col. T. J. Johnson, and Tandem, owned and ridden by Miss Louise Chase Myers. They had a beautifully smooth performance. Awards in this class were presented by Harry Worcester Smith, famed sports writer and "dean of American fox hunting."

Army and Fort Split.

The first jumping class of the day was a fault and out test. The United States Army team and the Fort Myer team divided the ribbons, with the Belgians losing out all around after several hard-ridden jump-offs. First went to Scamps Boy, a brown gelding on his first trip into the Eastern circuit. He is an extraordinarily bold fencer, keen and alert as they come.

The exhibition of dressage by Capt. Isaac L. Kitts on his Olympic horse, American Lady, was received with flatteringly rapt attention and a great burst of applause. It has only been two years since Washington show fans were first introduced to this particularly difficult and artistic form of equitation and now there are many devotees.

Later in the day the Whitney grays took three places in the Corinthian class, which just about establishes their supremacy in the hunter division of the show, which is a slightly hollow victory for this great stable, as the competition is

Challephen Beats Out Red Rain to Win by Length in Laurel Feature

Late Drive In Stretch Nets Victory

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Laurel Oct. 22.—Challephen, a 4-year-old gelding owned by W. L. Brann, chose to run today and defeated a crack field of routers in the Manteo Purse, a test of a mile and a sixteenth that drew seven to the post. With Joe Wagner applying a stinging whip in the stretch, Challephen downed Red Rain, owned by Gwladys Whitney, by a length. Floradora, in the colors of E. D. Shaffer, was third, the loser of second money via the photo.

Challephen ran over the slow but drying track in 1:47 4-5. The fair program drew 8,500 customers who put the heavy money on Floradora and Evergold with a $50.20 price tag being displayed on Challephen.

The winner was not prominent in the early running. Jockey Wagner allowed him to settle into his best stride before calling for speed. Along the backstretch, Challephen began moving up as Evergold and Biscayne Blue fought for the lead. Approaching the stretch both Biscayne Blue and Evergold began to tire. Wagner then went to the whip and gained the front to stay. Floradora was in tight quarters along the backstretch but closed full of run, was forced to yield to a greater drive by Red Rain which came from last place.

Bloomer Girl, owned and trained by Buddy Hirsch, and Sought After, trained by his sister, Mary Hirsch, competed in the first event. Both were well played and the victory went to Bloomer Girl at an $8.50 mutuel. Sought After was far out of the money. Byrd's Flight, a 106-1 shot, was second, ahead of Exhilaration, another long one. Byrd's Flight ran Hiblaze into submission, but tired badly and fell victim to Bloomer Girl.

Mattapony, Howard Bruce Trojan filly, gave her backers no anxious moments in the second race. She forged to the front soon after the break and there were no catchers in the group of six behind her. Wise Dart and My Elsie were closest at the finish. Mattapony paid $6.40 in winning her third race in four starts here.

The Glen Riddle Farm's Great Blaze ran a good race to take the third event. Ridden by Eddie Arcaro, the Big Blaze gelding caught Aglow and went on to hold Miss Marlboro safe in final drive. The latter was second ahead of the faltering Aglow. Great Blaze paid an $11.90 mutuel.

Xandra, a $5.10 favorite, made good for a host of backers in the fourth race. With Jockey Wayne Wright piloting, Xandra came around a front group to wear down Miss Tiptoe in the final stages. Secret Vote was third in the field of nine contesting at a mile and a furlong.

WITH BILL BENNINGS

Dear Al:

Two big stakes are on today's program at this track—the $7,500 added Maryland Handicap and the $10,000 added Selima Stakes. However, the champions in both classes will be kept in their stables. War Admiral will not face the barrier in the mile and a quarter contest for 3-year-olds and Merry Lassie will not go the mile in the Selima, a battle for juvenile fillies. However, formidable fields compete in both events. Heelfly, carrying 122 pounds, meets Eagle Pass, Burning Star, War Minstrel, Over the Top and others. Merry Lassie's absence leaves the Selima a very open race. Track officials will be disappointed if less than 20,000 customers are in the stands. Pete Bostwick, polo star and amateur rider, was a visitor this morning and worked some of his horses. Bob Kleberg, King Ranch owner, is here to see Maravilla perform tomorrow in the Selima. Jockey Ira Hanford resumes riding on Monday. War Admiral probably will see action Monday or Tuesday. An effort will be made to arrange an overnight race for the 3-year-old champion. If he goes good, he may start in the Washington Handicap here closing day. First Pigeon has been claimed by Mrs. L. Heming. De Chile has been added to the schooling list. George Cook and Peg Hanna will ship their horses to Charles Town. Preston Burch will keep the Jeffords horses in training through Bowie. The Selima will bring $25,180 to the winner if the entire field goes. The Maryland winner gets $6,925 if all go.

BILL.

First race—Nansemond seems much better suited in this field than in the Selima. If she goes here I'm going to string along. Semi Luna showed good early speed last out and may have needed that race for educating purposes. Joanny to take care of the others.

Second race—Fast Express will like the track if it becomes fast and I'm going to take my chances. The light weight assignment helps. Mower is dangerous despite those 117 pounds. Marching Home might be the surprise of the race.

Third race—The Compton entry of Church Call and Flagstone to have a lock and key on this purse. Either is capable of taking the decision. Shot and Shell and Bushmaster to hold the others safe.

Fourth race—I'm going to take Sun Flo in the Selima. This Kilmer miss has shown me ability to come from behind. If she's steadied along during the early racing I believe she will provide the necessary late punch. Airegla has plenty of speed but may be run off her feet. Evening Shadow is fit again and dangerous. Pretty Pet has an outside chance.

Fifth race—I'm going to gamble on Burning Star getting a good start for a change. This is the right route and the Shandon Farm gal needs only to show a little early foot. Heelfly is as good as that dead heat last week-end and obviously is the one to beat. Eagle Pass will be a keen stretch factor.

Sixth race—Dead Calm was well meant last out and was in trouble. With clear sailing I expect this one to score. Joan Asbestos and Care For to battle it out for the place award.

Best bet—Compton entry.

Army Horses Sweep Events In Show Here

not as keen as one might expect in a show of this size.

After the military class the audience was treated to a sight unusual in a show ring. The Huntsmen of the Middleburg Hunt gave an exhibition of "roading hounds." This pack of American hounds is one of the best and showed perfect discipline and obedience to command, presenting a magnificent sight as they trotted around the ring at the heels of the liveried huntsmen's fine looking mounts.

The ladies' hunter class, an event scheduled for yesterday, was held over until tomorrow when officials found themselves in a quandary over the overcrowding of the program. Events left over from the day before jammed yesterday's sessions and caused a sudden shakeup in the day's activities.

The second day, like the first, saw more than 2,500 of Washington's leaders of social, diplomatic, naval and military, and governmental circles, in full charge of the affair. Gentlemen in rough autumn tweeds, suede shoes and pheasant-feathered hats, ladies in riding togs and brilliant-hued sports wear made the scene a replica of horsey England at its best.

Today's program, highlighted by Maryland Day ceremonies, will feature the Machine Gun Troop, Tenth Cavalry, and the Third Cavalry Mounted Band in the opening ceremonies at 1:45 o'clock.

The first event of the afternoon will be the hunter class competition, open to hunters owned within 40 road miles of Washington. In this competition will be such well-known mounts as Count J. Potocki's Prosperity and Munroe, Col. Johnson's Molly Grubble, Castellon, of the Fort Myer Horse Show Team, and the U. S. Army's Tandem.

Competition for the Governors' Cup for interstate civilian teams is the second feature of the afternoon, open to one or two pairs of jumpers from each State. District of Columbia, Virginia and Maryland horses will compete.

The handy jumper class, the third event of the day, features Musahiki, Whiskey, Trouvaille, Ibrahim, Acrobate, Soir de Paques, Ramona and Ali Baba, of the Belgian Army invaders. Veteran United States Army campaigners, Ugly, King-Hi, Flitter, Soother, Podhorski, Fitzota and Masquerader, will offer some stiff competition to the Belgians.

In this class also will be Mrs. Eleanor Patterson's Cypress de Beau, Fenton Fadeley's Apple Jack, Betty Couzens' Bonny, Capt. Luebbermann's Billy and a long list from the Fort Myer Horse Show Team, including Red Cloud, Clipped Wings, Sandy, Rusty and Eyes Delight, the horses that acquitted themselves so nobly yesterday.

One of the most beautiful pieces of horsemanship in the whole repertoire of horse shows will take place at 3:40, when Capt. Isaac L. Kitts, a member of the United States Equestrian teams in the 1932 and 1936 Olympics, will give an Olympic dressage exhibition with American Lady, his mount. In dressage, the horse is controlled entirely by the invisible use of the hands, weight and legs. Dressage riding is accepted as the most advanced form of the equestrian art.

Tech Swamps Wilson, 30 to 0; Western Wins From St. John's, 7 to 6

Tech Eleven 30-0 Victor Over Wilson

Ties Eastern for Interhigh Series Lead by Easy Triumph.

By Bob Garrison.

Tech High's powerful football team captured its objective—first place in the interhigh school standings—advancing behind a salvo of five touchdowns fired through the Wilson High School eleven's line yesterday in Tech Stadium, to record a decisive 30-0 victory before 1,000 school students.

Battering the Wilson forward wall to shreds and stopping every thrust at its own line of defense, Tech reclaimed lost ground and prestige through an impressive display of power that not only drew the Manuel Trainers into a first-place tie with Eastern, but established them as the probable winner of the schoolboy series.

Wilson Passes Fail.

Wilson, its aerial attack grounded as a result of the heavy going, never was in the ball game, being unable to advance past the Tech 45-yard line until the last minute of play when one of a barrage of forward passes that filled the air was completed on the Tech 33-yard stripe.

McKinley lost little time in scoring its first goal when in the first period, after an exchange of punts, Jack Belote, Tech ace, smashed his way from the 40-yard stripe to the 26-yard line then flipped a pass to Wally Conolly for the touchdown.

Satisfied with the result of one pass, the Trainers never again resorted to the air in an effort to score. In fact, to score the next touchdown it wasn't at all necessary, for Belote drove through the entire Wilson line late in the same period from the 34-yard line and reached the Cat 4 before he was knocked out of bounds, giving them position for the second goal, which came as the first play of the second period with Rassier doing the honors from the 1-yard stripe.

Play see-sawed from between the 40-yard lines for five minutes before an exchange of punts produced a freak situation which led to the next Tech touchdown.

Forced deep into its own territory, Wilson called for a punt on third down with the ball on the 4-yard line. Bond stood in the end zone and booted against the wind, and when his poor kick was blown back it halted on the Wilson 3-yard stripe for a gain of 1 yard. Luckily, it stopped where it did and was recovered by Wilson, allowing Bond another chance to punt out of danger.

Rassier Scores.

He did, but Rassier, safety man, took the ball on his 30 and reeled off 26 yards to reach the 4-yard line and then sneaked through the middle on the next play for the third goal.

A sustained drive from the Wilson 45, with Dean, Bach and Zuras carrying the ball, gave the Eckington club another touchdown early in the fourth period when Dean crossed the double line on a center buck for the twenty-fourth point.

Jumbo Sullivan, half-ton center, who opened holes half a mile wide when he was inserted in the last quarter, put the Techites in scoring position for the final goal. Intercepting a pass on the 35, he lugged it 10 yards, from where a short pass from Dean to Zuras moved them to the 7. Bach scored the fifth goal through tackle.

Chief Lone West Puts Indian Sign on Alabama for Game

Former California Grid Ace Joins Forces With G. W. Today.

By Bob Garrison.

An Indian sign—the real McCoy—will hang over Alabama's football team this afternoon for it has been placed there by a Cherokee, a native of that Southern State.

Chief Lone West, health spreader, movie actor, football and Olympic athlete, and perigrinator of the United States, joined forces with George Washington University's football team last night shortly after his arrival in town and promptly aimed the ancient jinx at Coach Frank Thomas and his Crimson Tide in the hope that the local club would spring an upset.

Not too optimistic, though, the Redman, a transplanted native of Alabama, who followed the Crimson Tide here from Chattanooga, Tenn., expressed the opinion that he would probably have to decorate "those Southern boys with two or three Indian signs if George Washington is to win."

Lone West who breezed into town yesterday afternoon, first paid a visit to his old friend Arch McDonald and immediately asked to be shown the trail to G. W. so that he could ally with the local team in the hope of bringing victory to the Colonials this afternoon at Griffith Stadium. When he attended a student rally last night on the school campus he let a charm dance about a huge bonfire, then went into his "Big Apple" dance which ended when he crossed his arms overhead and announced that the sign was applied and all his powers as medicine man were cast upon the Bamans.

Played Football After 20 Years.

Attached to his list of achievements is one of the most remarkable football stories on record.

In 1917 there was at the fullback position of the Golden Bears of the University of California a youngster whom made merry by slipping through gaping holes in opposition lines. His name was Chief Lone West.

And in 1936, just 20 years later, for the second time in its history, the college had in its football lineup a Chief Lone West and it was the same one. He had returned to school, enrolled in classes to finish a course he had failed to complete before the war and once more earned a starting position on the Bear team, although he was old enough to be father to his teammates.

That is the kind of man who will appear at Griffith Stadium today in person—a real Cherokee chief, feathers, beads and all the other articles that go to make the well-dressed Indian. Chief West intends to go into his dance before the game, when he will maneuver in front of the Alabama squad and apply the hoodoo sign, and between the halves.

It's a cinch, says Chief West, who really is a chief and really is healthy. In fact, he's tremendous in size and his prodigiously healthy physique belies his age, which is approaching the half-century mark.

Chief Lone West.

Keenly interested in the promotion of athletics and physical culture for the development of health and happiness, Chief West, who now makes a living selling the "West Wonder Exerciser," expressed a desire to shift his headquarters from the South to Washington, and hopes to get off to a good start this afternoon by bringing the Colonials a surprise victory.

Modest, simple of manner, and unassuming, the chief told of some of his triumphs in the movies, reminding of his parts in "Dangerous Love," "The Lure of Egypt," "Dare Devil Jack," "Just a Wife," "Cleopatra" and "The Crusaders." He was busy for years in the movies following his first career as a football player at California and is credited with the discovery of such stars as Mary Brian, Buddy Rogers, Dorothy Revier, Lona Andre, Shella Manners and others.

Being a man of independent wealth, he has devoted much time and money to discovering talent for the stage and screen, and those whom he has sponsored have become celebrities.

"But," he says, "I like this work better than pictures. I can travel; I can teach people to care for their bodies and minds. And, as for money," the chief laughed, "well, I make more than I can spend."

West looks forward to another meeting with Chief Charlie Guyon, Eastern High School coach, whom he remembers having last seen 27 years ago when Guyon was selling athletic goods and was anwering to the name of "Wahoo Charlie." It was Guyon who started him on his athletic career, he recalled, when he gave him his first bit of football training.

Terps Battle Orange Today In Baltimore

Marylanders Face Unbeaten Syracuse Team on Slow Field.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Baltimore, Md., Oct. 22.—Syracuse University will stake its unblemished football record against a potent Maryland eleven here tomorrow in one of the East's outstanding weekend attractions. The game is expected to draw approximately 20,000 fans.

A slow field, rendered heavy and uncertain by a downpour of rain late today, and overcast skies are in prospect for the game, but this will be to Maryland's advantage. The Terrapins must stop Syracuse's famed Marty Glickman to win, and a damp field will do the Olympic sprint star no good.

Fresh from its surprising upset victory over Cornell last week, the Big Orange envisions one of its best seasons in recent years, and with this in view will shoot the works tomorrow. Maryland defeated the New York aggregation last year, 20-0, and battled it to a scoreless tie in the mud the year before. Hence Syracuse has a couple of scores to settle.

The Terps have been weakened by the loss of Francis Beamer, reserve end, and Blair Smith, regular wingman, who are nursing injuries. Smith will be in uniform, but probably will not play. The backfield has been bolstered by the return of Frank DeArmey, blocking back, who will start at fullback. Bryant and McCarthy will start at end, but the line otherwise will be the same that started against Virginia last week.

Eagles Battle Indians Today

Facing the toughest game on the schedule thus far, Coach Gus Welch leads a crippled American University eleven into Williamsburg today to oppose the strong William and Mary team.

The loss of their two stalwart guards, Bob Hall and Bus Hanawalt, and their leading ground gainer, Emerson Bartlett, for the remainder of the season, has forced the Eagles to enter the game with a makeshift line-up that will find men playing out of position in an effort to present the most formidable team possible under the circumstances.

Freshmen are ruled out of today's game as William and Mary and its opponents must subscribe to the Southern Conference rule, which forbids the use of freshmen in varsity games. This threatens to prove a strength sapper to the Eagles, who have several capable reserves in the freshman ranks, but will be forced to begin play today with but six eligible substitutes.

Cadets Lose Hard Battle To Western

Thrilling Last-Minute Attack Sees Raiders Win by 7 to 6.

By Jack Munhall.

Western and St. John's played 38 minutes of hard-fought but dull football yesterday at Western stadium, but in the final two minutes combined to produce sufficient thrills, drama and suspense to leave 2,000 spectators gasping at one of the most sensational finishes seen this season, as the Cadets were nipped, 7 to 6.

For in those last 120 seconds two desperate passes accounted for a pair of touchdowns, the first covering 35 yards, the second 65, a point after goal and a heart-breaking incompleted pass which deprived St. John's of its third consecutive tie.

Western struck first with fierce suddenness. The ball was on the St. John's 30-yard line, where the Georgetowners had moved from midfield on brilliant runs by Morris Snead, its all-high quarterback, but where the Cadets had stopped a pair of line smashes for no gain. On the third play, Snead faded back to his own 35, dodged first one and then another on-rushing lineman and shot a bullet pass to Len Stanton, 6-foot-2-inch end, who caught the oval on the 15 and threaded past two defenders to the score.

Lynham Adds Point.

Dickie Lynham smashed over right tackle to the extra point, which proved not at all extra, for, within the next 50 seconds, St. John's had scored in unbelievable fashion.

Jim Mulvihill, a sub back, took the Western kickoff after touchdown on the Cadets' goal line and advanced to the St. John 36 before being spilled. A long pass Quarterback Joe Gallagher intended for Jim Geibel bounded off the latter's chest at midfield. But on the next play it happened so quickly that the crowd now cramming the sidelines was left speechless.

Frank Cady, Cadet halfback, dropped back to the St. John 30-yard line and whipped a pass to Geibel, who caught the ball in stride at midfield and then, as he was being tackled, lateraled to Gallagher, who had trailed the play all the way. Gallagher completely reversed his field, picked up beautiful interference from Lee Rinaldi, Frank Daily and Neuland and raced 50 yards to the touchdown. With barely one minute remaining, St. John's attempted a forward pass, Gallagher to Cady, in an effort to deadlock the count. But hard-charging Western linesmen rushed Gallagher so rapidly that the ball was discharged hurriedly and fell short, bouncing a few feet in front of Cady, standing in the end zone.

Western's First Win.

Thus it was that the last major unbeaten high school eleven was dropped from the select ranks by a Western team that was winning its first game of the season.

Snead was Western's most consistent gainer, but he was mor completely bottled yesterday by the stanch Cadet forward wall than he has been in any other contest this season.

Western made 6 first downs and St. John's earned 5.

Gallaudet, Wilson Teams Will Clash At Kendall Green

Gallaudet University and Wilson Teachers, football teams that usually settle for a score, will clash this afternoon on the Kendall Green Field at 2:30 and will be asking nothing less than a victory to settle their annual rivalry.

Wilson, which has not won a football game since 1935 and has not scored a point this year, enters the game with brighter prospects for victory than in any preivous game this year, as Gallaudet is heavily beset by injuries, sustained in last week's William and Mary clash at Norfolk, which they dropped, 55-6.

The Blues are handicapped greatly by the loss of Will Rogers, fullback, for the rest of the season, and have drilled assiduously throughout the week with stiff practice periods in hope of duplicating last year's win over the Harvard street team. Wilson will start without the services of Quarterback Bobby Hart and Halfback Phil Winter, who are injured.

Unbeaten Navy Favorite Over Irish Eleven

By the Associated Press.

South Bend, Ind., Oct. 22.—Notre Dame's Irish, in the novel position of being the underdog, and undefeated Navy will battle tomorrow in the eleventh game of their series, before approximately 45,000 spectators.

The Midshipmen, winner of last year's game, 3 to 0, and victorious over William and Mary, Virginia and the Citadel by big scores, but tied by Harvard this season, were favored partly because of the Irish's inability to turn ground-gaining power into touchdowns in major games. After trouncing Drake, the Irish were held to a scoreless tie by Illinois and bowed to Carnegie Tech, 9 to 7.

Day Beats Venturi.

New York, Oct. 22 (AP).—Davey Day, tall, slim Chicago lightweight, moved up into the anteroom to the 135-pound title tonight by shading Enrico Venturi, flashy Italian campaigner, in a fast and spirited 10-round bout in the New York Hippodrome. Day scaled 136 and Venturi 139.

Anacostia's Indians Win Grid Opener

Coach Lund Presents a Smooth Outfit to Beat Woodward.

By Perry Wilkinson.

Playing the first game in the history of the school, Anacostia High gridders, dressed in brand-new uniforms and serving notice that they will be ready to enter interhigh competition next fall, ran roughshod over Woodward Prep, 51-0, yesterday before a yelling crowd of 1,000 in Eastern High Stadium.

Coach Rolland Lund, making his debut in District coaching circles, had a right to feel proud of his lads as they romped all over the somewhat muddy turf to score in all four periods. Woodward never had a chance against its much heavier and smoothier working foes.

The Indians—that's the new monicker they have tagged on themselves—had two backs who are on par right now with the best the other schools have to offer. They are Thomas Hutchinson and Robert Gordon. These two lads are fast, shifty, heady, and do everything that is expected of them on the football field.

Now, do not think for a minute that these boys were the whole show. There was one Floyd Briensfield and one Jesse Pavis, who had their day. Briensfield was calling plays, running for touchdowns and throwing passes, while Pavis, who digs graves by night, was digging graves for the opponents by tearing huge holes in the line, tackling with the vigor of a veteran, and running interference for pass receivers.

Western Back Gains 5 Yards Against St. John's

Breezy Comedy Tickles Crowd At RKO-Keith's

'Fight for Your Lady' Is Further Enhanced by Boles' Singing.

"FIGHT FOR YOUR LADY." RKO-Radio picturization of a story by Jean Negulesco and Isabel Leighton, adapted to the screen by Ernest Pagano, Harry Segall and Harold Buchman, featuring John Boles, Ida Lupino and Jack Oakie, with Margot Grahame, Gordon Jones, Erik Rhodes, Billy Gilbert, Paul Guilfoyle, Georges Renavent, Charles Judels, Maude Eburne and Charles Coleman. Directed by Ben Stoloff. Reviewed Friday afternoon by Mary Harris. At RKO-Keith's Theater.

Lowbrow wrestling and the fine art of swordplay both figure as mediums in which to "Fight For Your Lady."

But the winning or losing of a battle doesn't seem to indicate the winning or losing of the lady. John Boles loses his duel with rapiers and falls off a cliff in the bargain—but he wins Marietta (Ida Lupino), toast of Budapest music halls. Billy Gilbert wins his wrestling match, to the distress of his manager, who has bet against him, but he wins a beautiful blonde (Margot Grahame) at the ringside.

A frolicsome bit of celluloid, this picture. Its action is that of a merry-go-round, with the principals hopping or falling off every other minute, but one and all catching a brass ring before the fun is over.

Apart from its romping comedy, the production brings a too-long deferred treat—John Boles' voice. True, he only sings two numbers, when the audience would have enjoyed a dozen from him, but the fact that he sings at all indicates that the movie powers have awakened to their misdemeanor in keeping the magnificent Boles voice under cover.

Ida Also Sings.

Delightful, too, is the one song of Ida Lupino, which features a feminine version of Charlie MacCarthy. The Boles numbers include "Blame the Danube," sung while he waltzes with Ida Lupino, and an operatic bit.

Jack Oakie proves both fatter and funnier than he has been in recent months.

The fact that he has fatter and funnier lines may have something to do with it. The brash gusto of the best Oakie performances steams up swiftly in Jack's role of wrestling manager turned physical trainer for purely financial reasons. Jack is called the "pest of Budapesth" and lives up to it by annoying the native Budapesthians within an inch of their lives.

Quite as comical, if not more so, than Mr. Oakie is Eric Rhodes, as the fighting cock and prize duellist of Budapesth. This sort of monkey business is just the Rhodes dish.

Hit for Laugh-Lovers.

Ida Lupino and Margot Grahame play the double love interests with considerable cuteness, Miss Lupino being the good little girl for whom 45 would-be lovers have duelled and bit the dust, while Miss Grahame is the naughty-naughty whose affection is based strictly on Dun & Bradstreet ratings.

As entertainment for laughter-lovers, "Fight for Your Lady" rates right up there with the better ones. As a promise that John Boles is again going musical, it's a promise that the movie moguls should keep.

A color cartoon, "Air Hostess," is rather a nifty, while a Gene Austin musical short, with Candy and Coco, also features a fine boy soprano. A neatly diversified newsreel winds up a thoroughly pleasant program.

Columbia

Did you ever stop to think that they all come in threes? We mean the Ritz Brothers, the Marx Brothers (in recent years), the Stooges and accidents.

If you like the Ritz Brothers and we understand some people do, you'll love this picture, for at least 50 per cent of it is made up completely of the Ritz Brothers in their usual Ritzy routines. If you don't like the Ritz Brothers and we know some people don't, well you get the idea.

Lombardy College is the seat of higher learning in this piece about the Ritzes, an Indian named George Black and football. The college was founded back in its liberal and educational days as a school where Indians would be welcome, but by 1937, its student body consists of a bunch of paleface snobs who had never seen an Indian, Little Black Cloud arrives and is given the works. Then he becomes George Black, scores six or seven touchdowns for dear old Alma Mater and the school hails him as a hero.

The Ritz Brothers? Where do they come in? Oh pratically every place and any place. They start out as tailors, and run the gamut of Indian songs, the Big Apple, football, fur coats, the spirit of '76 and throw in a couple of imitations. There is also a love affair that goes on the rocks regularly, and the old coach who wants to beat Midwestern. The climax is—you've guessed it—a football game but novel, at any rate, in having Ed Thorgersen as Ed Thorgersen, the announcer, and the Ritz boys as scorers of the winning touchdown. What a play that is! Mr. Thorgersen will tell his grandchildren about this one.

Nat Pendleton, the dependable, is amusing and really almost pathetic as Little Black Cloud and Joan Davis is funny as his would-be girl friend. Gloria Stuart is pretty, Dick Baldwin is a nice-looking footballer, Joan Marsh is a nasty little trick and good old Fred Stone is the coach.

Subsidiaries include intriguing shots of dude ranching in the west, a newsreel replete with more football and a silly cartoon entitled "Farmer Al Falfa."

Donor Signature On Cigarette Case

Phyllis Brooks takes occasion to powder her pretty nose as often as possible these days, the reason being that it gives the Twentieth Century-Fox actress a chance to display the stunning vanity case recently presented her by Cary Grant. The case is of striped gold with a catch set in rubies, and there is a cigarette case to match. Inside the top lids of both cases is the inscription: "To Phyllis from Cary," in a copy of the actor's own handwriting.

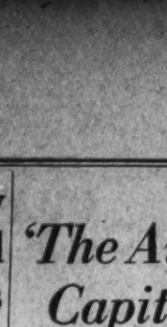
'The Awful Truth' Rocks Capacity Crowds at Earle; Capitol Exposes Espionage Methods in 'Lancer Spy'

Irene Dunne, Cary Grant, on Screen; Star Acts on the Stage.

"THE AWFUL TRUTH." Columbia Pictures filmization of a story by Arthur Richmond, adapted to the screen by Vina Delmar, costarring Irene Dunne and Cary Grant, with Ralph Bellamy, Alexander D'Arcy, Cecil Cunningham, Marguerite Churchill, Esther Dale, Joyce Compton, Robert Allen, Robert Warwick, Mary Forbes, Claude Allister and Zita Fabian. Music by Ben Oakland and Milton Drake. Directed by Leo McCarey. Previewed Tuesday night, October 19. At the Earle Theater.

Leaping into the lists again, in a season when comedy and music are in high favor, with the screen-gazers, Columbia Pictures once more takes the lead with "The Awful Truth," disclosed for the first time on a local screen at the Earle Theater yesterday before audiences that overtaxed the capacity of the house.



BELL.

This is getting to be a fixed habit with Columbia. They did the same thing with "It Happened One Night" and then, a little later, came along with "Mr. Deed Goes to Town." "The Awful Truth" is not in the least like either of these, beyond the fact that it is superlative in the co-ordination of all of the elements that go to make up hilarious and irresistible entertainment for all classes and all ages. It adheres to no previous pattern, but steps out boldly into new avenues of amusement and new paths to supremely comic effect.

In synopsis this airy and cyclonic domestic farce would sound like any number of pictures that have dealt with the same theme—the experiences that overtake a wealthy young married couple who pounce upon the flimsiest of excuses to secure a 90-day interlocutory decree of divorce—but, in the viewing, "The Awful Truth" gradually reveals a deftly contrived system of infallible motivation, a resourcefulness in generating a tremendous volume of wholesome fun and a believable sequence of high voltage scenes that no other similar work ever has approximated.

Is Handsomely Mounted.

The picture is mounted with as much discretion as it has been written, produced, acted and directed. There is not a jarring note in the whole span of its too-short footage. The only difficulty encountered by this commentator, when he previewed it "cold" in a private projection room, was in keeping up with the laughs.

Not the least of this subject's sprightly assets is its sane utilization of music, not so much for its own sake as to point character and augment a smooth-flowing and continuous deluge of great good nature. The war between former husband and former wife is a genially friendly conflict—since neither ever ceased to love the other better than any possible substitute—and inspires a vast friendliness and admiration instead of the usual consciousness of caustic bitterness and resentful animosity. Lucy and Jerry Warriner are swell folks and make one wish for similar urbane humor under like circumstances—if any. It is an all-time model for what gay, spirited and scintillating marital adventures in celluloid should be.

Irene Dunne began her screen career as an actress of heavily emotional roles, branched out then into song and now takes her place among the foremost of the theater's contemporary comediennes. Her preeminence in this field was presaged by her sparkling performance in "Theodora Goes Wild" and now is made completely sure. Opposite her, in the costellar role of Jerry, is Cary Grant, who, likewise, soars miles above the humorous contribution he made to "Topper." Their badinage is exchanged with a competence that stamps them as "naturals" for their roles. The third member of the Warriner family, believe it or not, is "Mr. Smith," the frisky terrier which creates a "custody" problem in the divorce proceedings. This, of course, is Asta, costar with William Powell and Myrna Loy in "The Thin Man" and one of the most proficient canine farceurs in history.

Supporting roles are played with no less skill than the leads. Ralph Bellamy as the drawling Oklahoman whom Mrs. Warriner thinks she loves—up to a certain point—and Joyce Compton, as the night club gal from the Deep South, who engages Jerry's attention for a split second, are foremost among the secondary funmakers, with Alexander d'Arcy, Cecil Cunningham and Ester Dale running neck and neck in a blanket finish.

Stage Bill Is All-Star.

There are so many high points of crackling comedy in "The Awful Truth" that one could no more catalogue them all than he could sit down and copy the city directory. Leo McCarey's direction keeps the whole thing running at high speed and the photography never lags behind the advanced artistry of the rest of the production. It is something to see, this one—or am I crazy?

Either by happy chance or a magnificent burst of inspiration on the part of the management, the stage bill at the Earle this week keeps pace with the picture. Not an act of the four yesterday afternoon but "stopped the show," at one time or another. Any "headliner" on this bill is so only nominally.

The vaudeville program, in the order in which the trig Miss Aubrey Sieber announced it, presented Fred Sylvester & Co., in "Neatest of the Neat," a composite of acrobatics, music and comedy that surpasses anything of the kind Washington has seen—Mr. Sylvester's "comedy" is comprised of three Lilliputians the likes of whom the famed Mr. Singer never dreamed—that eminent harmonica virtuoso and comedian, Britt Wood; Neila Goodelle, "tops" among the songstresses, and the Helene Denizon, ballerina de luxe, and the 12 American Rockets, dancers of the first rank.

The Paramount News and Freddie Clark's Orchestra further augment that rarest of all theatrical commodities, a perfect bill—for those who don't object to laughing, that is.

His Stature as Comedian Grows

Expanding the effectiveness of even such fine work as he did in "Topper," Cary Grant, looking at you from the portrait study reproduced above, takes on new importance as a screen funmaker in "The Awful Truth," currently on the screen at the Warner Brothers' Earle Theater. He is costarred in this Columbia hit with Irene Dunne, who also is at her best in this extravagantly amusing charade.

George Sanders Acts Dual Role in War Melodrama; Stage Stars Band.

"LANCER SPY." Twentieth Century-Fox picturization of a story by Martha McKenna, adapted to the screen by Philip Dunne, featuring George Sanders and Dolores Del Rio, with Peter Lorre, Virginia Field, Sigfrid Rumann, Joseph Schildkraut, Esther Adler, Lionel Atwill, Maurice Moscovitch, Holmes Herbert, Lester Matthews and Yvonne Severn. Directed by Gregory Ratoff. Previewed Tuesday afternoon, October 19. At Loew's Capitol Theater.

The shrewd activities of the intelligence service in times of armed struggle and the hazardous extremes to which nations will go to learn the secrets of their enemies, are made the basis of this latest reversion to the Great War as a source of gripping and suspenseful screen drama.

"Lancer Spy" is perhaps more the story of a single man's thrilling adventure than it is a comprehensive survey of espionage at work, but it is not seriously restricted in appeal on that account, because the man in this instance is George Sanders. Mr. Sanders has been seen numerous times before on the American screen, but always in parts of comparatively minor importance. In this exhibit he steps up into the ranks of the more able of the character actors by assuming a dual role—that of Lieut. Michael Bruce, in the British navy, and a German officer ostensibly escaped from an English prison fortress.

In fashioning this masquerade, the high command of the English War Office is actuated by the amazing resemblance borne by Lieut. Bruce to a prisoner that has been captured—an officer of high rank in his own army. Plans are under way for the German's big push against the Western Front. Lieut. Bruce's job is to penetrate the enemy lines, go straight to Berlin, gain the confidence of the staff and transmit the secret to his own superiors in time to circumvent the attack. A perfect duplicate of the man he is impersonating, Bruce fools even that officer's orderly, whom he impresses into his own service. It is after they get to Berlin that the real drama gets under way.

Clarity Is Obscured.

This major movement of the plot involves all of the usual elements—beautiful temptress, in the secret service of the enemy; ranking German officers and all the rest of the familiar abracadabra of this sort of thing. Here, too, the plot loses something of its clarity as a result of too drastic cutting of the film. The purpose of some of the apparently pivotal characters is seriously obscured. Take the case of Peter Lorre, for example. Unless one watches developments with an eagle eye, Lorre's actual function in the story will be lost.

As a matter of plain truth, credulity is strained almost to the breaking point at more than one juncture in the unfolding of as daring a yarn in its treatment of the seemingly impossible as ever has reached the cameras. The balance, however, is substantially on the side of the picture's power to thrill, engender suspense and a hope for more realistic romance than it ever provides.

Twentieth Century-Fox has spared nothing in the matter of personnel or trappings to make "Lancer Spy" an item of importance. As already intimated, George Sanders does a surprisingly able bit of dual impersonation in the central role. Dolores Del Rio falls a little short of the ideal as the Spanish dancer, serving as a secret operative for the Germans, but will do as a sirenic symbol of seductive beauty. Many of the others in the cast are able and distinguished. Especially is this true of Joseph Schildkraut and Peter Lorre. While Mr. Lorre seems to be largely wasted, Joseph Schildkraut does as effective a bit of characterization in this subject as he did as Dreyfus, with Paul Muni in "Zola," although the two roles are no more alike than black and white.

Lionel Atwill, doing another of his terse commanding officers; Maurice Moscovitch, who looks enough like George Fawcett to be his twin; Sigfried Rumann, that eminent actor now devoting all of his time to the cinema; Virginia Field, Holmes Herbert and Fritz Feld are members of the support who do most for the story's questionable integrity. Without the bulwark of their experience and expertness as actors, it would crumble into a very weak fable indeed.

New Band Scores.

One of the most competent and least spectacular of the currently popular "swing bands" headlines the stage bill at Loew's Capitol this week. It is the Hudson-DeLange organization, making its first stage appearance in the Capital. Under the batonless conductorship of Ed DeLange, this rhythmic group puts on a "jam session" that carries a decided punch for the younger musical minds. It relies as much upon the tuneful beauty of old favorite song hits as upon the novelty of the new and, aside from too much brass, does splendidly by them all. The vocal soloist with the orchestra is Betty Allen, a singer with a way about her and a softly modulated voice that is extremely pleasant to hear. She participates in what is perhaps the "hit of the show," as the boys put it on, by singing "The Popcorn Man," the Hudson-DeLange sequel to "Organ Grinder Swing."

Other turns on the vaudeville bill are provided by Gautier's Steeplechase, a pony, dog and monkey act of the better sort; "Senator" Murphy, in a stentorian political monologue that seemed to catch the fancy of the audience, and the Keller Sisters, two lusty vocalistes from the air lanes, who also "caught on" yesterday afternoon.

The Fox Movietone News is the additional supplementary of a feature that harks back a few years for its form and substance.

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDLER

Hollywood, Oct. 22.—Idol Chatter: Ask any 20 men to name the actress with the most sex-appeal and, two to one, the majority will name Janet Gaynor.

Cited for the Croix de Merite: Basil Rathbone—building a new house, had his servants okay plans for their quarters "because theyre the ones who have to live there." Helen Vinson not only designs most of her clothes but copyrights the designs. Hollywood's "hottest" prospect: The professional fire-eate, who is playing a bit in a current Fox opus. Those ancient slacks Bing Crosby golfs in are so baggy at the knees he always looks like he is going to jump.

Olivia de Havilland.

Charles Bickford cheerfully admits the best actor in Hollywood is a guy named Bickford. Million-dollar tip to research chemists: Darryl Zanuck would probably pay that much for a formula to keep Shirley Temple from "growing up." Getting personal, if I were Jack Oakie I would hire a trainer and take calisthenics. Add Hollywood's odd-jobbers: The man at M-G-M whose life work is vulcanizing the rubberized tights worn by chorus cuties. If Arthur Treacher had to sit down all day, he would develop calluses on the back of his neck.

AMONG THE TRIALS of stardom: Public liability insurance costs a movie celeb double premiums because everyone wants to sue him—and juries always stick him. Today's short-short interview—with Olivia de Havilland: "I have yet to meet the man I could love." Peas from the same pod: Edwina Booth and Binnie Barnes (blondined). Best buy for a book collector is a screen star's library—nine out of every ten volumes are "as good as new."

The other day, at M-G-M, Mickey Rooney roared onto the lot in a many-cylindered new car, equipped, by special Rooney mandate, with the loudest cut-out ever heard in these parts. After proudly driving the snorting monster up and down the studio streets several times, he pulled to the curb in front of the publicity office and there met Spencer Tracy, who had been quietly watching the one-man parade. "Nice car," Spence observed. "Mind if I drive it around the block while you're inside." Mickey beamed with pride. "Sure—go on," he urged, and Spencer took the wheel. Thirty minutes passed before he returned the car to its worried owner. "Mickey," he said, gently, "your new car has had an operation—its cut-out has been amputated. You think it over—and if you decide that you're the kind of a guy who wants to drive people crazy just to make a noise, you have it installed again and I'll pay the bill."

The Rooney car is still minus its cut-out.

This morning's mail brings a query from a movie-struck miss in Kansas who wants to know what Hollywood considers the ideal height for an actress. I suppose Garbo would answer "about 5 feet, 6 inches," and Dixie Dunbar would probably hold out for "approximately 4 feet, 10" — but the producers, being less prejudiced, seem to agree that the girl who is between 5 feet, 2 inches and 5 feet, 4 inches has by far the best chance for stardom. After becoming a star, her height would make little difference, but while she is on the way up the ladder, she gets better breaks if she is neither too tall to play with short leading men nor too short to play opposite the Gary Coopers and Errol Flynns. The long and the short of it is seldom an attractive screen combination.

It is a great mistake to mention flower culture to Lupe Velez just now. Lupita finds the subject distasteful and says things no lady should say. Seems she set out to beautify her garden some time ago and an extra, working in her picture, overheard her rhapsodizing about gladiolas. Promptly introducing himself, he informed her that he had gladiola bulbs for sale and that they were the acme of perfection—super-colossals, to use the Hollywoodese. Lupe bought—at a fabulous price—planted the bulbs with her own fair hands, and waited for Nature to take its course. Nature did—and Lupe is now the proprietor of an onion farm. She hopes to meet the extra again some day.

Metropolitan

Paul Muni's "Zola" is monumental, superb, and should run for weeks. It is pictures like this which make a man feel that life can be a challenging adventure, a persistent quest for truth. While the facilities of modern life preclude anyone's becoming historically the equal of Zola, as pictured, the inculcation of ideas, ideals, and a thought for a design for living are there, graphically.

Starting with Zola, the threadbare young writer, and his likewise artist friend, Cezanne, in a Parisian attic, the story depicts the sure rise to power and potency of Zola through his trenchant pen. Cezanne still wears his rags and clings to his impoverished idealism. When Zola needs a prod to escape from the smug complacence wealth brings him, it is Cezanne who administers it. Thereafter, Zola gets his feet planted firmly on the ladder and climbs to his peak—his "J'accuse" speech.

Tightly written, acted with marvelous comprehension by scores of more than competent actors, the drama growing out of the Dreyfus affair becomes potent drama. Joseph Schildkraut, as Dreyfus, is especially notable, though the entire cast is flawless. Zola's fight for truth vindicated with the liberation of Dreyfus from Devils Island, the old man still plans for new methods for bettering the world, chuckling to himself—"and I thought I was finished and ready to rest——"

Zola, "a moment in the conscience of man," delivers a stinging rebuttal of fanatical intolerance. This biography deserves all the adulation and the standing-room-only which the populace can provide.

In the newsreel you may see shots of two crashes, the airplane fatality and the Wall Street affair, in addition to well-booed and well-applauded shots of the former Presidential candidate, Mr. Landon.

The Post's New Yorker

By LEONARD LYONS

New York, Oct. 22.

INTRIGUE: License Commissioner Paul Moss has enjoined the Brothers Minsky—H. Kay and Morton—from using the word "Burlesque" in advertising or exploiting the entertainment at their Oriental Theater. . . . The Minskys, who will present Mrs. Kingfish Levinsky as well as Screeno six mornings a week, have been trying to find a way of getting around this ruling. Yesterday they hit upon a solution and now are negotiating with Producer Arthur Hopkins for the purchase and revival of the ancient stage hit—"Burlesque."

DEATH: Joseph Pergola of Pathe Films was one of the nineteen who were killed when a United Air Line transcontinental plane crashed in the Uinta Mountains. For his wife, Eleanor Pergola, this is a strange aftermath of the stories which emanated from Havana in the revolution which sent Machado from Cuba . . . This is the second time she grieves for her husband. Because the first meager reports from Havana, during the rebellion—inaccurate reports—listed her husband's name among the fatalities of the day.

CHANGE: Peggy Joyce last night was introduced to a young man who confided that this was an ambition realized. "I first saw you fourteen years ago," he stated, "when I was working my way through college, as a bell-hop at the Blackstone Hotel in Chicago. I carried your bags, and you tipped me $5. You haven't changed a bit since then" . . . "And are you doing well now?" Miss Joyce asked. The young man nodded. "I haven't changed," Peggy agreed, extending her palm. "You owe me $5."

• • • •

PLEA: Jimmy Savo, Jr., 18-year-old son of the pantomimist, finally acceded to his father's pleas and rejected the offer to fly for China against Japan. "But I want you to buy this plane for me," the youngster insisted. "I need 600 more flying hours to get my pilot's license. I can do it with this plane. And it costs only $2,500" . . . "A $2,500 plane?" Savo shrieked. "I won't have you fly in a plane as unsafe as that" . . . "It's safe enough," the lad explained. "You see, dad—that price also includes two parachutes!"

• • • •

COMPLAINT: Walter Koons, music editor of the National Broadcasting System, called N. B. C. from his home Sunday and complained that a piano he was hearing at the moment was out of tune. "What studio is it in?" Koons asked . . . "That's Chopin's original piano," he was told. "It's being played at a place some 40 miles outside of Warsaw."

• • • •

HOPE: The Scripps-Howard reporters interviewed Hendrick Willem Van Loon with regard to his new book, "The Arts." . . . "Tell us," he was asked, "what is the main purpose of your book." . . . "The main purpose," Van Loon whispered, "is to improve Roy Howard's taste in neckties."

• • • •

BEAUTY: George Balanchine, the choreographer, did the ballet routines for the forthcoming "Goldwyn Follies." Balanchine selected the dancers, who didn't conform to Goldwyn's standard of beauty—although their dance talents were incomparable . . . And so dance they will, when the picture is shown, but for the close-up shots of the ballet dancers . . . the close-up shots in which only the upper portions of their figures are exhibited . . . the Goldwyn show girls, simulating a ballet movement, have been substituted.

• • • •

PLIGHT: Simon & Schuster, who published Jerome Weidman's "I Can Get It for You Wholesale," were served in a plagiarism suit. The process server then asked where he could reach Weidman, who also was to be served. They gave him directions, but the process server got lost in The Bronx. He phoned Weidman's home, stated his purpose—and the novelist steered him right.

• • • •

COMMAND: Jack Benny, now in Hollywood, phoned George Burns, who, with Gracie Allen, is vacationing here. Burns picked up the phone and heard the operator report that this was long distance calling . . . He then recognized Benny's voice, saying, "Hello" . . . "Hello," Burns replied. "Yes, send up two eggs, toast, coffee"—and hung up.

• • • •

RESOLVE: Leo McCarey, the film producer, arrived in New York yesterday, en route to Europe. He and Mrs. McCarey never have been to Europe before, and arranged to sail today on the Queen Mary . . . This is the first visit to New York in four years, and so they decided that Manhattan would not capture them, that they'd retire early and sail in the morning . . . The McCareys visited two night clubs last night saw one play—and immediately canceled their boat reservations.

• • • •

EASE: Margaret Mitchell, author of "Gone With the Wind," was at a dinner party at which a critic discussed her writing talents. "There's really nothing to it," the critic declared. "Writing is probably the easiest thing in the world for you to do" . . . "Yes," Miss Mitchell snapped. "Just like tennis is to Tilden."

Beery Reunion.

Two generations of Beerys held a brief reunion on the 'Bad Man of Burnstone" set at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. The group included Wallace and Noah Beery, Carol Ann, Wally's 6-year-old adopted daughter, and Noah, jr.

Bankers Hear Plan to Rival Baby Bonds

Savings Bank Executive Suggests New Type of Account.

By the Associated Press.

White Sulphur Springs, Oct. 22.—Bankers heard a new idea today for competing with U. S. Government "baby" savings bonds.

The "baby" bonds, issued in amounts of from $25 to $1,000, have been going into the hands of savers at the rate of about $1,000,000 a day, Earl B. Schwulst, first vice president of the Bowery Savings Bank, New York City, said. He was addressing the annual convention of the Savings Banks Association of the State of New York.

He suggested creation of a special type of savings account for the saver who is attracted by the Government bonds. These accounts would involve a contract with the depositor not to withdraw his money without a prior written notice. In return, the savings banks would pay a somewhat higher rate of return.

Such accounts would be on a five or ten-year term, comparable to savings bonds. "Since the special deposits would have no definite maturity," Schwulst said, "the banks would not have to build up a fund to meet special maturing obligations as they would have to do if they issued certificates or bonds with a definite maturity."

Wheat Drops With Fading Export Sales

Favorable Foreign Crop Reports Add to Decline.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Oct. 22.—Losses that reached 1¾ cents a bushel at the extreme in the Chicago wheat market today resulted largely from vanishing of North American export demand.

Favorable crop reports from Argentina and Australia added downward momentum to wheat prices which at the last were but little above the day's bottom level. Late dispatches said light beneficial rains were falling in Santa Fe, Entre Rios and Cordoba provinces of Argentina, and that harvesting of wheat has begun in the very early districts of the North.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively
A Special Correspondent.

Stocks Settle Toward Normalcy in Lighter Trading; U. S. Bonds Weaken.

New York, Oct. 22.—Securities markets fell back a little. On a turnover of around 2,100,000 shares (compared with 3,600,000 the day befare) stocks fired a volley in the morning and then slowly retreated to close with declines of 1 to 3 ooints in the active indstrial issues and with fractional losses general. United States bonds were shaded and commodities continued uncertainly. December wheat closed 1⅛ cents a bushel lower at 97⅞ cents in the Chicago market.

Stocks couldn't perform the promise and the closing rally of yesterday's market fizzed, after an irregularly higher start and after a mid-morning flurry in the railroad stocks had come to a close. Railroad bonds also had their moments of strength on the oft deferred, but never abandoned, hope of permission by the Interstate Commerce Commission to the carriers to increase freight rates. News that increases were granted came after the close of trading with rail shares mostly down by fractions.

Willingness of the speculative section of the trading crowd to take a chance on the railroad shares and the tendency of shorts to cover in that group helped other stocks, but no stampede developed. Early uncertainty gave way to a contraction of sales volume and a release of price tension, with the result that losses of 1 to 3 points were the rule among industrial shares toward the close.

During the best part of the market numerous stocks—many of them preferred issues—were able to advance as much as 2 points. Chile Copper rose 4 points. In the 2 point gains were Car & Foundry, Bristol Myers, Checker Cab, Chesapeake Corporation, Eastman Kodak, Pressed Steel Car and numerous preferreds. It was natural for the rail equipments to follow the rails, but steel stocks lagged. United States Steel moved a point or two lower.

Santa Fe and Southern Pacific led the rails. They had a range of 4 to 5 points, but by the final hour the early gains were sharply reduced or eliminated. Metal stocks dropped 1 to 3 points, about the measure also of the chemical and steel group losses.

Brokers' Loans.

Week-end developments that reflected or forecast changes in the business and market position were of no great consequence. Brokers' loans dropped $39,000,000, the only surprise in the figure being that it wasn't larger, in view of the heavy decline in prices late last week and early this week, the period covered by the report. One explanation is that much of the stock that had to be sold by those who could not or would not put up more cash as margin with their brokers was taken by others who paid for it in full. In so far as cash holdings have replaced margin holdings the strength of the market has increased.

More attention was attracted to the drop, a fairly large one, in commercial loans, than to brokers' loans, for the reason that the rise in business borrowing has had no interruption for the last few months. Along with the downturn in commercial borrowing, currency circulation fell, a seasonal development at this time. It is also usual for commercial borrowing to show some slackening at this time of year, although a year ago nothing of the sort occurred. So far the deflation in credit looks to be a reflection of the fall in markets rather than a forecast of slackening business.

Business indices included a drop in railroad car loadings for last week, compared with the previous week as well as a year ago, which was against the seasonal trend; a report of an unchanged condition in building construction for the early part of the month, and publication of a large number of corporation profits statements, showing substantial gains over the same period of last year, but revealing some diminution in the rate of increase.

Gold Hoarding.

The breadth of the hoarding demand for gold in London, as well as the long duration of the premium, is surprising most observers. Gold went up another penny in London today and, since sterling was little changed, the American equivalent of the London price was $34.83 an ounce, making the price delivered here about $35.06.

Odd Lots.

Odd lot purchases yesterday, as was the case on Wednesday, were more than twice as great as sales. On only one day during the current unsettlement (last Tuesday), have sales by odd lotters exceeded purchases, and that was the day of the heavy margin call. The record seems to indicate that not only has a large part of the odd lot buying been done with heavy margin or with full cash payments, but that the small purchasers have been convinced that the setback in prices offered a rare opportunity for getting stocks on the bottom. That collective judgment of the small trader might carry more weight had it not been for the fact that he bought all through the decline. The margin of odd lot purchases over sales was not so heavy in September, for example, as it was yesterday and the day before, but it nevertheless was substantial, and it was done at prices a good deal higher than those now prevailing.

Boardroom Sweepings.

It looks to be all good fun to one commentator who described as an "amusing incident" the placing of buying orders at 7 in a stock which was quoted at that price on the ticker, but, because of the ticker lateness, the actual floor price was a point or more higher, and the would-be public buyers couldn't get their stock. That probably was about as amusing to the public involved as was the sale of Nash-Kelvinator at 5 just after and just before sales at 10. . . . The episode of James Roosevelt becoming the second highest executive officer of the Government reminds Wall Streeters of one of its famous men, passed on to his reward npt so long ago. That famed financier used to tell of his own methods for obtaining control of things. "First," he was fond of saying, "I get my foot in. Then I edge my knee in. After that I find it easy to get my ample posterior well inside the door, and after that I'm all inside." . . . Postmaster Farley points to rising postal receipts as confounding the prophets of a business recession. Mr. Farley does not say how much of the increase came from the carriage of brokers' little billets-doux inviting customers to R. S. V. P. and to do it poco pronto.

For Publication.

The Stock Exchange is expected to publish in a day or two figures on the short position for a selected number of stocks, a study begun a short time ago with U. S. Steel common only. It is also learned that the SEC under its new chairman, W. O. Douglas, will publish monthly the summary of restricted accounts.

Johns-Manville Jobs Exceed 1929 Peak

New York, Oct. 22.—Employment in Johns-Manville's 11 factory and mine locations in the United States was reported today by the company to be 33 1-3 per cent greater than during the peak period of 1929. Factory pay rolls are up 376 per cent over the 1933 figure for the same period of the year.

Lewis H. Brown, president of Johns-Manville, in a note to the company stockholders, said that "employe relations is recognized as one of the most important considerations faced by management today."

Southern Rwy. Promotes 3 to High Command

Ernest Eden Norris Succeeds Fairfax Harrison as President.

By the Associated Press.

Three Southern Railway officials won promotion yesterday following Thursday's elevation of Ernest Eden Norris to the presidency of the line, succeeding Fairfax Harrison.

H. A. DeButts, 42, of Charlotte, N. C., was promoted from general manager of eastern lines to vice president in charge of operations, with headquarters in Washington, the new president announced. DeButts has been in the service of the Southern for 21 years.

President Norris named C. W. Adams, 54, who has been superintendent of the St. Louis and Louisville division, to the post DeButts is vacating. Adams will have headquarters at Charlotte.

C. W. Ashby, 40, Greensboro, N. C., trainmaster of the Danville division, was named to succeed Adams, with headquarters at Louisville, Ky.

The election of Mr. Norris, senior vice president, to succeed Fairfax Harrison as president of the Southern Railway was announced in New York Thursday night after a meeting of the road's board of directors.

This was the first change in the presidency of the company in 24 years, and it came as a surprise in railroad circles, since there had been no intimation Mr. Harrison intended to resign. Mr. Harrison, who is 66, will remain as chairman of the finance committee and a director of the railway.

Mr. Norris is the first Southern Railway president to have worked up from the ranks. A native of Illinois, he entered the road's employment as a car service agent here in 1902.

Rough Riders Beaten 58-0, By G.W. High

Alexandria Team Takes Advantage of Breaks to Score 4 Goals.

Alexandria, Va., Oct. 22.—George Washington High School's varsity eleven ran roughshod to its third victory of the campaign here this afternoon, swamping a hapless Roosevelt High School eleven, 58-0, before 1,000 fans at the new George Washington Stadium. Coach Lynn Woodworth, of Roosevelt, declined to use any of his first string players who saw action in yesterday's Interhigh series game with Eastern, and the Rough Riders' second-stringers were no match for the powerful George Washington outfit.

Dick Burrell, fleet G. W. halfback, led the assault on the Riders' goal line, scoring three touchdowns on long runs of 55, 47, and 40 yards. Additional markers were contributed by Eddie Dove, Denver Lacey, Jimmie Taylor, Heflin, Payne, and "Bo" Robinson.

Breaks paved the way for four of the Presidents' markers. Three times they were placed in scoring on intercepted passes, while a fourth tally was scored when a Roosevelt punt was blocked behind the goal line and Harold Payne recovered the ball in the end zone.

St. Alban's Beats G. U. Prep by 6-0

St. Alban's eleven dealt Georgetown Prep its first loss of the season yesterday at Garrett Park by a score of 6 to 0, but in so doing was deprived of the services of its star center, Pete Slingluff, who may have a slight fracture of the hip.

The local team scored early in the third period as the indirect result of a 25-yard forward pass, Bill Adams to Jack Hare, which advanced the ball from midfield to the Prep 25. Bill Alexandria and Adams collaborated on a series of running plays to cover the remaining distance with the latter tallying the touchdown from the 3-yard line.

is of All-America caliber, and he leads the team in scoring at this early date with 26 points.

But what can be said about Holm can be said about almost any back on the roster, excepting the scoring. Thomas doesn't admit his backs are the best he's had, but is willing to concede that they can carry the mail, and scouts who have witnessed the Tide in action heartily concur in the opinion. George Washington will have to keep its eye peeled for at least a half dozen men, including Herschel Moseley, Herman Caldwell, George Zivich, "Pig" Davis, Vic Bradford, Hal Hughes and Henry Cochrane, to stay in the running.

Tide Ends Light.

Alabama's ends, Perron Shoemaker and "Tut" Warren, are extremely light for a big league outfit, weighing only 174 and 179 pounds, respectively, but it adds up to 353 pounds of potential dynamite. There was no apparent weakness against Tennessee last week. Jim Ryba, 197-pounds, is a veteran tackle, but his 215-pound running mate, Walter Merrill, is a sophomore—and a good one.

Capt. Leroy Monsky and Lew Bostick, the guards, are well above the 190-pound figure, and veterans, while center Jack Machtolff is another 190-pounder with a year of experience under his belt. All in all the Tide adds up into a potent ball club.

But George Washington is not going into the game with a defeatist complex—perish the thought! Never before has Coach Jim Pixlee sent forth a better spirited, better groomed team to battle. No tenseness was evident in the George Washington camp yesterday afternoon as it completed preparations for the game with a light workout, but enthusiasm and confidence were at a new peak.

Counts on Two Backs.

Pixlee is banking on his two scat backs, Joey Kaufman and Vic Sampson, and the all-around defensive ability of his squad to upset Alabama. He feels confident that his men will acquit themselves honorably in battle, and that they will pull one of the season's major upsets. To this end he has shuffled the line-up considerably, striving for a faster and more potent combination. The Colonials are undefeated, too, having disposed of Wake Forest and West Virginia Wesleyan, but they displayed the need for work and more co-ordination in those games.

Sampson, regarded as the team's most dangerous scoring threat, will not be in the starting line-up, giving way to Kaufman, but is expected to see much service. Bruce Mahan will call signals, with Bob Nowasky at the other halfback post and Jay Turner at fullback. On paper this combination figures to give any team trouble.

The line will be unchanged with Yurwitz and Berry at ends; Keahey and Rebholz, at tackles; Renzaglia and Weinberg, guards, and Halberg, center.

Softball Loop Opens Tonight In Tech Gym

Six Teams Begin Play in Community Center Indoor Play.

It's football season to most of you, but to members of the Community Center's Indoor Softball League, their friends and fans, it's still baseball time.

Play in the loop's second year is inaugurated tonight at 7:15 o'clock in Tech Gymnasium, where all games will be played Saturday and Tuesday nights, with a double header scheduled for each night through December 18, excepting only Halloween and the night of the Army-Navy game, November 27. Each of the six teams will face the same foes twice.

Second games are due to begin at 8:30 o'clock. Sogimas, last year's winner, and Y. M. C. A. drew byes, seeing action for the first time Tuesday night when they are opponents. The honor of opening play falls to American Legion's Victory Post and Bureau of Standards. The second half of the bill brings Treasury against the Community All Stars.

Community Center Softball League Schedule.

October 23, Victory Post vs. Bureau of Standards; Treasury vs. Community All-Stars; 26, Y. M. C. A. vs. Sogimas, Standards vs. Treasury.

which is one reason why Thomas is still coaching Alabama.

That crack in this column about Coach Frank Murray's refusal to shake hands with Coach Frank Dobson following Virginia's defeat by Maryland last Saturday is still producing repercussions. Yesterday, Mr. Dobson, Maryland coach, addressed this department thusly:

* * * *

"Will you be kind enough to correct the impression conveyed by the article appearing in your column involving Mr. Murry and me by printing these facts: As I was leaving the stadium after the game last week, Mr. Pritchett and Mr. Slaughter approached me with Mr. Murray, and the former introduced Coach Murray to me. At which time, Murray congratulated me on the work of our team. As we parted, he wished me the best of luck for the season.

* * * *

"I feel that what has been said does Mr. Murray and Virginia a great injustice, and hope that these few lines will be given a place in your column."

Cards Face Tough Opponent Today In St. Louis Team

Special Dispatch to The Post.

St. Louis, Oct. 22.—Catholic University's football team arrived here today in time for a workout at Walsh Memorial Stadium in preparation for tomorrow's game with the University of St. Louis. Coach Art Bergman reported several of his men suffering from minor injuries, but said they will be ready for the kick-off tomorrow.

Inaugurating an intersectional rivalry that promises much for both schools, the two have identical records for the season, having won three and lost one. "Ole Miss" inflicted a 21-0 defeat on St. Louis, while Detroit only last week smeared the Washington, D. C., eleven, 30-0.

The Billikens have pointed for their guests, winning over South Dakota by a 9-0 score last week, while playing under wraps. Tomorrow, however, they will shoot the works. Catholic, according to scout reports, has a potent backfield, featuring "Irish" Carroll, speedy halfback and Rocco Pirro, plunging fullback, and the St. Louis club expects a tough battle.

Bob Burns Says—

Sometimes we get discouraged when the day comes to a close and we haven't anything substantial to show for it, but if you'll just be patient you'll find that something you did or thought or saw that day is gonna come in handy later on.

We use'ta think my Cousin Pernell was gonna be a failure in life because he spent so much of his time with his personal appearance, but we never dreamed that his dudish ways was just fittin' him out for his future career. When he became of age, he went up to St. Louis and he went right to the swankiest shoe store in town and asked the sales manager for a job. The sales manager says, "Do you know anything much about shoes?" and my Cousin Pernell says, "Well, I ought to—I been wearin' 'em every Sunday for two years."

Central Mission Marks Its 53d Birthday Today

Banquet Also to Honor John S. Bennett's Memory.

Serving the dual purpose of observing its fifty-third birthday anniversary and honoring the memory of John S. Bennett, its late superintendent, the Central Union Mission will give a banquet at the Hotel Mayflower at 6:30 p. m. today.

The Rev. Raphael Harwood Miller, pastor of National City Christian Church, will be the principal speaker. E. H. DeGroot, jr., president of the mission's board of directors, will preside. Music will be by the C. U. M. Glee Club, with Homer Rodeheaver as song leader.

Several hundred of the Capital's professional, church and civic leaders are expected to attend the banquet. The program will be broadcast from 8 to 9 p. m. by Station WOL.

The anniversary observance will continue tomorrow with a morning service at National Baptist Memorial Church and a 3 p. m. mass meeting at Calvary Baptist Church. The Rev. Gove G. Johnson, pastor, will preside at the morning service, with Mr. Rodeheaver as speaker. The Rev. Oscar F. Blackwelder, pastor of the Church of the Reformation, will address the mass meeting.

Mrs. Ada Jean Bennett, who succeeded her husband as superintendent of the "mission of the churches," yesterday made public an annual report showing that 37,414 free beds were given to men wayfarers and 124,514 free meals served during the fiscal year ended September 30.

U. S. Inquiry Gives Clean Health Bill To Carbon Paper

You typists and stenographers may condemn carbon paper as a hand-soiler, if you like, but don't be too eager to blame it for that eruption on your palms, the Public Health Service reminded yesterday.

The service published an article by Dr. Louis Schwartz, of New York, giving carbon paper a clean bill of health after an intensive investigation in an office where there had been an outbreak of dermatitis.

More than 700 men and women were employed in the New York office and when a boy who distributed carbon copies was found to have a hand eruption, the alarmed employes requested the boss to make the youth stay away until cured. The business manager, worried, asked a Federal investigation.

"Proved cases of occupational dermatitis from carbon paper and carbon copies are exceedingly rare," Dr. Schwartz reported.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Columbia Opera Co. of New York presents Verdi's "La Traviata" in the Rialto Theater Friday night, under the direction of Emerson Buckley. The cast:

Violetta ..... Elda Ercole
Alfredo ..... Mario Palermo
Germont ..... Anthony Meli
Flora ..... Gretchen Haller
Douphol ..... Raoul Carrere

Undeterred by the outset of a heavy rain, a large audience attended the performance of "La Traviata" last evening in the Rialto Theater by the Columbia Opera Company of New York. During its first engagement, which will end on Sunday night, this interesting group of young singers, mostly of American provenance, has established friendly relations with music lovers here through the evident earnestness of all its members. There is in their work a co-operative spirit which shows in the coherence the performances and the zest of the singing.

Elda Ercole was a sympathetic Violetta, endowing the part with a sentimental appeal based on her sincere characterization. In her reading of "Ah, fors'e lui" she disclosed resources of floritura suppleness that had not chance for display in her Santuzza of Monday night. Both dramatic urgency and lyric tenderness lay well in her voice.

Mario Palermo, appearing for the fourth time in five days, was as fresh of voice as though it had not been so heavily taxed. His ardency of tone was clear and resonant, and he put conviction into the role. Anthony Meli, heard once before as Rigoletto, sang the lines of the elder Germont with a moving dignity, and won a long roll of applause with his reading of "Di Provenza il mar."

That "La Traviata" is a musical offshoot of the play, "La Dame aux Camelias," by Alexandre Dumas the younger, is a fact that the libretto blazons for common knowledge. What is not so well known is that the Violetta Valery of Giuseppe Verdi's version, as well as the Camille of the American theater, was an actual person, whose brunette beauty charmed many an aristocrat of the Paris Jockey's Club. Her name was Alphonsine Plessis, which she changed to Marie Duplessis when she left her home in Normandy for the glitter of the French capital. She was only 23 when tuberculosis ended her career as a reigning belle of the demi-monde.

Traffic Peril Started as Joke, Brown Recalls on Anniversary

MAJ. ERNEST W. BROWN.

Marks Fifth Anniversary as Police Superintendent, 41 Years on Force; He's Proud Boys No Longer Yell, 'Cheese It, the Cops.'

Back in 1896 a young rookie policeman, swinging his club and adjusting his blue service derby, beheld a sight that made him chuckle.

There, among reliable horse-drawn vehicles, was a carriage that snorted and wheezed steedlessly along. Frantic drivers reined in their animals lest they run away in panic. Curious pedestrians watched while the begoggled occupant astride the funny contraption steered it with a handle bar.

The rookie policeman was Ernest W. Brown, now major and superintendent of police, who yesterday celebrated his fifth anniversary as chief.

"The thing that made me laugh 41 years ago now has become one of the biggest problems of the department," he grinned yesterday, as he looked across the desk at bouquets and a birthday cake friends had sent him.

"I'm feeling fit and fine," observed the man who has been superintendent for one of the longest periods in the department's history.

The flowers were from the administrative staff, headed by Inspector L. I. H. Edwards, the Police Boys Club and the Detective Bureau, headed by Inspector Bernard Thompson.

The cake, with five candles on its chocolate icing, was the gift of Inspector and Mrs. Edward Kelly, and Mrs. Kelly baked it especially for the superintendent.

"People make too much of an anniversary," boomed Maj. Brown. "It's a day's work, as usual, for me."

When Maj. Brown first joined the force there were few more than 500 men on the roster and the city's population was around 200,000. In 1908 there were 731 men to protect the citizens, and the population had grown accordingly.

Today Maj. Brown commands, in all departments, 1,391 officers and men.

One of the things of which he is particularly proud is that he has served in every department of the force, and was chief of its traffic bureau when the traffic situation was beginning to become acute—from 1925 until 1932. So he understands the problems of the men who work under him.

"I remember in the days before the turn of the century kids used to regard police with suspicion," he recollected.

"You'd come along the street, and there'd be a group of boys. One would yell 'Chese it, a cop!" And they'd scamper like startled rabbits.

"Now it's different. Youngsters know the policeman is their friend, to protect them and keep them out of trouble and be their pal."

Perhaps, although Maj. Brown did not say so, that was why there was a huge bouquet of jonquils from the Police Boys Club, which he founded.

Smoke Fells Girl, One, Woman Burned in Fire

A year-old girl was overcome by smoke and her guardian burned on her arms and hips in a fire at 142 C street northeast yesterday. The baby, Joy Walker, and the woman, Mrs. Patricia Malone, were both treated by doctors from Casualty Hospital ambulance.

Firemen said the fire apparently started in a morris chair.

Black Keeps Mum Two Whole Weeks In Supreme Court

By the Associated Press.

Justice Hugo L. Black completed two weeks of silence yesterday during arguments before the Supreme Court.

All of his eight colleagues asked numerous questions of attorneys who argued before the tribunal.

Black said not a word, except in private conversation with Justice Roberts, who sits at his right.

Lieut. G. W. Smith, Jr., Will Be Buried Today

Lieut. George Washington Smith, jr., 68, United States Naval Reserve, retired, who died at Hollidaysburg, Pa., Wednesday, will be buried with military honors at 11 a. m. today in Arlington Cemetery.

Born in Hollidaysburg, Lieut. Smith enrolled in the Naval Reserve in November, 1917. He was on duty during the World War with the Naval Auxiliary Reserve in New York City, as chief engineer of the U. S. S. Montclair, naval transport. He was relieved from active duty in April, 1919, and in 1921 was tranferred to the retired list of officers of the Naval Reserve Force. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Cornelia C. Smith, of Hollidaysburg.

Missing Boy, 3, Drowned Accidentally, Is Verdict

Jamestown, N. Y., Oct. 22 (AP).—The body of 3-year-old Timothy Heer, who had been missing since Tuesday, was found today lodged against a dock in Lake Chautauqua, about a half mile from his home.

The discovery climaxed a three-day search by police, Federal agents and hundreds of volunteers. Coroner Henry C. Wadsworth, of Jamestown, said he would issue a verdict of accidental drowning. Earlier, kidnaping had been feared.
